The return of a warrant for delivery of immoveable property issued on an application made as against the judgment debtor for the execution of a decree for the possession of such property was that the delivery was complete, and this statement on the return was accepted by the decree-holder. The judgment-debtor had, during the pendency of the suit, granted a lease of a portion of the property. Alleging that he was not aware of the said lease when he accepted the delivery as complete, and that the lessee under the said lease prevented him from peacefully enjoying the property delivered, to him, the decree-holder applied again as against the lessee,

The plaintiffs sued the defendants 210 in number, to recover a war-loan bond for Rs 75,000 or in the alternative for Rs 75,000 with interest thereon. Plaintiffs' case was that the ticket, which won the second prize in the Burma War Loan Sweepstake, a War Loan Bond for Rs 75,000, which had issued in the name of the 1st plaintiff, had been wrongly made over by the Executive Committee of the Sweepstake to the defendants on their false representations that they were purchasers of the ticket in question, and that the defendants were liable jointly and severally to return the bond to the plaintiffs or to pay the money equivalent with interest to date, and that defendants Nos. 1 to 209 had transferred the bond to defendant No. 210. The trial Court dismissed the suit and pending an appeal by the plaintiffs some of the defendants died. Their legal representatives were not brought on record. On a question arising as to whether the appeal had abated, Held that the plaintiffs had a cause of action for the sum sued for against each of the defendants out of the proceeds of the bond which had been distributed and that the death of some of the defendants did not cause the suit to abate. —O. 22, R. 4—Appeal—Death of respondent—Remand by appellate Court—Legality of order.

A suit for cancellation of a sale held under the Putni Regulation was decreed in the court of first instance, upon appeal by the two Zamindars (defendants) that judgment was reversed and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court. They joined as respondents three sets of persons, viz., (1) the auction purchaser, (2) the two Zamindars and (3) the persons alleged to be joint tenants in the putni. During the pendency of the second appeal in the High Court the executor to the estate of one of the Zamindar respondents, died on the 10th June 1916. The plaintiffs, it is now asserted, were not aware of this circumstance and the auction purchaser as also the other Zamindar respondents were equally ignorant of the event. The result was that on the 31st January 1917, when the appeal was taken up for final disposal in this Court, the hearing proceeded on the assumption that all the parties were properly represented on the record. The appeal was heard, the decree of the lower appellate Court was set aside and the case was remanded for reconsideration. When the case went before the District Judge, he was informed on the 20th December 1917 that one of the Zamindar defendants had died during the pendency of the appeal in the High Court and that the representative in interest of that Zamindar was not bound by the order of remand made by the High Court. Thereupon the District Judge held that the appeal could not be reheard by him. Held the order of the High Court was not a nullity by reason of the death of one of the respondents, that the High Court had jurisdiction to hear the appeal and that the District Judge should have reported the case for the orders of the High Court. The plaintiff in an administration suit assigned his interest to the applicant but continued the suit in his own name. The trial Court refused to appoint a Receiver of the property and the plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Pending the appeal, the plaintiff died and the assignee applied to the trial Court to continue the suit but did not apply in the High Court to continue the appeal whereupon the appeal abated. Where a suit is alleged to have been compromised and a document embodying the compromise has been filed in court, the suit does not cease to be pending until the passing of a decree. Consequently it is open to a person alleging himself to be the purchaser of the property before the compromise is entitled to apply under O. 22 R. 10 C. P. Code to be added as a party to the suit. An applicant who invokes the aid of O. 22, R. 10 is not entitled as a matter of right to an order in his favour regardless of delay or laches. The court undoubtedly has a discretion in the matter which must be judicially exercised. Where the result of dismissing the application would be to start a fresh suit between the transferee and the assignor impeaching the compromise as not bona fide, the enquiry might as well be made in the suit itself after adding the transferee as a party. 32 C. 483 : 13 C. O. 23, R. 1, C. P. C., which gives a plaintiff the right to withdraw his suit and abandon part of his claim is inapplicable to the case of a plaintiff-respondent. Assuming that the Appellate Court can in the exercise of its discretion, allow a plaintiff-respondent to withdraw his suit as against the defendant-appellant, it will not be a sound exercise of such discretion to allow the withdrawal in a case in which some of the defendants only have appealed, and they will be aggrieved by the decree of the Court below being allowed to stand as against the other defendants who have not appealed.

Ryots in ryotwari tracts whose lands are irrigated by a Government tank are prejudicially affected by a decree against the Government affecting the water-supply to that tank can appeal against the same though the Government does not choose to appeal against it. In a prior suit the plaintiffs claimed a declaration of their title to a certain War Bond in the hands of one of the defendants. The suit was withdrawn without liberty to bring a fresh suit. Subsequently the plaintiffs brought a suit for the consequential relief of the recovery of the War Bond or its value. Held that the subsequent suit was barred by O. 23, R. 1, C. P. Code. ## O. 23, R. 1—Withdrawal of suit—Order of Court granting leave—Form of.

The procedure under O. 23, R. 1, C. P. Code is that the plaintiff withdraws his suit. The suit is not dismissed at all and the act is the act of the plaintiff, not of the Court. Where there was no application and no withdrawal and the suit was dismissed, the Court remarking that the plaintiffs might sue afresh if they chose Held that there was no grant of leave to withdraw the suit with liberty to sue afresh. ## O. 23, R. 1 (3)—Subject matter if means property in suit—Suit on different cause of action.

The words "subject matter" used in O. 23, R. 1 (3) are not to be identified with the "property" in the suit. They mean the cause of action for a claim. A suit as a different cause of action though relating to the same property is not barred, if the suit is withdrawn without leave of Court. (Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.) PUTTOO KHAN v. AHMAD ZAMAN KHAN. 9 O and A. L. R. 978 : 74 I. C. 56.

O. 23, R. 1 (3)—Withdrawal of suit with liberty to sue afresh—Leave not granted—Fresh suit barred.

In a suit in ejectment by the Zemindar against a tenant, the Zemindar did not raise the plea of illegal subletting by the tenant. The Zemindar withdrew the suit on the ground that 12 years had not been completed by the tenant but leave to institute a fresh suit was not obtained. Held, that a subsequent suit for ejectment on the ground of illegal subletting was barred by O. 23 R. 1 (3) C. P. Code. (Burn, S. M. and Pearson, J. M.) MADHO SINGH v. MT. RANIKUAR. L. R. 4 A 13 (Rev.) : 9 O & A. L. R. 407.

O. 23, R. 3—Adjustment—What is.

An adjustment which is not bona fide and as the basis of which the court was not asked to record satisfaction and pass a decree in accordance therewith does not comply with the provisions of O. 23, R. 3, C.P.C. It is impossible to conceive that it was intended when an application was made to the Court under O. 23 R. 3 C. P. Code that all that the

C. P. CODE (1908), O. 23, R. 3

Court has to do was to satisfy itself that there had been an agreement to refer and an award, and that it is bound to pass a decree in terms of the award, without considering any objection raised by one party or the other that there had been misconduct on the part of the arbitrators, such as in any other case would vitiate an award. (Macleod, C. J. and Crump, J.) THAKORF DAS v. LAI LUBHAI. 25 Bom. L. R. 452 : 75 I. C. 102 : 1923 Bom. 401.

O. 23, R. 3—Compromise in fraud on some of the parties—Not allowed.

The Court will refuse to accept compromise between plaintiff and one defendant if the result of it would be to deprive the other defendants of the fruit of their success. (Dalal, A. J. C.) SAIED ASHFAQ HUSAIN v. SAIED BUNYAD HUSAIN. 9 O. & A. L. R. 415 : 1923 Oudh 252.

O. 23, R. 3—Compromise—Matters outside suit affected—Decree—Form of.

Where a compromise is not within the scope of the suit, no decree could be made to give effect thereto under O. 23, R. 3 Civil Procedure Code. When the compromise has been effected between the parties, the proper course to follow is to recite the compromise in the decree in its entirety, but to pass a decree in accordance therewith only in so far as it relates to the suit. (Mookerjee and Panton, JJ.) JIBAN KRISHNA CHAKRAVARTHI v. RAVESH CHANDRA DAS. 38 C. L. J. 72.

O. 23, R. 3—Compromise—Recording of—Order holding that no compromise is proved.

R. 3 of O. XXIII C. P. Code applies, as its very wording shows, only where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit. The rule does not lay down what the Court is to do if it finds that there has been no adjustment, compromise, or satisfaction. Consequently the order passed by the lower Court in the present case finding that there has been no compromise is not an order under R. 3 of O. XXIII and is not appealable. (Martineau, J.) SHANTI SARUP v. THE FIRM OF JAHANGIR MAL BANSI MAL. 73 I. C. 177.

O. 23, R. 3—Lawful—What is—Compromise affecting puisne mortgagee—Validity.

It is incumbent on a Court to pass a decree in terms of compromise only if the same is lawful i.e. enforceable in law. One test to apply is were the parties competent to enter into the agreement in order to achieve the purpose they had in view.

Where after a mortgage decree to which the puisne mortgagee was a party, the mortgagee and prior mortgagee put in appeal a petition of compromise which increases the amount payable to the latter, a decree cannot be passed in accordance therewith, as it undoubtedly prejudices the rights of the puisne mortgagee and hence cannot be said to be lawful. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) MALCHAND BOID v. OSMAN ALI MANDAL. 38 C. L. J. 272.

O. 23, R. 3—Proof of compromise—Duty of court.

C. P. CODE (1908), O. 23, R. 3.

If is not essential before a court can pass a decree in accordance with a compromise that all the parties to it should assent to it before the court. The court can enquire if an assent had been given elsewhere and if this is proved, it can pass a decree in accordance with the compromise thus assented to. (Scott-Smith, J.)

Partial award—Decree on—Power of Court to pass.

Where the parties to a suit referred to arbitration to three individuals the matters in dispute between them in the suit as well as certain other matters not forming the subject of the suit, two of the arbitrators were absent and thereupon the parties agreed to abide by the decision of the third arbitrator. That arbitrator gave his decision so far as the dispute in suit was concerned and deferred an enquiry into other matters. Owing to the obstruction of the defendants the arbitrator could not pass an award in respect of the matters outside the suit. On an application to the Court to have the award on the subject-matter of the suit recorded under O. 23 R. 3 C. P. C. held, that it was open to the Court to record the decision of the arbitrator, and pass a decree thereon even though the award was partial. There is no rule of law that a partial award is invalid and the question has to be decided on the intention of the parties the matter being a subject of contract between them. Where the plaintiff who was a minor brought a suit without a next-friend and his minority was not apparent on the face of the record but is proved on the trial of an issue in the suit itself the Court ought not to dismiss the suit at once but should allow a reasonable time for a next friend to come on the record and go on with the suit and it is only if no one comes forward that it should reject the plaint. 13 C. 189 relied on. It is no doubt open to the minor on attaining majority to drop the suit as not properly instituted but he is not bound to do so; he could affirm the previous proceeding and continue the suit. The omission to record reasons under O. 32, R. 4, Cl.

C. P. CODE (1908), O. 32, R. 3.

2 for the appointment of a court guardian is only an irregularity and will not by itself vitiate the decree if the minor is in fact properly represented by a guardian appointed by Court. Where however the appointment of a Court guardian is secured by fraud and by false statements and concealment of material particulars the minor is not bound by the decree passed in the suit or by the sale held in execution of the decree 37 A. 179 followed. Where a minor files a plaint without a next friend and though the defendant makes no application to have it taken off the file, the court rejects the plaint, the procedure is improper, as it ought to grant time to have a proper next friend brought on record (Scott-Smith and Eforde, JJ.) *ALI AHMAD v. —O. 32, Rr. 3, 4, and 11—Guardian ad litem—Appointment of—Omission to consult minors' wishes—Effect of.

Though the mother of a minor defendant is the person who should be appointed his guardian ad litem in the absence of the father still a decree passed against the minor represented by some other person as guardian ad litem is not a nullity. Though the Court should in every case consult the wishes of a minor before appointing any person as guardian ad litem in the suit, there is nothing in the C. P. C. which requires it to do so in a case coming within O. 32, R. 11 C.P.C. O. 32, R. 3 Cl. 4 applies only to cases where an application is made for the appointment of a guardian in the name of or on behalf of the minor or the plaintiff. O. 32, R. 11 empowers the Court to appoint any guardian where the guardian for the suit retires, dies or is removed by the Court pending the suit, and there is nothing which requires the Court to give notice to the minors before making the order under this rule. —O. 32, R. 3—Guardian-ad-litem—Father acting as such—No formal appointment—Effect.

Where a father acted as the guardian-ad-litem of his minor son, the fact that there was no formal order of court appointing him will not vitiate the proceedings, if the minor was in no way prejudiced thereby (Kanhaya Lal, J. C.) DARSHAN SINGH v. RATAN LAL, 9 O. & A. L. R. 468 : 74 I. C. 821.

—O. 32, R. 3—Guardian ad litem—Presumption—Absence of formal order of appointment—Compromise—Sanction of Court.

Where the court by its action had given its sanction to the appearance of a person as a guardian, the absence of a formal order of appointment is not necessarily fatal to the proceedings.

C. P. CODE (1908), O. 32, R. 3.

Even an omission to serve the minors concerned or their mother personally was treated as mere irregularities covered by section 578 of the old Code of Civil Procedure and not errors fatal to the suit.

The presumption is that the proceedings of the Court had been carried out regularly and in accordance with the law and this presumption is found stronger when it is found that an application and an affidavit such as is filed in connection with the appointment of a person as guardian ad litem of a minor was on the record and that the guardian had subsequently appeared and filed a compromise on behalf of the minor to which the Court had accorded its sanction (*Kanhaya Lal, J. ———O. 32, R. 3 (4)—Absence of notice to minor—Effect.

In the absence of proof of fraud or collusion, the mere fact that notice of appointment of a guardian ad litem was not issued to the minor, does not entitle him to treat the proceedings as a nullity. ———O. 32, Rr. 3 and 4—Minor—Consent of guardian not obtained—Ex parte decree—Suit to set aside.

A minor is not a party to the suit, unless he is represented in the record of the suit by a guardian competent to act as such. Where the record of the suit itself shows that the minor is wholly unrepresented or that he is represented by a guardian disqualified from acting as such guardian under express provision of the Statute the result is that the minor is not a party to the suit and a judgment rendered against the minor is without jurisdiction and is null and void. But where he is properly a party to the suit and he is properly a party if he is represented on the record by a guardian not disqualified from acting, the jurisdiction of the Court to try and determine the case against the minor is complete, and such jurisdiction will not be ousted even if the Court did not follow the appropriate procedure for the appointment of the guardian. It is the court that must decide the question of jurisdiction and where the record, on the face of it, shows that the minor was properly a party to the suit, the judgment rendered in such a suit will not be declared a nullity in a collateral proceeding brought to impeach its validity, though it may be set aside if it be shown that the defect or the irregularity in the proceedings affected the merits of the case between the parties. 30 C. 1021 followed 15 C. L. J. 446 : 25 C. W. N. 781 dissented. 32 C. 296 distinguished. The contravention of the provisions of O. 32, R. 4 Cl. 3 C. P. Code does not deprive the Court of its jurisdiction to decide the case. The Court has no jurisdiction to render judgment against one who is not a party to the suit though it has jurisdiction to render judgment against one who is a party to a suit but who has not been brought before it by reason of the failure on the part of the Court to follow the particular procedure laid down in the Code. The one affects the existence of the jurisdiction of the Court, the other affects the exercise of it (Das and Adamu, JJ) PANDE SATDEO NARAIN v. RAMAYAN TEWARI, 4 Pat. L. ———O. 32, Rr. 3 and 7—Minor—Reference to arbitration—Sanction of Court—Absence of—Effect of—Minor substantially represented in proceedings by guardian—Award not a nullity.

The mere fact that leave of the Court has not been obtained for a reference to arbitration on behalf of a minor will not vitiate the reference and the award where the interests of the minor have in no way been prejudiced. If a minor is substantially represented by a guardian ad litem an appointment by the Court under O. 32, R. 3 can be assumed from the action of the Court in accepting the pleas of the major defendant on behalf of the minors also. In the case of a joint Hindu family, the manager can act on behalf of the minors without specific appointment as guardian in the interests of the whole of the family including the minors and the Court must decide whether or not he was acting in the interests of the minor. 43 C. 290 : 30 C. 1021, 36 A. 69 : 28 A. 25 referred to. ———O. 32, Rr. 3 (4) and 4 (4)—Minor defendants—Representation in suit—Appointment of officer of Court as guardian ad litem—Omission to adduce evidence when amounts to negligence.

The father of certain minor defendants in a suit refused to be their guardian ad litem and there upon the Head Clerk of the Court was appointed guardian. The plaintiff was a stranger who was not aware of the existence of any other relatives of the minors. There was no affidavit by him that there was no other person fit and willing to act as guardian of the minors. There was also no distinct notice to the father of the minors of the appointment of an officer of the Court as guardian ad litem but the father himself did not adduce any evidence and the suit was decreed. Subsequently the minors sued to set aside the decree on the grounds that they were not validly represented in the prior suit and that their guardian ad litem was grossly negligent in the conduct of the case. Held that the defects, if any, in the appointment of the guardian did not vitiate the decree. 32 A. 287 : 20 M. L. J. 591 (P.C.), 31 A. 572 : 19 M. L. J. 631 (P. C.) referred to.

Held further, that in the absence of proof that the guardian ad litem could have adduced any useful evidence or was aware of such evidence being available, his omission to let in evidence in the prior suit did not constitute negligence or fraud. No person can be appointed a guardian ad litem of an infant without his consent. In the present case the mother of the infants was appointed without her consent. She never entered appearance and never defended the suit on behalf of the minors without a formal order for appointment. Held that in the events which had happened, it was plain that the infants were not represented at all and they were in no sense parties to that litigation. Consequently they were not affected by the decree.

A court is bound to appoint the certificated guardian as the guardian-ad-litem, unless it considers otherwise for special reasons to be recorded. Where the guardian however, objects, the court must appoint some other person.

There is nothing however in O. 32, R. 4 Cl. (3) which requires the court to obtain the express consent of the guardian to act before appointing him in that capacity, and where the guardian so appointed is a certificated guardian, whom the court was bound to appoint, consent may be properly presumed when he makes no objection.

Where the interests of a minor have not been prejudiced, any defect in the procedure for the appointment of his guardian is not fatal. (Miller C. J. Foster, J.) THAKUR TEJESHWAR DUTT v. LAKHAN PRASAD SINGH.

In order to attract the provisions of O. 32, R. 7 C. P. Code it is enough to show that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise and that the leave of the Court was obtained on petition or in some way not open to doubt. No particular formula is necessary to be used by the Court in order to grant the leave and when it is shown that an application was made by the guardian to the Court asking for leave to enter into the compromise and the Court makes a note of that application and passes a decree in terms of that compromise, it must be held that the leave of the Court was expressly recorded within the meaning of O. 32 R. 7 C. P. Code 28 A. 585 Ref. Even if the leave of the Court is not expressly recorded that would not make the decree a nullity. It would only make the decree voidable at the option of the minor and so long as it is not avoided in a proper proceeding, no objection can be taken in the execution proceedings as regards the validity thereof. A Hindu widow applied for leave to sue in forma pauperis for the recovery of maintenance and her stridhanam jewels and cash withheld by defendant. The defendant admitted liability for the jewels and cash and produced them in court. It was found that the jewels and cash were more than sufficient to pay the Court-fee and the Court dispaupered her. Held on revision, that the order of the Court was improper and it could not be said that owing to the defendant's offer the plaintiff was possessed of sufficient means to pay the prescribed Court fee. In a suit where no fee is prescribed by law for the plaintiff, no admission or even payment into Court by the defendant can be taken into consideration. The time when the application is made to institute a suit as a pauper is the point of time which the Court has to consider when the application comes to be dealt with, and the subject matter of the suit is in no case at the disposal of the applicant for payment of fees 10 B. 207 diss. 34 638 1011 (Macleod, C. Clause (b) of rule 9 of O. 33, C.P. Code empowers the Court to dispauper a plaintiff and to withdraw the original order allowing her to sue as a pauper when, it appears that her means are such that she ought not to continue to sue as a pauper. The word "means" in this clause is to be interpreted with the help of the definition of pauper referred to above. To apply clause (b) of R. 9 the Court could dispauper her when her means are such as to enable her to pay the Court-fee of Rs. 3,000 upon the plaint in the case.

Where the plaintiff who had sued in forma pauperis was allowed an interim maintenance of Rs. 200 a month and arrears of maintenance from time to time, aggregating to 5,000 rupees but at no time was she paid a sum of Rs. 3,000 in a lump which would be the amount required for paying court-fee on the plaint. Held that the plaintiff should not be dispaupered. The mere fact that the plaintiff was appearing through eminent counsel would not be sufficient to dispauper the plaintiff. (Jwala Prasad and Ross,

Notice to the judgment-debtor is not prescribed by law before making a decree final on the application of the decree holder but in practice it is given on the principle that it is just and proper to hear the opposite party. But the principle of audi alteram partem does not require a notice of the second application where notice of the first application was duly served and the mortgagor failed to appear to show cause on the day fixed for the hearing. It may reasonably be interdicted in such a case that he had nothing to say and there was nothing for the Court to hear from him. A second notice under such circumstances was not required, and the fact that the second notice was not duly served is not a ground for setting aside the ex parte final decree. (Kotwal A. J. C.) If it merely directs that an account should be taken of what would be due to the mortgagee for the principal and interest due on the mortgage, as was originally done by the learned Subordinate Judge here, its order would be nothing more than an interlocutory order, to be followed by the making up of such an account, till which the preparation of the preliminary decree should be postponed. In a suit for sale on a mortgage instead of the usual mortgage decree a compromise decree was passed which provided that the judgment debtor should pay the decretal amount in certain instalments, and if he should fail in the payment of three consecutive instalments, then execution for the whole amount should issue against the other property of the judgment debtor and in the event of the amount not being realised in that manner, against the mortgaged properties. Held that the decree itself ordered, in the event of default and in the event of the other properties of the judgment debtor proving insufficient, a sale of the mortgaged property and it was not necessary for the decreeholders to bring a suit for the sale of the property merely because the other remedy given under the decree has proved infructuous.
 The decree in the case was something more than a decree for the payment of the money in satis-

—O. 38, R. 5 and 6 and O. 43, R. 1 Clause (g) Attachment before judgment—Conditional order on failure to give security—Security furnishing—Appeal from order—Letters Patent Cl. 15.

O. 38, R. 6 of the C. P. C. empowers the Court in the events stated to direct the attachment of the defendant's property. The power given by O. 38, R. 5 to make an alternative order directing the defendant within a specified time to furnish security or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security carried with it as an incident the power, after hearing the defendant, to confirm the order that security be furnished. Under its general powers the Court may then, if necessary, extend the time for the furnishing of the security. Where the defendant fails to show cause why he should not furnish security, the Court may, under R. 5, direct finally that security be furnished or in the alternative, under R. 6 direct the attachment of the defendant's property. The power of attachment also exists if the required security is not furnished. The provisions of the C. P. C. do not contemplate an appeal from an order directing the defendant to furnish security. An appeal lies from an order of attachment made under R. 6. Where an order for attachment is made on failure of the defendant to furnish security and the defendant in fact furnishes such security, there is no operative order of attachment and the remainder of the order is merely an order for the furnishing of security not appealable either under the C. P. C. or as a judgment under the Letters Patent. (Sanlerson, C. J. and Richardson, J.) Haji Mohamuddin and Co. v. THE EASTERN JAPAN TRADING CO.

—O. 38, R. 5—Considerations guiding the applicability of sale.

The power given under the C. P. Code to attach before judgment should be exercised only on clear proof of the existence of the mischief aimed at. The court must be satisfied not only that the defendant is about to dispose of his property or to remove it from the jurisdiction of the court, but also that his object in so doing is to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him. If the court accepts the view that defendant has no intention of alienating the property, there is no power to order attachment (Miller, C. J. and Kulwant Sahay, J.) CHANDRIKA PRASHAD SINGH v. HIRA LAL.

C. P. CODE (1908), O. 39, R. 1.

—O. 39, R. 1—Injunction—Defendant residing outside jurisdiction—Acts within jurisdiction Interference with acts of religion.

No Court would grant an injunction against persons residing outside its jurisdiction and not subject to its jurisdiction in cases where they would have no means of enforcing the order.

But where the acts complained of are acts taking place within the court's jurisdiction and a party although a resident outside the court's jurisdiction appears in the suit and submits personally to the jurisdiction of the Court (not under protest or to question the court's jurisdiction) the Court has power to grant an injunction against him. Before granting a temporary injunction the Court must be satisfied in the first instance that the plaintiff applicant has a fair question to raise as to the existence of the right alleged, and further that the defendants have infringed or are threatening an infringement of these rights.

No person is entitled to enforce his religious views upon another or to restrain that other from committing any lawful act or making any lawful use of his property, merely because it would not fit in with the tenets of his particular religion. The right to worship is a right in aliena solo, and so long as it is not interfered with, the owner can do what he would like with his own property. (*Miller, C. On an application for a temporary injunction to restrain a sale in execution of a decree, pending a suit, the applicant must show a prima facie case. —O. 39 R. 2—Injunction—Candidate for election—Procedure.

A temporary injunction can only be issued to the defendant and not to any other person. A suit for a declaration that a certain person is not eligible to stand as a candidate, cannot be said to be a suit for restraining him from committing an injury of any kind. Where a person has been declared by competent authority to be eligible for standing as a candidate at the election, and as the election itself could not be stopped, it would not be right to restrain him from taking part in it. To restrain the defendant in such a case would be tantamount to granting the plaintiff the relief sought in his suit and might deprive the defendant of a right to which he is really entitled. This would be a grave injustice to him for which he could not be adequately compensated afterwards. (Scott-Smith, J.) THE ELECTION OFFICER, GUJRAT v. ABDUL GHANI, ETC. 1923 Lah. 47.

S. 56 which occurs in the chapter relating to perpetual injunctions has no application to temporary injunctions which are, by the express words of section 53 left to be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure.

A Sub-Judge could issue a temporary injunction staying the execution of a decree proceeding in a Munsif's Court. The C. P. Where there are a large number of outstandings due to the estate of the deceased person, some of which are liable to be lost owing to the efflux of time, and the heir of the deceased is a lady and there is a bona fide dispute between the parties the court is justified in appointing a receiver to recover the outstandings and to bring the proceeds into Court. ## C. P. CODE (1908) O. 40, R. 1.

— O. 40, R. 1—Just and convenient—Meaning of—Principles governing appointment—Merits of case—Appeal—Parties.

The appointment of a Receiver is a matter of judicial discretion and courts should proceed cautiously viewing all the circumstances of the case. The words "just and convenient" mean that the Court should appoint a Receiver for the protection of property or prevention of injury according to legal principles and not because it thinks it convenient to do so. They confer no arbitrary and non-regulated discretion on the court.

The Receiver appointed in an action should as a general rule be a disinterested person, but it is competent to the court upon the consent of parties and in a proper case, without such consent to appoint a person mixed up in the subject matter of the litigation, if it will be beneficial to the estate.

In an appeal against an order refusing to appoint a receiver, the only necessary parties are those who are entitled to present possession.

The order on an application under O. 40, R. 1 should not express an opinion on the merits of the case. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ) BHUPENDRA NATH MUKHERJEE v. MANOHAR MUKHERJEE. 23 C. W. N. 86.

— O. 40, R. 1—Mahant—Disputes regarding title—Convenience.

Where disputes arose between two persons as to who was entitled to be mahant and there was something to be said regarding the claim of each and under the circumstances putting one of them into possession would give him a great advantage over the other, a proper case was made out for appointing a receiver. (Scott Smith, J.) MANOHAR DAS v. KALYAN DAS. 69 I. C. 361.

— O. 40, R. 1—Memorandum of appeal—Contents of.

A memorandum of appeal should raise every plea and each issue specifically. A mere statement that the findings on all issues are attacked is insufficient. (Daniel, J. C.) BANKE LAL v. KANHAIYA LAL. 9 O. L. J. 637 : 1923 Oudh 113.

— O. 40 R. 1—Partition suit—Appointment—Receiver—Appeal.

The Court should not appoint a Receiver, merely because of strained relations, except by consent and upon proof by the plaintiff that prima facie he has a very excellent chance of succeeding in establishing the case made out in the plaint and that the property in possession of defendants the opposite party, was in danger of being wasted especially where one of the defendants is presumably manager. In any case the facts, that a mere declaration is sought for the land, that the Civil Court cannot divide it, that the plaintiffs appear from the materials on the record to be out of possession and that the Court has no jurisdiction over the apportionment of the produce make the order of the appointment of a Receiver for the agricultural lands still less justifiable than that regarding the other property.

An order of a Court that a Receiver should be appointed in a case, without appointing any body by name as receiver, and adjourning the case to a later date for so appointing one is an order

The mere fact that a Mahomedan widow is entitled to a lien for dower on her husband's estate is no ground for refusing the appointment of a receiver summarily without enquiry into the merits of the application. There is nothing in O. 40, R. 1 C. P. Code to prevent the appointment of a receiver in such a case. The mere fact that a receiver has not been appointed at a prior stage of the suit is no ground for re using the application at a later stage, when fresh grounds are made out. (*Batten, J. The Registrar of the High Court rejected the application without notice to the appellant's pleader on 20-2-23. The appellant's pleader got knowledge of the order on 1-3-23 and immediately applied for and obtained an interim Stay order from a Bench of the High Court on 6-3-23. In the meantime the order of the Registrar had been communicated to the court below which passed an ex parte order for delivery of possession on 28-2-23 and possession was actually delivered on 5-3-23. Held that under the circumstances the High Court was entitled to ignore the said delivery of possession and restore the status quo ante on the judgment-debtor furnishing security (Jwala Prasad and Ross, JJ.) KARSHAN BHABAN CHATALIA v. —O. 41, R. 10—Appeal under the Letters Patent—Power to demand security for costs—Bombay High Court Rules 1921, R. 736.

The High Court has power on an appeal under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent to demand security for costs from the appellant in addition to the deposit of Rs. 500 under Rule 736 of the Bombay High Court Rules. But the power to demand security for the costs of an appeal must in any event be exercised according to well known principles. The mere fact that the appellant may lose and may not pay the costs of the appeal is not a sufficient ground for demanding security. There must be some evidence at least of facts which cast doubts on the honesty and bona fides of the appellant, such as obstruction to the execution of the decree in the lower Court, or the fact that the appellant is not the real litigant, or if in any way it can be shown that the application is vexatious. —O 41, R. 10—Security for costs—Discretion of Court—Interference on appeal.

Under O. 41 R. 10, C. P. Code, the appellate Court may in its discretion demand from the appellant security for the costs of the appeal or of the original suit or of both. The poverty of the defendant is no ground for depriving him of his right to appeal. As a general rule a Court is both to prevent an appellant from pursuing the remedy allowed to him by law merely on the ground of poverty. But each case must stand on its own facts, and there may be cases in which a party should be directed to give security, at any rate for the costs of the appeal, before he is allowed to go further. —O. 41, R. 10—Security for costs when ordered—Poverty of appellant.

Poverty of the appellant by itself is not a sufficient ground for an order directing a security to be given. But no case has gone to the length of saying that mere want of means on the part of the appellant is a sufficient ground for dispensing with security. The true rule is that poverty of an appellant, standing by itself and without reference to the general facts of the case under appeal, ought not to be considered sufficient to warrant his being required to furnish security for costs 8 A. 203 and other cases cited (Venkat-subba Rao, J.) *KONAMMAL v. The appellate court instead of dismissing the appeal for default under O. 41, R. 17 C. P. (2) that the appellate court has no power to go into the merits of the case and to dismiss the appeal on the merits.

The power of the appellate court to direct a remand is wider than that indicated in O. 41, R. 23. The Appellate Court has inherent power to direct a remand where such remand is needed in the ends of justice. An Order of remand may be valid even though it is not covered by O. 41, R. 23. Assuming for a moment that an order made in the exercise of the inherent powers of High Court has been improperly made; that is made under circumstances which do not justify it. Such an order is not without jurisdiction. It is an order made with jurisdiction though the jurisdiction may have been erroneously exercised. A remand Order made on second appeal is, unless a review of it be obtained within the prescribed time a conclusive determination of the points of law involved in it; and the correctness of the Law laid down upon a remand cannot be questioned on a subsequent second appeal; nor is the fact of the court's adopting a different view of the law after an order has been made in general a good ground for allowing a review of such order after the time for a review has elapsed. The policy of the legislature as indicated in the C. P. Code of 1908 is in favour of finality of orders of remand. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) BISAI NATH v. TARA NATH DEB. 72 I. In a suit for partition the defendants resisted the claim of the plaintiffs in the Primary Court on the allegation that the land had been previously partitioned by metes and bounds and that they and their predecessors had long been in separation. The trial Court held in favour of the defendants and dismissed the suit. Upon appeal the plaintiffs asked for permission to adduce in evidence any entry in the record of rights which had been finally published after the date of the decree of the Trial Court. The lower Appellate Court acceded to the request of the plaintiff and set aside the decree of the Court of first instance and directed a re-trial of the suit with reference to the entry in the record of rights and such other evidence as might be adduced by both the litigants. Against this order for re-trial the defendants preferred an appeal to the High Court. Held (1) that the order of remand was made not under the provisions of O. 41, R. 23, C. P. An appellate Court has power to remand a case under O. 41 R. 23 C. P. Code only when the lower court has disposed of it on a preliminary point. No order of remand can be regarded as made under O. 41 R. 23, C. P. Code unless the case has been disposed of without entering into the full merits by reason of a decision on law or fact which has prevented the case being tried to the end 19 A. L. J. 971 ; 20 A. L. J. 321 Ref. An appellate Court has powers of remand apart from the power conferred by O. 41 R. 23. Such powers are conferred by S. 107 and are also implied by the provisions of S. 100 Sub S. (2) and S. 105 (1) of the C. P. Code. 30 M. 54 Ref. Where an order of remand is made under its inherent powers by an appellate court, there is appeal from the order but the High Court can interfere in revision with the order. (*Ashworth, J. There can be no appeal from an order of remand under O. 41, R. 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure where the question involved is one of custom. As the appellant would have a right of second appeal from the decree of the Appellate Court only if he were to obtain a certificate under sub S. 3 of S. 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, it could not be said definitely that an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court. The question of custom can be agitated in second appeal from the final decree if the certificate is obtained. (Scott Smith and Fforde, JJ.) MT. CHANDO v. MIRAN BAKSH.

——— O. 41, Rr. 25 and 26—Appellate Court—Issues sent to Lower Court—Findings—No objections—Acceptance by Appellate Court.

The lower Appellate Court referred certain issues for trial to the court of first instance. After the findings which were against the defendant had been received the defendant failed to prefer objections to the findings within the ten days time allowed. The lower Appellate Court thereupon without considering the finding on the merits decided the appeal, considering those findings to be final and dismissed the appeal. The defendant preferred a second appeal urging that the action of the District Judge was not warranted by law, and that he ought to have himself considered whether the findings were good or bad findings and should have decided the case. Held that the Lower Appellate Court ought to have itself considered the correctness or otherwise of the findings returned by the trial Court before deciding the appeal. 6 A. 391 referred to. case ultimately comes to disregard the findings on those issues and equally to form its own opinion on the whole case irrespective of anything that is said in the remand order. An order remanding issues under O. 41 R. 25 is not a final order. No appeal lies against it. The responsibility for the decree ultimately passed is entirely that of the Court before which the case comes after remand. It is quite otherwise with an order of remand passed under O. 41 R. 23 for this is an order which does finally determine subject to any right of appeal the issues which it decides (Daniels J.) *GOPAL NATH SHUKUL v. —O. 41, Rr. 25 and 26—Scope of—Remand—Calling for findings—Distinction.

It cannot as a matter of principle be affirmed broadly that when an order has been made under O. 41, R. 25 the court called upon to determine the appeal finally under O. 41, R. 26 is competent to treat the order as erroneously made. When an order has been made under O. 41, R. 25, the appeal remains pending and undisposed of on the file of the court. The order, however, whether rightly or wrongly made, is an order made with jurisdiction its validity may be attacked on review but till it has been set aside in an appropriate proceeding, it must be treated as an interlocutory one which is operative in law. If the order had been made under O. 41, R. 23 its propriety would not have been challenged in an appeal against the final decree made after remand. The same principle is applicable to order under O. 41, R. 25 subject to the reservation that as the appeal remains pending, the ultimate decision must be based upon a consideration of all the findings before and after the order under O. 41, R. 25. This, indeed, is plain from the language used by the legislature in O. 41, R. 26. The evidence and findings become part of the record in the suit, and when the Court proceeds to determine the appeal such determination must be based upon all the materials on the record, these include whatever was part of the record as it stood before the order under O. 41, R. 25 was made, as also what has been added in the Court of appeal, namely, the order together with the evidence taken pursuant thereto and the reasoned findings thereon. No portion of the record can be disregarded and neither the order nor the materials placed on the record on the basis thereof can be rejected as if brought in without lawful authority. —O. 41, R. 27—Additional evidence—Admission of, on appeal—Considerations governing.

A party cannot claim admission of additional evidence oral or documentary, as a matter of right. O. 41, R. 27, C. P. Code gives a discretion of the court of appeal to allow the production of such evidence and lays down definite limits within which additional evidence may be produced in an appellate court. The words "any other substantial cause" mean a causa ejusdem generis to the grounds already mentioned in O. 41, R. 27 C. P. Code or in other words as meaning a case at least analogous to those specified previously. Further the appellate court has a discretion in the matter and when it has exercised its discretion in one way it is not open to a court of second appeal to interfere with that discretion. 42 M. 737 Rel. —O. 41, R. 27 and O. 47, R. 1—Additional evidence—Admission of—Discovery of evidence on appeal—Review.

Even where a party satisfies the Court that since the filing of the appeal he has discovered further evidence that was not known or available to him and could not have been discovered with due diligence during the pendency of the appeal even up to the date of the judgment, that is no sufficient cause for an appellate Court to admit that evidence under O. 41, R. 27 C. O. 45, R. 4 C.P.C., allows consolidation but only to make good a defect of pecuniary valuation and not a defect of any other kind. The rule speaks only of the consolidation of different suits decided by the same judgment but the principle applies where the interests of the two parties are so entirely separate that they are practically defendants in two different suits decided by one judgment. The grounds on which such an application may be made are specifically set forth in R. 1. Where an appeal has been preferred, a review is out of the question and the party's proper course is to apply to the appellate Court, which is in possession of the cases to admit the additional evidence either under the general principles of law or under the specific provisions of R. 27, which lays down that the appellate Court may for any other substantial cause (viz., other than those particularly specified) allow such evidence or documents to be produced or witnesses to be examined. The granting of an application for review merely amounts to a decision to re-hear the case in which the decree or order (in respect of which a review is claimed) was passed. The judge nearing the review is not entitled to do anything in the first stage beyond passing an order granting the review and giving his reasons for so doing. If the review is granted the judge who has allowed the review becomes vested with jurisdiction to pass any order which the original judge could have passed. It may be sufficient for him merely to alter the order of the original judge or it may be necessary for him to take some intermediate step such as an order in remand or referring an issue. —O. 47, R. 8 and 11—Review—Grant of—Appeal—Effect on original decree.

A review commences ordinarily with an ex parte application. The court then may either reject the application at once or may grant a rule calling on the other side to show cause why the review should not be granted. In the second stage, the rule may either be admitted or rejected and it is obvious that the nearing of this rule may involve to some extent an investigation into the merits. If the rule is discharged, then the case ends. If on the other hand, the rule is made absolute, then the third stage is reached, the case is reheard on the merits and may result in a repetition of the former decree or in some variation of it. Though, in one respect, the result is the same whether the rule be discharged or on the re-hearing the original decree be repeated, in law there is a material difference, for in the latter case, the whole matter having been re-opened, there is a fresh decree; in the former case, the parties are relegated to and still rest on the old decree. Consequently the order appropriate to a discharge of the rule is the rejection of the application, an order so made terminates the second stage of the proceedings, and there is no third stage for the rehearing of the case. When the application for a review is granted, the decree previously made is vacated, with the consequence that an appeal preferred against that decree can no longer be prosecuted. But the parties can appeal from the final decree passed on review. Cases reviewed

Matters in dispute between the parties in a pending suit were by their consent, referred by Court to two arbitrators and the order of reference provided that the arbitrators should make their award within 6 months from the date on which an office copy of the said order should be served on them or within such further time as they might allow themselves by endorsement on the said office copy. The arbitrators enlarged the time for making their award under the order from time to time and after a large number of sittings extending over a period of 2 years they adjourned the hearing sine die. On an application by the plaintiff to the Court for superseding the reference and for proceeding with the trial of the suit held that the order of the Court giving unlimited authority to the arbitrators to extend the time was bad and of no effect and that under the mandatory provisions of Sch. II Cl. 3, C. P. Code it was the Court that had to fix the time and enlarge it. Consequently it was open to the plaintiff to apply to the Court to supersede the reference and proceed with the trial of suit. 30 A. 169; 36 A. 354 followed, 19 C. W. N. 165 dissented. In a suit for partition all the parties excepting one of the plaintiffs and one of the defendants agreed to refer the litigation to arbitration. An award was given and the plaintiff who was a party to the arbitration preferred objections to the award. The Court however passed a decree in terms of the award. Held that there was no appeal from the decree on the award. 39 A. 69 followed (Rafique and Lindsay, JJ.) HARI SHANKER v. RAM PYARI, 45 A. 441.

—Sch. II, para. 16—Arbitration—Award—objection to, to be investigated—Jurisdiction—Revision.

A dispute was referred to arbitration in connection with a pending suit, an award was made, and a decree was passed in accordance with the award under para 16 of the second schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Where the Court has considered the objections to the award on the merits and come to what the applicant contends is a wrong decision as to whether there had been an irregularity on the part of the arbitrator, it is clear that the case will not come within the provisions of S. 115 and that no revision will lie.

It was the clear intention of the legislature that objections to the award on the ground of invalidity from any cause whatever should be decided by the Court which had made the order of reference and by no other Court (Daniels, A. J. C.) SHEO PALTAN v. SUKHDEO SINGH, 26 O. C. 107.

74 I. C. 401 : 1923 Oudh 235

—Sch. II, para 16—Award—Oral award—Effect of—Bar to fresh suit.

In law, an oral award is good and binding on the parties to the reference. Where the actual award is an oral award the drawing up of a formal award is purely a ministerial act to give effect to the previously completed judicial act. If the parties desire to have the award made a decree of the Court it may be necessary for them to get the award reduced to writing to be filed in Court; but so far as the effect of the award on a subsequent suit dealing with the subject matter of the award is concerned, the award will bar the suit whether it be oral or whether it be in writing. is by its decision and by its decision alone that the rights of the parties are settled. As soon as the suit is instituted the arbitrators lose their authority. If the defendant still desires that the controversy should be decided by arbitration, he must endeavour to obtain a stay of the suit by an appropriate application under para. 18. If the application is refused by the Court in the exercise of its discretion, the remedy by arbitration ceases to be available. If the suit is stayed, two possible contingencies may require consideration. If the arbitrators have not yet made an award they are free to bring their proceedings to a termination and make an award in accordance with law. If on the other hand the arbitrators have made an award after the institution of the suit, the award cannot be pleaded as an effective bar to the suit. The award so made should be brought up before the Court under para 20 : the Court will refuse to enforce it under para. 21 read with para. 14 (c), and as the award will thus stand cancelled because made without jurisdiction the arbitrators will be left free thereafter to resume their proceedings on the basis of the original reference. If this view were not adopted, the result would follow that a party to a submission who had appeared throughout and had taken his chance before the arbitrators might at the very last moment, when the award, possibly an adverse award, was about to be made and when there would be no time left for his opponent to obtain a stay order, institute a suit and thereby render infructuous the entire proceedings. Where the defendant did not take recourse to the proper procedure namely, to apply for stay of the suit, cancellation of the award as made without jurisdiction and thereafter remission of the matter to the arbitrators, even if his failure was possibly attributable to ignorance of the law. Held, the agreement to refer to arbitration not having provided for reconstitution of the committee of arbitrators, if one of them should die, the award must be rejected as made without jurisdiction, and the suit should be tried on the merits by the Court. A deed of transfer of shares in a company not complying with the formalities prescribed by the Indian Companies Act and the Articles of Association of the Company, is invalid as against a person, who has purchased the shares in a sale in execution held under the provisions of the C. P. Code. When the law prescribes a mode of transfer for shares in a limited company, compliance with that mode is necessary before property can pass 'so as to confer title on the transferee as against third persons. A transfer of shares in a company otherwise than as is provided by the Indian Companies Act and the Articles of Association, may confer a right in equity on the transferee to compel the vendor to execute a proper conveyance and the transaction evidenced by transfer can be regarded as an agreement to convey capable of being perfected into an absolute conveyance by compliance with the prescribed formalities. Until then, the transfer is inchoate and the transferee cannot claim priority over a court auction purchaser of the shares. (1902) 2 K. B. 427 and 40 Mad. 1134 foll, 31 Bom. 76 not foll.

respect of matters covered by S. 12. The memorandum of association of a company formed for the purpose of carrying on a banking business had a clause appointing a particular person as agent, principal and secretary to the bank and he was given powers to enter into any agreement contract or transaction with other banks or traders. Subsequently by a special resolution, the company purported to alter the clause by removing the agent and applied for confirmation of the special resolution under S. 12 of the Companies Act. Held that the court should not confirm the resolution. Firstly, the clause was not one relating to the objects of the Company alterable under S. 12 (1) (a) of the Companies Act as one relating to a detail of management, but was a condition under S. 10 of the Act. Secondly even if the clause related to the object of the Company, the Court had a discretion in confirming it and the court did not think it beneficial to the interests of the shareholders to confirm the resolution (*Schwabe, C. Where under a compromise decree the respondent undertook to deliver possession of certain lands as they then existed together with the rents and profits which had accrued till then, the respondent must be held to hold the property thereafter in a fiduciary capacity and for the purpose of handing over the property to the appellant. Where therefore the respondent cut down certain trees on the land and appropriated them to his own use then he was acting in breach of the obligation he was under by reason of the decree and was in fact committing a breach of trust. —Construction.

The parties who were partners in a flourishing business fell out and their differences were settled by a compromise decree.

The clause which determined the respective liabilities of the parties to contribute towards the sum to be paid by party No. 1, appellants, on account of taxes ran as follows—

“As to the amount of Income Tax, Excess Profits Tax and super-tax for 1919-20 to be paid by Bakhsh Elahi and Co. and Karam Elahi Muhammad Shafi, after the tax has been deposited in Government Treasury, the liability will be shared by party No. 1 and party No. 2 among themselves in proportion to their shares for 3/4th of a year or 9 months.” Party No. 1 paid in November 1920 a sum of Rs. 1,22,500 as Excess Profits Tax for the year 1918-19; and claimed that party No. 2 respondent should pay their share of this amount for 9 months.

Held the liability of the respondents was circumscribed by the terms of agreement and that paragraph as it stands does not make them liable for payment of any portion of the Excess Profits Tax for 1918-19. The onus was on the appellants to prove that respondents were liable. (Shadi Lal, C. J. and Abdul Qadir, J.) HAJI MAHOMMED TAQI v HAJI ABDUL RAHMAN.

Contempt of Court — Bombay High Court — Criticism in newspaper.

Where the articles as a whole would leave on the mind of an ordinary reader the clear impression that injustice had been deliberately done on political grounds to some of the accused who were apparently, innocent, in other words, it attributes judicial dishonesty to the Judges. Held, such an article constitutes a contempt of Court. The court has to consider the natural and probable effect of the article and not only the intention of the editor. Any unfair criticism of Courts or Judges constitutes such an interference with the administration of justice as should be punished. The tendency of such criticism is to undermine the dignity of the Court and in the end to embarrass the administration of justice.

In a contract for the sale of indigo, under which plaintiff agreed to pay a certain sum of money and the defendant a certain quantity of indigo as per sample given, if the plaintiff sues for damages for breach of contract, he must first show that on the due date, he was ready and willing to perform his part of the bargain. It may not be necessary to prove that he made an actual tender of the money, but it was incumbent on him to show he had made arrangements for the purchase money and was in a position to hand it over as soon as he was satisfied that the bulk of the goods agreed with the sample. —Construction.

Where the contract provided that goods are to be delivered as and when same may be delivered from the mills, Held this should not be construed to mean 'if and when the same may be received from the mills.' To construe in this way is to convert words, which fix the quantities and times for deliveries by instalments into a condition precedent to the obligation to deliver at all, and virtually make a new contract. The words certainly regulate the manner of performance, but they do not reduce the fixed quantity sold to a mere maximum, or limit the sale to such goods, not exceeding the agreed bales as the Mills might deliver to the defendants during the agreed period. ## Construction—Condition.

The term 'conditions of sale' in connection with the preparation of bargain paper means 'terms of sale' and not conditions to which the bargain is subject.

Whether an agreement is a completed bargain or merely a provisional arrangement depends on the intention of the parties as deducible from the language used by the parties on the occasion when the negotiations take a concrete shape. As observed by the Lord Chancellor (Lord Cranworth) in Ridgway v. Waiton 6 H. L. Cas. 289 the fact of a subsequent agreement being prepared may be evidence that the previous negotiation did not amount to an agreement, but the mere fact that persons wish to have a formal agreement drawn up does not establish the proposition that they cannot be bound by a previous agreement. Implied term—Agreement between two temples regulating processions—Construction.

Per Chief Justice :—The law on the subject of the implication of terms in a contract has frequently been misunderstood and misapplied. The Court ought not to imply terms in a contract unless there arises from the language of the contract itself and the circumstances under which it is entered into, such an inference that the parties must have intended the stipulation in question, that the Court is necessarily driven to the conclusion that it must be implied.

Held, on a construction of an agreement between two temples regulating the processions of idols on particular days that there was no implied term that one of them would limit its procession, to those particular days (*Schwabe, C. Mercantile custom—C. I. F. terms—Payment.

When goods have been sold upon C. I. F. terms the contract of the seller is performed by tendering to the buyer the documents which would enable the latter to obtain on the ship's arrival the delivery of the goods contracted for. These documents must of course be tendered within a reasonable time from the date agreed upon for shipment of the goods which they represent. If the contract of sale provides that payment is to be drawn on the buyer, the latter is bound to accept the draft upon tender of the proper documents. Thus he must do even though the goods be lost or destroyed at the time the draft is presented. The delivery he is entitled to as against payment of the contract price is not the goods contracted for but their symbol represented usually by the bill of lading, charter-party, invoice and policy of insurance. Upon payment he can upon arrival of the ship, demand the goods themselves and should these not be forthcoming, or, when forthcoming, not be of the nature contracted for all his remedies at law are then open to him. —Ss. 16 and 74—Mortgage—Interest—High rate—Penalty—Relief against.

The rate of interest, however exorbitant, cannot be abrogated unless the agreement was tainted by undue influence, fraud or misrepresentation such as are mentioned in the Contract Act. A solemn agreement duly and freely entered cannot be allowed to avoid the terms thereof which they agree to with their eyes open and with no restraint upon their freedom of will. Upon this principle, contracts for payments of exorbitant rates of interest, such as, 75 per cent, in some cases were upheld and were not allowed to be disturbed; but in those cases the contracts were upheld against the party to the contract being allowed to trip up the terms of the contract when he agreed to them voluntarily and with his eyes open. Where the consideration for a bond was future adulterous cohabitation, the agreement is void under S. 23 Contract Act and cannot be enforced. ## —S. 23—Contract against public policy—Maintenance—Money advanced for purposes of litigation—Champerty—Enforceability of contract.

The specific law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India and while fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy yet such agreements should be carefully watched and if, extortionate, and unconscionable or made not with the bona fide object of assisting for a reasonable recompense a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring and oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits, should be held contrary to public policy and not enforced. The question is one essentially between the vendor and the vendee.

In all cases where a plaintiff is relying upon a deed, the defendant is entitled as of course to give evidence of the circumstances under which the document came into existence. When those circumstances embrace and include an allegation of a joint fraud by both plaintiff and defendant the particulars of that fraud must be pleaded; and it is then the duty of the court to look into the matter, and if the court comes to the conclusion that the parties were acting together with a view to perpetrate a fraud, and did in fact perpetrate that fraud and that there is no difference in the degree of guilt of the plaintiff (who is asking the court to give him some help) and that of the defendant, the duty of the Court is not to assist either party, in other words, the duty of the court is to dismiss the claim, because the Court having then in its knowledge that it has before it two persons equally guilty of fraud will not assist either of them. Once it is established that the parties are pari delicto the Courts will not assist an illegal transaction in any respect, that is to say the person who asks the Court to do something will fail. Where a pleader is appointed by Court in a suit as commissioner, the work done by the Commissioner is not work done for the party but for the Court. Consequently where a Commissioner who had been appointed at the instance of a party to a suit took a bond from that party for a certain sum of money and subsequently sued upon it held that the consideration for the bond was illegal and that it represented an improper advantage obtained by an officer of Court by abuse of his position as such. If the illegality of a transaction is brought to the notice of the Court and the person invoking the aid of the Court is himself implicated in the illegality, the Court will not assist him.

Contracts which are expressly prohibited by Statute, contracts that are illegal at Common Law as involving the commission of a crime or tort, and contracts which are unlawful as being contrary to the public policy are distinguishable from contracts which are not actually unlawful but merely void, either by statute, such as gaming or wagering contracts or on grounds of public policy such as contracts in general restraint of trade (Ross, J.) JHINGUR OJHA v. MEGHNATH PANDY. 72 I. C. 653

—S. 23—Public policy—Money lending by Pleader.

Where a pleader took a mortgage in his wife's name as consideration for promissory notes held there is a wide distinction between a contract which it may be improper for a pleader to enter into without the sanction of J. C's Court and a contract the operation of which is so injurious to the public welfare that even as between the parties who have voluntarily entered into it, the Courts will refuse to enforce it. The question in such cases is really one of professional etiquette rather than of public policy and the contract cannot be regarded as invalid. (Kanhaya Lal, J.C.) *RAM SINGH v. MT. ## CONTRACT ACT, S. 25.

—S. 23—Stifling prosecution—Non-compoundable case—consideration if valid.

—S. 25—Adequacy of consideration

Adequacy of consideration is not under explanation 2 to S. 25 Contract Act a matter to be taken into consideration in deciding whether an agreement is valid. (Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ.) BINDESHRI PRASAD v. SARJU SINGH. 45 A. 590 : 321 A. L. J. 446 : L. R. 4 A. 241 : 73 I. C. 453.

—S. 25—Valid contract—Writing—Signed by agent—Pleader if authorised to admit liability.

In order that a valid contract may be constituted under S 25 (3) of the Contract Act it is necessary that the statement should be in writing and should be signed by the person charged therewith or by the agent generally or specially authorized. Where there was no proof at all that a pleader who made the statement relied upon as a contract had any general or special authority from the defendant which would entitle him to enter into a contract on their behalf to pay a time barred debt, and the pleader's authority was confined to the conduct of the case his statement that if during the pendency of the suit the plaintiff obtained a succession certificate, the defendants were ready to submit to a decree for the amount claimed together with interest for six months did not constitute unqualified admission of liability within the meaning of S 25 of the Contract Act. Nor could the court treat the statement as showing in any way that the pleader who made it had authority to bind the defendant by a fresh contract under section 25 of the Contract Act (Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ.) BANSIDHAR v. BABU LAL. 21 A. L. J. 713 : L. R. 4 A. 473 : 75 I. C. 309 (2) : 1924 A. 12.

—S. 30—Sale of goods—No delivery contemplated—Wagering.

A transaction which is a sale of goods does not become a wagering agreement merely because both parties do not contemplate that delivery is likely to be demanded To constitute a gaming or wagering transaction there must be a definite agreement that delivery cannot in any event be demanded without a breach of the understanding between the parties (Caults Trotter, J.) SUKDEVADOSS RAMPRASAD v. —S. 30—Scope of—Collateral transaction—Co. partner—Right of reimbursement.

S. 30 of the Contract Act does not affect agreements or transactions collateral to wagers. Where two partners enter into a contract, even assuming it to be one of a wagering nature, and one of them satisfies the whole liability under the contract, he has a right of reimbursement against the other. —S. 30—Wagering contract—Speculative contract—Distinction between

A contract may be unenforceable, if it only amounts to a wager on the rise or fall of the market, and is not accompanied by an intention to sell or to purchase goods, at a given time and place at a certain rate To some extent, speculation forms an element in many transactions relating to the sale and delivery of goods at a certain rate, and because the market-rate for those goods may be liable to fluctuation ; but the existence of such an element does not make the contract void, because it may yet be accompanied by a real desire on the part of the vendor to sell and the buyer to purchase the goods agreed to be sold, at the contracted rate Where such an intention exists, the contract is not a wagering contract and can be enforced. S. 38 of the Contract Act applies to an offer which has been accepted as well as to an offer which has been refused, whether S. 38 applies to payment to one of several joint mortgagees or not, the rule of equity applicable in India is that in the absence of fraud or an intention to defeat the rights of other mortgagees, payment to a single mortgagee discharges the mortgagor. To enable a party to a contract to be relieved from its future performance by the conduct of the other, the conduct must amount to a renunciation or absolute refusal to perform the contract, such as would amount to a revision if he had the power to rescind.

Where a party to a contract complains about the delay in carrying out the contract and protests against the other party's right to put an end to it, it cannot amount to a refusal to perform, (*Sanderson, C. ## —S. 43—Handnote—Suit against one of two joint promisors

A suit on a hand note executed by several persons is not bad merely because one only of the joint promisors has been sued. In such a case each of those liable under the hand note is liable to the full extent of the loan unless there are some special terms in the contract which in some way limit or restrict their liability, and under the provisions of S. 43 of the Contract Act it is quite within the competency of the lender to sue all or any, as he may choose, of these who have incurred the liability. ## CONTRACT ACT, S. 62.

—Ss 56, 9 and 20—Scope of—Frustration. See (1922) DIG. COL. 379 GOURI SHANKAR AGARWALLA v. MOITRA. 70 I. C. 379.

—Ss 56, 35 (2)—Surety for production of judgment debtor—Imprisonment—Effect.

Where a person stands surety to produce a person in court on a particular day, but by that time the person had been convicted and lodged in jail, the promise becomes impossible to perform and the agreement becomes void. The agreement is not one falling under the second part of S 35 of the Contract Act. (MacColl, J. C.) MAUNG KY WE v. MAUNG SAN TIN, 70 I. C. 870 : 1923 Rang. 26.

Parties to a contract may stipulate that one or both of them shall have the power to rescind the contract on the happening of some specified contingency. Such a stipulation is to be construed according to its natural meaning; subject to the principle of law that a party shall not take advantage of his own wrong. 1919 A. C. 1. Ref. The mere fact that the option to rescind the contract is not made defendant on the happening of any specified contingency, but an option to terminate the contract for any reasons whatsoever does not render the contract void for want of mutuality (Mulla, J.) CHOTALAL LALLUBAI v. CHAMPSEY UMERSEY AND SONS.

Where an insufficiently stamped hundi is given in renewal of a prior hundi and a suit on the basis of the subsequent hundi is not maintainable, the creditor can fall back upon the prior hundi, and S. 62 of the Contract Act is not a bar to his doing so.

The question as to the negotiability or non-negotiability of an instrument is quite distinct from the question of a party's discharge from liability to the holder, and that the liability of a bill of exchange is in no way affected by the document being negotiable or otherwise. Nor does the mere cancellation of a hundi can have the effect of discharging a party from liability unless it is made with the express intent on or discharging that party for it is made unintentionally or is made under a mistake it will be inoperative. This rule is laid down in a series of cases in England, and being a rule founded on equity, justice and good conscience, must be held equally applicable to India.

The grant of a negotiable security by a debtor to his creditor operates as a conditional payment only and not as a satisfaction of the debt.

the same as absolute or conditional payment, and the presumption is that the effect of giving or taking a bill or note was that the debt was conditionally paid. (Scott Smith and Meit Sagar, JJ.) RAHMAT ALI MAHOMED FAIZI v. DIWA SINGH MAN SINGH. 4 Lah. 151: 5 Lah. L. J. 361.

S. 62—Mortgage—Sale with a view to discharge mortgage—Nature of the transaction.

A suit was brought for foreclosure of a mortgage executed on 14th of August 1908. It was of the simplest possible character, being a claim for the amount still due on the mortgage after making allowance for a payment of Rs. 9,000 made on 17th October 1917. On that date the mortgagor sold a portion of the property and paid the Rs. 9,000 he received for the sale to the mortgagees towards satisfaction of the mortgage debt. The purchasers happened to be the mortgagees. The mortgagor originally agreed to sell the property for Rs. 9,000 on the 9th January 1913, and he agreed also that the purchaser might retain enough of the purchase-money to pay off the mortgage.

But the defendant mortgagor did not carry out his agreement till he was compelled to do so by a decree of a Civil Court in a suit instituted under the Specific Relief Act. The sale-deed was eventually executed by the Court for him on 17th October 1917, by which time the amount due on the mortgage was considerably in excess of Rs. 9,000. Held the effect of the sale was not to relieve the mortgagor of his liability to pay the mortgage debt. (Halliday, A. J. C.) NARAYAN v. VENKATA RAO. 72 I. C. 422: 1923 Nag. 213.

S. 62—Novation—Essence of—

The essence of the novation of a contract lies not in the dissimilarity of the terms between the old and the new contract but in the intention of the parties to supersede the old by the new. (Wazir Hasan A. J. C.) BALDEO v. SHER BAHADUR SINGH. 9 O. & A. L. R. 761: 75 I. C. 42.

S. 62—Settlement of damages is not novation.

Where the contract subsisted and had failed the cause of action would be the failure of the contract. The settlement that a certain amount of money was payable for the failure is not a new contract. (Prideaux A. J. C.) KAMAL NARAYANA v. BANIRAM. 75 I. C. 440: 1923 Nag. 352.

S. 63—Scope of—

S. 63 of the Contract Act does not entitle a promisee for his own purposes and without the consent of the promisor to extend time to his own advantage. There must be an agreement or mutual understanding to waive (Abdul Raouf and Campbell, JJ.) ASMAT ULLAH v. MESSRS BEHARI LAL AND SONS. 1923 Lah. 117.

CONTRACT ACT, S. 65.

S. 65—Agreement to transfer decree—Death of decreeholder—Recovery of earnest money.

A decree holder agreed to execute a transfer of his decree in favour of the plaintiff's predecessor in title to the proposed transferee, paid a sum of Rs. 2,000 out of the stipulated consideration to the decreeholder in advance. Subsequently the proposed transferee died and the original decreeholder realised the decretal amount by execution of the decree against the judgment debtor. The plaintiffs thereupon instituted a suit for recovery of the amount advanced with interest. It was found that the contract was a personal one. So that on the death of the proposed transferee it was incapable of fulfilment. Held that the pliffs. were entitled to recover the earnest money with interest. (Das and Macpherson, JJ.) MT. RAMDULARI KUER v. JANG BAHADUR SINGH. (1923) Pat. 247: 1923 P. 589.

S. 65—Agreement discovered to be void—Suit for return of money—Limitation when commences.

Normally as law presumes every one to know the law an agreement which is void ab initio can be said to have been discovered to be void from the very moment the agreement is entered into. When however, an alienation of joint family properties is made, possession taken and properties enjoyed for a long time and then in a suit challenging the alienation the transaction is held not binding, the above principle cannot apply, and in a suit for a return of the consideration, limitation under Art. 116 runs only from the date when the transaction was held to be void. (Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.) RAM NATH v. DAMODER PRASAD. 9 O. & A. L. R. 1066.

S. 65—Void contract—Sale of expectancy by Hindu Reversioner—Failure of vendee to get possession—Suit for recovery of money Limitation.

A Hindu reversioner to an estate in Oudh sued for a declaration that a will alleged to have been made by the last male owner directing his widows to adopt was invalid and void and obtained a decree to that effect. He was also declared entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of the last surviving widow. Subsequently the reversioner transferred his right to half the estate in favour of the plaintiff's predecessor in title, for a consideration of Rs. 25,100—agreeing to put the vendee in proprietary possession of the estate after the death of the last surviving widow. In a suit by the plaintiff after the death of the widow for recovery of the estate or for the purchase money held that there was no valid transfer of the estate in favour of the plaintiff's predecessor in title inasmuch as the vendor had at the date of the conveyance a mere spes successionis which he could not validly transfer under S. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act; that the suit for possession must therefore fail; that the plaintiff however was entitled to recover the consideration paid for the sale with interest thereon from the date of suit; and that the case was governed by S. 65 of the Contract Act, the cause of action having arisen after the death of the last surviving widow when alone the vendee discovered that the transfer was

—S. 67—Repudiation—Tender.

Where the defendants had practically repudiated the terms of the contract, it is not necessary that any actual tender of money should have been made to them and it is sufficient for the plaintiffs to show their readiness to pay the money. (Shauji Lal, C. J. and Abdul Qadir, J.) FIRM RAM DYAL SHEO PERSHAD v. FIRM GHAMANDI LAL NARAIN DAS. 1923 Lah. 56

—Ss. 69 and 70—Payment made in good faith to preserve the property—Right of recovery.

When a person bona fide, believing himself to have a claim to a property, pays off the charges on the property, he is entitled to recover the amount. 7 C. 575 : 26 C. 826 F. 11.

Though a person's title in the property is subsequently found to be non-existent, he is still entitled to recover the money, which he has paid for the preservation of the property, from the persons who are the actual owners, under section 69 and 70 of the Contract Act. 31 B. 439 (Ref.) (Banker, J. C.) THAKURSA v. BEHARI.

—S. 69—Person interested in payment—Usufructuary mortgagee in possession—Sale of property in execution—Deposit under O. 21, R. 89, C. P. Code—Right to recover.

In execution of a money decree against the debt, by a third person, property usufructually mortgaged to Plff. was sold. Plff. deposited the required amount to set aside the sale under O. 21, R. 89 and sued debt, for the same. Held that in the circumstances plff was not a mere volunteer but a person interested and therefore was entitled to be reimbursed (Banerji, J.) BENI MADHO v. SANWAR DAT. 1923 A. 127

—Ss. 69 and 70—Right to reimbursement—Mortgagee purchaser—Rent decree prior to purchase.

The purchaser of a tenure buys it with incumbrances of rent due from the original tenant, which forms a first charge. Thus a mortgagee purchaser of the term, if he has to pay such arrears of rent accrued due before his purchase in order to save it from sale, cannot have a right of suing his mortgagor for reimbursement. (Jwala Prasad and Ross JJ.) RANGLAL SAHU v. BABU KALI SHANKER 1923 Pat. 353 : 2 Pat. 890.

—Ss. 69 and 70—Scope of—Vendee aware of defect in title—Discharge of incumbrances—Right to amounts paid when title fails—Relief.

Per Spencer, J.—The vendee of properties who had received specific notice that the sale deed standing in the name of his vendor was only nominal, unenforceable and had not been given effect to, is not a bona fide purchaser without notice. But where after taking the sale deed, he pays off incumbrances and tries to preserve the property from the clutches of creditors, his payments are bona fide and he is a person "interested" within the meaning of S. 69 of the contract act—Though it is well established that Ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act were not designed for the benefit of persons who are mere volunteers a person who pays off incumbrances on the property purchased after his title is decreed in one court and before his title is declared bad by the court of appeal is entitled to claim the same in spite of the notice he had. In such a case, the ordinary relief he is entitled to is a personal decree and not a charge on the property.

Per Devadoss, J.—In order to claim payments made to discharge incumbrances on property, plaintiff must show he was a volunteer and did not make the payments officiously. The onus is heavily on him to show he paid the amounts bonafide. The equitable doctrine of subrogation cannot have any application to volunteers or persons whose conduct is officious. The distinction should always be kept in view of sales which are void, voidable and merely sham. The fact that the incumbrances were discharged after the vendee's title was declared to be good in the court of first instance but before the same was upset in appeal, will not make any difference as courts do not confer rights to property where the person had admittedly none. (Spencer and Devdoss, JJ.) GOPALA IYENGAR v. MUMMACHI REDDIAR. 17 L. W. 254 : 74 I. C. 416 : 1923 Mad. 392.

—S. 70—Assets of a deceased person—Purchaser from an unauthorised person satisfying decree—Whether entitled to recover the decretal debt from the assets.

B. died leaving a widow R. and a son M. R. survived M., one S. the heir of B. after M's death sold the property to pliffs. One A. got a decree against S. and widow R. and attached the property in question. The deits. purchased the property from R and paid off the decretal amount. The pliffs. brought a suit to recover the property from the deits. without being required to pay the decretal amount. Held that as the deits. had purchased the property from a person who had no title to sell it, they cannot expect to be recouped for the amount which they paid to clear off the decree; because of their purchase they did not acquire any interest (Gokul Prasad, J.) GAYA PRASAD v. METHAI LAL. 1923. A. 404 (2)

—S. 70—Payment for the benefit of plff. as well as defendant—Option to decline benefit—Suit for recovery of money—Limitation.

Under S. 70 of the Contract Act the party sought to be made liable must have not only benefited but must have had the opportunity of accepting or rejecting the benefit. 6 M. L. T. 375 Ref.

Per Devadoss, J.—Where a person does an act which is greatly beneficial to himself and which is sure to benefit another the former cannot claim contribution from the latter. In other words, where a person is bound to do an act, whether another consents to it or not, the former cannot claim contribution even though the latter derives benefit in consequence of the act. Where plff sold 70 bales of grey mulls, each bale to contain 100 pieces, to deft and deft in his turn bona fide sold the bales as containing each 100 pieces to several persons, and it was eventually ascertained that plff had delivered an excess number of pieces Held, that deft was not liable to return or pay the price of the excess number of pieces The doctrine of equitable restitution has no application where the deft, labouring under the same mistake as the plff has bona fide parted with the goods to others (Coutts Trotter and Ramesam, JJ) K. —Ss. 73, 54—Contract for the sale of goods—Term, whether essential justifying rescission or merely collateral—Damages for breach—When to be awarded.

In construing mercantile contracts it must be assumed that any clause in it was inserted by the parties to some good purpose and with some definite meaning as merchants are not in the habit of inserting in their contracts stipulations to which they do not attach some value and importance. In order that the latter part of S. 73 of the Contract Act may apply it has to be proved that not only the plaintiff but the defendant also knew when the contract was made that such loss was likely to result from the breach. Remfrey on Sale of Goods. —S. 73—Damages—Measure of.

The measure of damages in a case of breach of contract to deliver, is the sum by which the contract price fell short of the price at which the purchaser might have obtained goods of like quality at the time when they should have been delivered (Abdul Raof and Campbell, JJ) ASMAT ULLAH v MESSRS BEHARI LAL & SONS. 1923 Lah. 117.

—S. 73—Damages—Measure of—Contract to convey immovable property—Breach.

When a person who has entered into a contract to convey a house is unable to fulfil it by reason of his having no title to the property, he is liable in damages, the measure of damages being the difference in the market price on the date agreed on for the completion of the sale and the contractual price. (Banerji and Gokul Prasad, J) PANNA LAL v HUSAIN BEG 21 A. L. J. 428: L. R. 4 A. 540: 75 I. C. 460.

—S. 73—Damages—Measure of—Infringement of right—Nominal damages.

Though every breach of duty arising out of contract gives rise to an action for damages without proof of actual damage the amount of damages recoverable is as a general rule, governed by the extent of the actual damages sustained in consequence of the defendant's act. In cases admitting proof of such damage the amount must be established with reasonable certainty. But this does not mean that absolute certainty is required: nor in all cases is there a necessity for direct evidence as to the amount. Damages are not uncertain for the reason that the loss sustained is incapable of proof with the certainty of mathematical demonstration or is to some extent contingent and incapable of precise measurement. Only such approximation to certainty is required as would satisfy the mind of a prudent and reasonable person. Cases on the subject reviewed. (Mookerjee and Chatterjee, JJ) KING-SLEY v. —S. 73—Damages—Sale of goods—Breach—Late shipment—Late arrival.

Under a contract in writing dated 21-8-1919 defts. agreed to buy from plaintiffs 25 bales of yarn. The contract was in these terms: "This day we have purchased from you the under-mentioned goods in accordance with the bazaar rules cotton yarn of Jaran shipment for February, March 1918 is to be given whenever the same arrive earlier or later, and on the safe arrival of the same by steamer." On 25-9-1918 defts. wrote to plffs, that unless the goods were delivered in 8 days the contract was to be treated as cancelled. On 12-10-1918 the goods arrived in Bombay and the plffs required the defts to take delivery. On 15-10-1918 defts replied that the 8 days' period having already expired the contract was cancelled and that they were not bound to pay for the goods or take delivery of them. In an action for damages, Held that having regard to the express provisions of the contract with reference to late shipment, the September shipment was contract shipment which the defendants were bound to accept. The date of breach was 15-10-1918 when defendants improperly repudiated the contract. As the property in the goods had not passed to the defendants, plaintiffs were entitled to recover the difference between the contract price and the market price on the day of the breach. —S. 73—Damages—Sale of goods—Rescission—Right to return of advance—Further damages.

—S. 73—Damages—Sale of goods—Instalment delivery—Default—Breach—Damages—Right to sue for.

Where there is a contract by the plaintiffs to supply goods to the defendants from time to time as they required for their business, if the sellers clearly show their intention not to be bound by and to repudiate the contract, the buyers if they please may treat the notice of intention as inoperative and await the time when contract is to be executed and then hold the sellers responsible for all consequences of non performance; but in that case they keep the contract alive for the benefit of the sellers as well as their own the buyers remain subject to all their obligations and liabilities under the contract and enable the sellers not only to complete the contract if so advised notwithstanding their previous repudiation of it but also to take advantage of any supervening circumstances which would justify them in declining to complete it. On the other hand the buyers may, if they think proper, treat the repudiation of the sellers as a wrongful putting an end to the contract and may at once bring their action as on a breach of it and in such action they will be entitled to such damages as would have arisen from non-performance of the contract at the appointed time, subject, however, to abatement in respect of any circumstances which may have afforded them the means of mitigating their damage. Frost v Knight (1872) L. The amount due under a compromise decree was to be paid up in instalments, and there was a stipulation that on failure to pay within the date fixed, the decree-holder was to get interest at 1 per cent per mensem from the date of default and he was at liberty to execute the decree. After the due date the judgment-debtor made payments to the decree-holder, who claimed appropriation first towards interest and then towards the decretal sum. Held, that the decree-holder was entitled to interest and the clause as to executing the decree was for the benefit of the decree-holder and the acceptance of part-payment did not amount to waiver of the right to interest. —S. 74—Contract—Breach of—Penalty—Damages ascertained by parties—Duty of Court

The idea is very common that what is called a "penalty clause" in a contract is a mere brutum fulmen, an agreement that neither party has any intention of enforcing at all to any extent. Such an agreement would certainly not be mentioned in the Contract Act, and in fact would not be agreement at all. A penalty clause merely fixes a maximum for damages which would be difficult to state in terms of money, and any how does not deprive the aggrieved party of his right to damages that can be so estimated. 12 N. —S. 74—Enhanced rate from the date of default.

A mortgage-deed provided for the payment of interest at 8 annas per cent per mensem payable half-yearly and that if a default was made in making such payment the interest due was to be added to the principal and the whole sum was to bear interest thereon at 12 annas per cent. per annum; held that the contract is not penal. An agreement to pay interest at an enhanced rate for the breach of a contract may not be extravagant or unconscionable, if the original rate of interest was fixed low in order to enable the debtor to pay interest regularly at the stipulated time. A covenant to pay compound interest is by itself not penal. S. 74 Contract Act does not enact that the stipulation for the payment of enhanced interest from the date of default ought always to be considered penal. (Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.) *KANDHI v. Neither S. 74 of the Contract Act, nor the principles of law laid down in decisions dealing with promises to pay specified sums in case of breach of contract, apply to cases of forfeiture of deposits for breach of stipulations. It is not open to the Court to interfere with the rate of interest stipulated between the parties unless the court is satisfied that the rate of interest charged is a penalty within S. 74 of the Contract Act. In other cases the court would be making a new contract between the parties. (Greaves and Ghose, JJ.) SATYABHAMA SUNDARI v. MAHOMED ESAHAKMEAH. 1923 Cal. 268.

CONTRACT ACT, S. 74.

—S. 74—Penalty—compound interest—Relief against penalty.

The Courts do not lean towards compound interest, they do not award it in the absence of stipulation but where there is a clear agreement for payment, it is in the absence of disentitling circumstances allowed.

Under a mortgage deed, it was agreed that if any of the monthly instalments of interest was not paid on its due date, such unpaid instalment of interest should be capitalised and added to the amount of the principal loan and would henceforth carry interest at the rate of twelve annas per month leviable as simple interest, and it was further provided that all such additions by way of capitalised interest should be chargeable upon the mortgaged property. Held, such a provision was not penal so as to bring the case under S. 74 of the Contract Act. (Fawcett, J.) NADERSHAW v. SHIRINBAI. 25 Bom. L. R. 839.

—S. 74—Penalty—Fixation of price of paddy due under contract—No undue influence—Power of Court to reduce price.

The plaintiffs advanced a sum of Rs. 500—and for this the defendant undertook to repay 172 maunds of paddy in the next year and the same amount in the following year. In default of delivering paddy the price was to be charged at Rs. 3—per maund. There was no suggestion that the defendant acted under any undue influence. It was found that the defendant had to pay under this agreement nearly double the amount advanced. Held that there was no ground for holding that the stipulation was a penalty and the Court had no power to reduce the price. It was in the interests of the party that a definite rate should be fixed for the paddy and it might have been to the advantage of the defendant if the paddy at the time of payment was selling at a higher rate to be able to pay cash instead of paddy itself. (Newbould and Panton, JJ.) ASHRAF ALI v. MAKBUL AHMED. 49 C. 1040 : 70 I. C. 931.

—S. 74—Penalty—Mortgage—Enhanced interest.

Where there is ample security as in the case of a mortgage an increase or the rate of interest from 24 per cent to 36 per cent from the date of default is a penalty. (Robinson, C. J. and Macgregor, J.) KO TAINE v. ISMAIL CASSIM MORAD. 69 I. C. 204 : 1923 Rang. 61.

—S. 74—Penalty—Stipulation for enhanced interest on default—When a penalty—Mortgage deed.

Where the rate of interest stipulated for as payable in case of default is not unconscionable, though it is slightly in excess of the original rate, the Court may well award the enhanced rate as reasonable compensation. 20 I. —S. 74—Stipulation for enhanced interest on default—Penalty

A mortgage provided for payment of interest regularly at the rate of 21 per cent at the end of each month and on default the whole was to become due at once or to pay interest at 24 per cent. Held the question whether the provision for enhanced interest is a penalty must be decided on the facts of each case. Seeing that the interest is only 3 per cent, it was held it was not a penalty. (Robinson. C. J., and May Oung, J.) P. C. PAL v. K. A. L. R. FIRM. 1 Rang. 460.

—Ss. 76 and 121—Shares in a company—Contract for sale and delivery—Rights of transferee—Pledge.

Plaintiffs sold some shares to the 1st defendant who sold 25 of them to a third party and pledged 104 along with other similar shares to the second defendant. Defendant 2 put forward defendant 3 as a party who was willing to advance money. In fact defendant 3 was a mere nominee of 2nd defendant and defendant 2 got possession of 305 shares fraudulently. The fraud was that he deceived defendant 1 by false pretences that he would use these shares for the purpose of raising a loan for the benefit of defendant which he did not do and which he did not intend to do, his real object being to secure himself from loss as regards the moneys due to him from 1st defendant. The plaintiffs sued to recover the shares and damages from defendants 2 and 3. Held that the plaintiff's suit was unsustainable and the remedy of the plaintiffs was to sue the 1st defendant for the purchase money. The shares were moveables or "goods" within S. 76 of the Contract Act and the case therefore fell within S. 121 of the same Act. The plaintiffs had delivered all they had and they could not, therefore rescind the contract on the buyer's failing to pay the price unless it was stipulated by the contract that they should be so entitled. The plaintiffs as vendors agreed to sell and deliver transfers and certificates with the interests and rights which they conveyed. Such delivery passed not the property in the shares but a title legal and equitable which would enable the holder to vest himself with the shares. On delivery of the documents there was no interest left in the plaintiffs on which any equity can be founded. As between them and 1st defendant there was no fraud or misrepresentation which could vitiate the transaction, (Macleod, C. J. and Crump, J.) VADILAL v. MANEKJI. 25 Bom. L. R. 414 : 1923 Bom. 372.

CONTRACT ACT, S. 82.

—Ss. 78 and 114—Contract for purchase of motor car—Price agreed to be paid in instalments—Default—Breach of warranty—Damages.

Plff. entered into negotiations for the purchase of a motor car on the 5th of April and deposited Rs. 1,000 that day, signed the agreement to take delivery of the car on 27th April and paid the insurance money and Rs. 250 for the first instalment on 11th May. Under the terms of the contract the buyer was to pay the balance of the purchase money of Rs. 3,000 in monthly instalments of Rs. 250 from the month of May. After delivery of the car the seller had a right to enter upon the premises where the car was and inspect the car; the purchaser was not to dispose of the car before the full price was paid; the purchaser was to insure the car and assign the policy to the seller. In default of observance by the buyer of any of the conditions aforesaid the seller had the right to determine the contract and to seize and take possession of the car. The buyer did not make any payment after July and the seller determined the contract by notice in November. The buyer brought a suit for damages on the ground that the car was worthless and he had lost the earnings which he expected out of the car. Held that the intention of the parties as expressed in the conditions cited was that the property in the car should not pass until full price had been paid; that S. 78 of the Contract Act was subject to the intention of the parties, that the contract of sale, though of a second hand motor car, was subject to an implied warranty that the car was serviceable i. e., reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was brought; that there was a breach of such warranty for which the plff. was entitled to damages, notwithstanding deft's repudiation of it, (Pratt, J.) HURBUT JOHN AMIES v. JAL P. VIRJI. 25 Bom. L. R. 778 : 1924 Bom. 41.

—S. 78—Sale of specific goods—Position of buyer—Claim for price—Wholesale delivery.

Where specific goods are sold and agreed to be delivered wholesale to a certain person at a certain rate, it is for the buyer to get goods weighed and delivered to him. The weightment is only for the consideration of the buyer and the latter cannot by delay in weighing the goods prevent the transfer of the ownership to him. Where the contract was for the sale of the entire heap of bark stored in the godown amounting approximately to 446 maunds it was practically a sale of specific or ascertained goods and it was the duty of the purchaser to get the goods weighed and delivered on the due date. Kanharya Lal, J. C. ANNAN v. SHEIKH DUBAR. 26 O. C. 39 : 1923 Oudh 15.

—Ss. 82 and 83—When property in goods passes to buyer.

The combined effect of those sections is that where goods agreed to be sold are not ascertained at the time of making the agreement but goods answering the description in the agreement are subsequently appropriated by one party for the purposes of the agreement and that appropriation is assented to by the other, the sale is complete and the property in the goods passes to the buyer. In order that the property may pass to the buyer it is necessary that the goods appropriated to the contract by the seller must answer the description in the agreement. Mere appropriation by the seller does not pass the property in the goods to the buyer. The effect of appropriation is that the seller loses the possibility of withdrawing the goods from the contract and he would break his contract with the buyer if he offered any other goods to him, though the goods still remained his property. The appropriation must be assented to by the buyer to pass the property. (Mulla, J.) N. BUCH AND CO v. GORDHANDAS MAVJI 70 I. C. 877 : 1923 Bom 92.

—S. 83—Passing of property to buyer.

The defendants ordered twenty motor cars from the plaintiffs upon terms that the plaintiffs should send them by rail and that the defendants should pay for them to Messrs. King King & Co, at Delhi against the railway receipt. Messrs King King & Co. at Delhi were the plaintiff's agents to receive payment of the price from the defendants, and to deliver the railway receipt to them on payment. The railway receipt was made out by the plaintiffs in their name as consignees and endorsed by them in blank. The cars were consigned at owner's risk with the result that the railway could not be held liable for the loss thereof.

Held that the plaintiffs delivered the cars to the railway at owner's risk without the consent express or implied of the defendants, that the plaintiffs' intention was to retain the ownership of the goods until the defendants paid the price. That the plaintiffs having instructed their agents not to deliver the railway receipt till payment, the appropriation was not absolute and final, but conditional on payment by the defendants and that there was therefore no "appropriation" within S 83 of the Contract Act. That the property in the cars did not pass to the defendants on delivery to the railway company and that the defendants were not liable for the price.

S. 83 applies to a case where the seller is authorised to make the appropriation and the buyer has given a previous implied assent to the appropriation (Mulla, J.) THE FORD AUTOMOBILES v. THE DELHI MOTOR AND ENGINEERING CO. 70 I. C. 138 : 1923 Bom. 125.

—S. 91—Consignment of goods—Property if passes—who can sue for loss.

Where goods are consigned to a Railway company property passes to the consignee under S 91, Contract Act and he alone can thereafter sue the Railway Company for loss arising out of the contract of freight. (Phillips, J.) M. AND S.M. RY. CO v. RANGASWAMY CHETTI. 73 I. C. 537.

—S. 91—Scope—English law.

S. 91 does not provide for cases where the seller delivers the goods to a carrier and reserves the right of disposal. Therefore the Courts of British India resort to the rules of English common law so far as they are not inconsistent with the text of the Contract Act. One of those rules is that where in pursuance of the contract, the seller delivers the goods to a carrier, for the purpose of transmission to the buyer, but retains a ius disponendi until certain conditions are fulfilled, the property in the goods does not pass to the buyer until the conditions imposed by him are not fulfilled. This rule applies not only to delivery of goods to be carried by sea, but to delivery to carriers by land and to canal-boat companies (Mulla, J.) THE FORD AUTOMOBILES v. THE DELHI MOTOR AND ENGINEERING CO.

70 I. C. 138 : 1923 Bom. 125.

Per Sanderson, C. J. Quare whether the right of a seller of goods to stop the goods in transit is a mere equitable right.

Per Richardson J. It is too late in the day to argue that the right of stoppage is a merely equitable right.

Where the buyer of certain goods while they were in transit became an insolvent but had meanwhile assigned the document of title to a third party and the vendor exercises his right of stoppage in transit, it is for the assignee to show under S 102 that he acted in good faith and paid valuable consideration.

Origin and nature of the vendor's right of stoppage considered, (Sanderson, C. J. and Richardson, J.) RASH BEHARI KARURI v. NARAIN DAS DORILAL. 50 Cal. 399 : 27 C. W. N. 231 : 1923 Cal. 182.

—Ss. 102, 108 and 178—Documents of title—Railway receipt—Assignment—Mode of—Rights of transferee and consignee—T. P. Act, S. 137.

Railway receipts are not negotiable by law and are not rendered negotiable by S. 137 of the T. P. Act. Nor was there any thing to show that such receipts were negotiable by the mercantile custom of Rangoon. S. 137 of the T. P. Act merely provides that the methods of assignment in Ch. 8 of the Act shall not apply to the case of certain specified documents which are for the time being by law or custom negotiable. It merely deals with the manner in which the documents to which it relates can be transferred, but it does not affect the result of the transfer when made.

In order that such transfer should have in the case of railway receipts the effect of transferring the ownership of the goods, it must be established that they are not negotiable. (Robinson, C. J. and Macgregor, J.) S. R. N. S. ARUNACHELLAM CHETTY v. Ko. Po YAN. 1923 Rang. 1.

—S. 107—Damages—Claim for difference of price at which plaintiff sold and that at which defendant bought.

The plaintiff sold Masoor to the defendant who did not pay the price nor did he take delivery. The plaintiff therefore after giving him notice sold the grain. The price at which he sold was a lower price than that at which he had originally sold to the defendant and he claimed the difference as damages. Held, the case was clearly one under S. 107 and the plaintiff entitled to the damages. (Coutts and Das, JJ.) BHAGWANDAS v. KESHWARLAL. 1 Pat. 696 : 69 I. C. 681. (2); 4 Pat. L. T. 259 : 1 Pat. L. R. 186; 1923 P. 49.

CONTRACT ACT, S. 107.

Where a right of re-sale is given by the contract between the parties, it is not necessary that the property in the goods should pass to the purchaser to enable the seller to re-sell the goods and claim the difference between the price of the goods as originally contracted for and the price fetched at the re-sale.

If the goods have been resold by the vendor within a reasonable time after the breach of contract by the purchaser, the measure of the damages will be the difference between the price agreed to be given and the price realized on the re-sale, with the costs and expenses of the re-sale, but if the re-sale has been unreasonably delayed until the market has fallen, the price realized on such re-sale will not afford a true criterion of the damage.

If the seller elects to re-sell, he must do so within a reasonable time from the date on which the contract was finally repudiated by the buyer. Any other conclusion might cause undue hardship to the buyer, for it will then be open to the seller with the deliberate intention of causing loss to the buyer, to delay the re-sale until the market has fallen and then re-sell the property, and thereby cause to the buyer a loss which he might not have sustained had the re-sale taken place within a reasonable time from the date of the breach of contract. (Abdul Raoof, J.) FIRM OF ABDUL HAKIM MAHOMED SADIK v. JOHO JAUTZEN. 72 I. C. 772.

S. 107—Time essence of contract-general rule.

The general rule is that time is the essence of mercantile contracts and particularly when a party agreed to make payment and take delivery as soon as the goods arrived. Provisions in the contract regarding payment of interest and liability for godown rent do not take the case out of the general rule. Where no evidence had been offered that the plaintiffs in fact took money to the Hindustan Mercantile Association when it was their duty to make an unconditional offer of cash to the defendants and wrote asking to be told where to make payment, several days after receipt of the defendants' warning.

Held, plaintiffs failed to make out any breach of contract by the defendants which would entitle them to damages. (Martineau and Campbell, JJ.) THE FIRM DURGA DAT JAGAN NATH OF DELHI v. THE FIRM RAM PARTAB SUKH DAYAL OF DELHI. 1923 Lah. 138.

S. 113—Sale of goods—Merchantability—Test of—Damages to major portion of goods—Effect of.

The effect of S. 113 of the Contract Act is that when there is no express warranty in the sale of goods, there is an implied warranty of merchantability. The question whether goods are "merchantable" in law is a question of mixed fact and law. A bale of a thousand pieces of piece-goods of which nine-tenths are damaged, however slightly is radically unmerchantable and a seller cannot force such goods on an unwilling buyer. In such there is no room for the application of the principle of de minimis. 8 L. W. 192, (1910) 2 K. B. 937, (1910) 2 K. B. 831 Ref. (Coutts Trotter and Ramesam, JJ.) MESSRS. MALLI & CO. v. V. ## S. 118—Acceptance

The question of acceptance does not arise when the property in the goods has passed to the buyer. The provisions of S. 118 do not apply where the property in goods has passed to the buyer, for where the property in goods passes by appropriation on the part of the seller and assent on the part of the buyer, since the appropriation can only be of goods of the contract description, the conditions of the contract are ex-hypothesi complied with. The case contemplated by S. 118 is one where there has been a contract with a condition and the condition is broken. In such a case the buyer may waive that right of rejection and accept the goods. The property in the goods then passes by the buyer's acceptance and if the buyer thereafter refuses to pay for and take delivery of the goods, the seller is entitled to sue the buyer for the price (Mulla, J.) N. —Ss. 151, 152 and 161—Railway—Liability of, as carrier—Exemption—Risk-note Form B.

Under Ss. 151 and 152 of the Contract Act read with S. 72 of the Railways Act, the liability of the Railway administration for the loss, destruction, or deterioration of goods delivered to the Administration to be carried on by railway is that of an ordinary bailee; that is to say, if the Railway Administration take as much care of the goods bailed to them as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality and value as the goods bailed, they will not in the absence of special contract be responsible for the loss destruction or deterioration of the goods. The Railways Act of 1890 by repealing Ss. 7 and 10 of the Carriers Act and by also enacting in S. 72 Cl. (3) that nothing in the common law of England or in the Carriers Act of 1865 regarding the responsibility of common carriers with respect to the carriage of animals or goods shall affect the responsibility of a Railway Administration, leaves no room for doubt that the liability of the Railway Company must be measured and determined solely by the tests formulated in Ss. 151 and 152 of the Contract Act. The onus is therefore upon the bailee to show that he is exonerated from liability for loss to the bailor by means of a special risk note relieving him from such liability. —Ss 178 and 108—"In possession" meaning of.

It has been often held [that] possession required in S. 178 is similar to the possession required by S. 108 of the Contract Act in regard to sales that is to say, the possession must be juridical possession of the goods and not mere custody. Where P was given possession of the sewing machines by the owner in order that he might sell them for and on behalf of the owner and he pawned the machines with a pawn broker.

Held: his possession is not a mere custody for safe keeping, but for the definite purpose of sale. He would have such a possession of them as is contemplated by S. 178. The fact that he disposed of the goods contrary to the instructions of the owner makes no difference to the character of the possession which vested in him. If, therefore, the pawnee acted in good faith and had no ground for doubting the authority of P to pledge the goods he would be entitled to the protection granted by S. 178. (*Robinson, C. —S. 178—Possession may be lawful and yet appropriation may be dishonest—Proviso still applies.

It is not necessary before the proviso to section 178 can be made applicable that the goods or documents should be obtained dishonestly in the first instance, and a subsequent misappropriation of them or any offence connected with them after they had been lawfully acquired prevents the possessor from making a valid pledge of them. To create a valid pledge the pledgor must be in juridical possession of the goods as distinguished from a bare custody. 12 Bom. L. R. 870 dist. (*Kennedy, J. C. and Raymond, A. J. Defendant who had no place of business in London appointed his London agents as sub-agents and they entered into forward contracts for the supply of ore. The plaintiff failed to carry out the terms of his contract and to supply ore whereupon the sub agents purchased ore from other sources and carried out their contracts with third persons, debiting the extra charges against plaintiff. The defendant retained moneys due to the plaintiff towards the expenses entailed by the latter's non fulfilment of the contract. Held that the defendant being a factor as well as an agent for sale, had authority under the circumstances to appoint a sub agent and that the defendant was entitled by way of general or particular lien to retain moneys belonging to the plaintiff in his hands. 39 M. 365; 42 Ch. An agent is not personally bound by a contract entered into by him on behalf of his principal in the absence of any contract to that effect. ## CONTRACT ACT, S. 248

—S 235—Purchase by agent—Liability—Repudiation by principal.

The Court below found that the purchases in question had been made by the debt. on behalf of a Rani by representing himself as her agent, but as the Rani had repudiated her liability in a letter by her to the Court of Wards, which had assumed the superintendence of her estate in 1920, the plff (vendor) was entitled to recover the amount due from the debt. under S 235 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872). Held that the decision was correct (Kanhaya Lal, J. C.) RATAN SINGH v. HAFIZULLAH.

90. & A. L. R. 820 : 72 I. C. 1011.

—S. 238—Principal and agent—Liability of principal for fraud of agent—Misappropriation of goods.

There is nothing in S. 238 of the Contract Act to show that in order to render the principal liable the fraud must be committed for the benefit of the principal. It is enough if the fraud is committed by the agent in the course of his business for his principal i. e. in matters falling within the scope of his authority. (Chatterjee and Pearson, JJ) DINA BANDHU SAHA v. ABDUL LATIF MOLLA. 50 Cal. 258 : 1923 Cal. 157.

—S. 239—One partner having option to send another or take fresh partners—Nature of relation.

A husband under an agreement took his wife in as a partner in his business fixed her share at X but he reserved liberty to take in fresh partners as he liked and to determine her share. On his death, she was to be at liberty to admit new partner. Held, the agreement evidenced a partnership within the meaning of S. 239 of the Act (Shah, A. C. J. and Crump, J.) IN RE AMBALAL SARABHAL. 25 Bom. L. R. 1225.

—S. 239—Partnership—Intention of parties Commission and not profits.

The question whether there is a real partnership must depend on the real intention and contract of the parties. Where the agreement recited that a certain person was to get a fixed pay and 10 per cent as commission on the net proceeds of the firm and not any share of the profits that person is a partner, as he sole sharer in the profits (Sanderson, C. J. Mukerjee and Chatterjee, JJ.) RAGHUMALL KHAN DELWAL v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE, OF CALCUTTA. 28 C. W. N. 34.

—S. 239 — Partnership — Members — Whether one firm can be partner in another.

A firm as such cannot be a member of a partnership. A partnership under Section 239 is a relationship which subsists between persons; but a firm is not a person; it is not an entity, it is merely a collective name for the individuals who are members of the partnership. It is neither a legal entity, nor is it a person, (Page, J) SLODOYAL KHEMKA v JOHARMULL MANMULL.

CONTRACT ACT, S. 251.

S. 248 undoubtedly is directed primarily to the protection of creditors of the firm. Where, however, one set of partners is indebted to another for the provision of capital, it must be clearly open for a minor liable under the deed of partnership, to repudiate his membership if he is to escape liability to the other partners. ——— S. 251—Trading firm—What is—Liability of partners for money borrowed by another partner.

Any partner in a trading firm has an implied authority to borrow money for the purposes of the business on the credit of the firm. A firm would be a trading firm if its business consists in buying and selling. In such a case there is no duty cast on the person advancing the money to make any further inquiries and the other partners are liable though the borrowing partner may misappropriate the money. ——— S. 263—Profits after dissolution of partnership—Partnership property.

Where the account books produced unmistakably proved that the order for the purchase of goods was made on behalf of the firm and further that the payment of the price in two instalments was also made on behalf of the firm; but by mere accident, the goods were received after the dissolution of the partnership, held on principle of equity the plaintiff is entitled to his share of the profits made by the defendants in selling the goods in question. It may be that the terms of S. 263 of the Contract Act do not cover the case in its entirety. (Wasir Hasan, A. J. C.) JANKI PERSHAD v. PT. SAMESHAR PRASAD.

CONTRIBUTION—Tort—Joint-tortfeasors—No contribution—Scope of the rule

To defeat a claim for contribution among co-defendants, it must be shown that the defendants in the former suit were wrong-doers in the sense that they knew or ought to have known that they were doing an illegal and wrongful act. In that case no suit for contribution would lie. But, on the other hand, if the defendants in the former suit were not guilty of a wrong in that sense, but acted under a bona fide claim of right, and had reason to suppose that they had a right to do what they did, then, no doubt, they might have a right of contribution inter se. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES ACT, (2 of 1912) S. 43—Object of—Disputes between society and members—Cognizance by Civil Court.

The object of the Co-operative Societies Act is to encourage thrift, selfhelp, co-operation among the agriculturists, artisans and persons of limited means, and it would be impossible to attain these objects if these people for the settlement of their disputes have necessarily to undergo all the troubles and worry of an extensive and protracted litigation. In the case of a dispute between a society and a member the substitutional remedy provided under the rules in the shape of a reference to the Registrar must be availed of and the common law remedy by an action in a Civil Court must by necessary application be deemed to have been taken away. The Words "touching the business of a society" in S. 43 (2) (1) of Act II of 1912 are not confined to disputes regarding the internal management of the affairs of a society or disputes in regard to principles which would regulate the conduct of the business.

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES ACT S. 44.

A dispute between a member who happens to be an officer of a co-operative society and the society in regard to sums of money entrusted to the former for purchase of certain articles is within S. 43 (2) (1) of the Act.

A dispute between a member who happens to be an officer of a co-operative society on the one hand and the committee or an officer thereof on the other falls within the words of the section (Krishnan and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ.) DASARATHA RAO v. CHEVVURU SUBBA RAO.

—S. 44—Rule providing for disputes to be referred to Registrar—If ultra vires—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Business of Society—Meaning of.

Under a rule framed under S. 44 of the Co-operative Societies Act, disputes between members of a co-operative Society and the Society thereof were to be referred to the Registrar. Held, the rule though it ousts the jurisdiction of Civil Courts is not ultra vires or inconsistent with S. 44 (2) (1).

—Joint property—Registered mortgages by one co-owner—Effect on other co-owners.

Registration cannot be held to give to other co-owners notice of dealings with the property. —Government revenue—Default in payment of revenue—Purchase by defaulter or in connivance with him.

A co-sharer who has defaulted to pay the Government dues and has thereby brought about the sale of the estate, cannot be permitted if he purchases the estate at the sale, to hold it to his own benefit to the exclusion of his co-owner. The position is similar when a tenant, in violation of his agreement defaults to pay, on behalf of his immediate landlord, the dues of the superior holder and thereby brings about a sale of the interest of his land. 44 C. 373, 16 C. 194 : 15 C. The essence of the matter is that the co-owner or lessee who thus acts in breach of his obligation contractual or fiduciary, cannot be permitted to profit by his own wrong to the detriment of the person whose interest it was his duty to protect. 12 C. L. J. 336 : 10 M. I. A. 540, 18 W. R. 240, 20 C. L. J. 11 : 24 C. W. N. 201 : 30 C. L. J. 475 Rel. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) LALITMOHAN SEN v. MANORANJAN GHOSH CHAUDHURI.

Whatever the powers of the Court may be in adjudicating on the rights of parties and in passing injunction (or conditional injunctions) in consequence of such adjudications it is a different matter to say that where a party admittedly owns a piece of property the Court has any authority to create and impose conditions as to the enjoyment of the same, neither breach of contract nor the infringement of any right being alleged to have taken place. Consequently a co-sharer who had re-built at his expense a common wall belonging to him and the defendant, another co-sharer, cannot obtain an injunction restraining the latter from treating the half belonging to him as his property until he had paid his portion of the cost of re-building the wall. —Joint possession—Right to—Partition suit.

Where a suit for partition is pending between the co-sharers and the rights of the parties to khas possession of different lands will be finally decided the court would be slow to disturb the existing possession of the lands by the co-sharers, unless compelled by cogent reasons. was that the cosharers made collections themselves and paid revenue of their respective shares and that under the terms of the wajib-ul-arz of 1285 fasli the lambardar of the village was not entitled to any remuneration. At the settlement of 1285 fasli before the Board of Revenue had issued the rules under the U. P. Land Rev. Act, there was an agreement between the cosharers that the lambardar should receive no remuneration. At a subsequent settlement in 1312 Fasli the plff. lambardar contended that this agreement was abrogated. There was no evidence that it had been abrogated or reaffirmed. Held that if the cosharers as a body desired to contract themselves out of the rule framed by the Board of Revenue they ought to have agreed upon some nominal remuneration for the lambardar. The lambardar is placed in a strong position; he can bargain with the co-sharers for some reasonable remuneration, under threat of standing upon his extreme rights and claiming his full 5 per cent on the land revenue. The agreement relied upon by the defts. (cosharers) even if it survived the enactment of the Board of Revenue's Rules came to an end automatically at the close of the settlement for which it was made and could have no effect on the rights of the lambardar thereafter, at any rate, unless it was proved that it was expressly renewed. ## COSTS—Discretion of Court—Change in the view of law—Successful party when to be deprived of costs.

The ordinary rule is that costs follow the event and that if the plaintiff finds himself unable to proceed with his suit and asks for leave to withdraw it, then the opposite party is entitled to the costs which he has been put to in defending the suit. The granting of leave to withdraw from a suit is a concession because the defendant is ordinarily entitled to ask the Court to decide the suit on the merits, and if he wins, he would be entitled to his costs. In a particular case it may be a sound exercise of discretion to refuse costs where the suit is based on a state of law, which has been afterwards altered either by statute or by the decision of a superior tribunal, and that might be a good ground for the decision in the additional sum of Rs. 409-6-0 interest accruing up to the date of payment, a final decree was passed on the 29th April, 1920. The plaintiffs filed appeals from both these decrees asking for reduction of the amount fixed in the preliminary decree by Rs. 32,225-11-7. On the appeal from the preliminary decree the plaintiffs paid Court-fees ad valorem on the sum by which they wished the amount fixed therein to be reduced. On the appeal from the final decree they paid a Court-fee of Rs. 2 only. Held, the preliminary decree decided what the amount payable was and in the appeal from it the appellants contested the amount and paid full Court-fee on the relief claimed by them. The final decree is a mere corollary to the preliminary decree and followed it as a matter of course, the plaintiffs having paid into Court the amount fixed, there was nothing fresh for the Court to decide before it passed that decree, and the appeal from that decree is really of a formal nature, and does not contest anything beyond what is contested in the appeal from the preliminary decree. But if any future interest is determined by the trial court and is entered in the decree, additional court fee on such interest has to be paid. If the appellate court grants him a decree for an amount larger than that claimed in the court below, court fee must be paid on the difference and unless this is done the decree cannot be executed (Jwala Prasad, J.) *KALI PRASAD SINGH v. same can bring suits separately on both bonds. In other words, there is nothing to prevent a mortgagee from suing on the first mortgage without joining the second and vice versa. If that is so, there can be no question that the mortgages were separate subjects and one under S. 17 of the Court Fees Act. The ordinary meaning of the word "subject" when used in law is a thing or matter, over which a right is exercised, and the two mortgages were certainly two distinct matters. —BENGAL ACT,—if ultra vires—Grant of letters of administration—Property outside Bengal—Levy of fees—Legality.

Under the provisions of sec. 80 A (1) of the Government of India Act the Local Legislature has power to make laws for the peace and good government of the territories of the Province, and under sec. 80 A (2) the Local Legislature may, subject as therein mentioned, that is to say, subject to the limitations mentioned in (3), repeal or alter as to that Province any law made before or after the commencement of the Act by any authority in British India.

The limitations imposed by S. 80 (3) relate (a) to the imposition of new taxes other than those set out in Sch. I of the Scheduled Taxes Rules. It is quite true that duties, which are collected by means of stamps are in a sense stamp duties, for instance in England, estate duty, probate duty and succession duty are stamp duties because they are so collected, but it is doubtful whether a Court fee becomes a stamp duty within the meaning of the Scheduled Taxes Rules, Sch. I because it is collected by means of stamps. The stamp duties referred to in Sch. I mean some such duties are imposed by the Indian Stamp Act, and do not comprise court-fees comprised in the Court-Fees Act, even although in a sense they are stamp duties as being paid by stamps.

The sum charged upon a grant of probate or of letters of administration is not a tax or duty levied upon the property upon which the probate or administration operates, and it is not charged thereon as is estate duty in England, but it is merely a fee levied by the Court issuing the probate or letters of administration for the work done in this connection. This is so in spite of the fact that the fee is levied upon the value of the property. Courtfee on probate or letters of administration is rightly levied at the enhanced rate on the value of all assets whether in the province or outside. Where a plaint or a memorandum of appeal asks only for a pure declaration, the court in computing court fees cannot go into the question whether he should also have asked for consequential relief. The effect of failing to claim consequential relief is for the final decision of the court. A fixed fee under Sch. II, Art. 17 (ii) is sufficient. (B. B. Ghose, J.) *IDOL SRI SRI GOKUL NATH JIN v. A memorandum of appeal was filed before the Assistant Registrar of the High Court of Patna on 18—1—1922 when the old Court Fees Act was in force with the Court-fee prescribed by that Act. The new Bihar and Orissa Court-Fees Act (II of 1922) came into force on 24—8—1922 under which a larger court fee should have been paid by the appellant. The High Court of Patna was closed for the long vacation from 4—8—1922 to 22—10—1922 though the offices were open and the Registrar was on duty. Under Ch. II, R. 13 (3) of the Patna High Court Rules the Registrar is the proper person to receive memorandum of appeals. The appeal was filed and numbered only after the re-opening of the Court and the Taxing Officer required payment of the full court-fee under the Amending Act II of 1922.

Held (1) that there was nothing to prevent the presentation of the appeal during the vacation to a proper officer and such presentation is a valid presentation. 9 A 366 Ref.

Three petitioners were proceeded against under S. 108 Cr. P. Code as the author, printer and publisher respectively of a pamphlet which offended Ss. 124 A and 153 A, I. P. C. The names of the three persons were printed on the pamphlet as its author, printer and publisher. There was no direct evidence to connect any of the three persons with the pamphlet in question or of the dissemination thereof. From the written information furnished by the second petitioner under S. 18 of the Press and Registration of Books Act it appeared that the three petitioners were the author, printer and publisher of the pamphlet. The declaration made under S. 4 of the Act mentioned the second petitioner as the keeper of the press. Held that on the evidence there was nothing to prove that the first petitioner was the author of the pamphlet. Though the second petitioner was the printer, yet as he was not shown to have had any knowledge of the matter published in it, there was no case against him. In 1922 the petitioner was suspected on three occasions under section 457, Penal Code, and on two of these occasions his house was searched. It was however, admitted that though the petitioner's house was searched on two occasions no stolen property was ever found in his house and as to his having been suspected of having committed an offence under section 457, the petitioner was never criminally prosecuted and no written complaints were ever made to the police against him. The petitioner produced many witnesses of respectable position who testified to his good character and who deposed that he was not a habitual thief by reputation. Held that the evidence on the record was not sufficient to justify action being taken against him under section 110. the character of his neighbourhood and as to the persons reputed to be of bad character and likely to cause trouble. These enquiries are necessary to an executive officer having to inform himself of the nature of the population committed to his charge but where it is shown, that the Magistrate has allowed actual information ad hominem to influence his judgment in a judicial decision against particular individuals brought before him by process of law, his order would be quashed as being vitiated by the admission of such information. —S. 110—Evidence of suspicion.

Evidence as to the accused having been suspected in particular cases is clearly not evidence on the basis of which any person could be bound over, yet when evidence of general repute has been given, the facts that the accused have been suspected in a large number of cases may be admissible as corroboration. Conversely the fact that the accused had never been suspected in any case might tend to weaken the evidence of general repute. (Daniels, J.) GUDRI KHATIK v. EMPEROR. 1923 A. 595.

—Ss. 110 and 117 cl. (4)—Joint trial of several accused—Evidence of bad repute—Prejudice.

Ordinarily under S. 110 of the Cr. P. Code every person has to be tried separately for the offences enumerated therein. A joint trial is only permissible when two or more persons have been associated for the purpose of committing the offences mentioned in S. 110 cl. (a) to (f) which are under enquiry. Unless this circumstance is established, a joint trial is illegal and the conviction would be set aside. In a case under S. 110 of the Cr. P. Code in which the evidence of bad character of the accused persons and of the individual notorious acts committed by them form integral part of the offence, it is impossible to conceive that the evidence led against one will not prejudice the case of the other accused persons assembled together in the same dock (Jwala Prasad and Ross, JJ.) JAI SAO v. In proceedings under S. 110, Cr. P. Code against a particular individual evidence should be confined to his case alone unless the case is that he has a confederate or partner to whom all the evidence is equally applicable. Where witnesses voluntarily come forward as friends or associates of the accused and give evidence it ought not to be brushed aside unless the witnesses are discredited as regards their good faith and honesty. Evidence of general repute by persons having no personal knowledge of the accused is insufficient. It is open to a District Magistrate to lay down rules for the guidance of his subordinates so as not to allow an unnecessary large number of witnesses to be examined. In revision the High Court would weigh the evidence and see whether the case has been considered from the point of view of the accused and if the evidence for the defence is equally good as that of the prosecution, the High Court would quash the conviction. Mere repetitions unaccompanied by direct evidence personally affecting each accused or accompanied by direct evidence which is worthless and incredible, is insufficient in a case under S. 140, Cr. P. C. (Walsh, J.) ANGNOO SINGH v. EMPEROR. 45 A. 109 : 71 I. C. 865 : 24 Cr. L. J. 257 : 1923 A. 25

S. 114, Cr. P. Code, contains two stringent elements obviously directed against any ill-considered precipitancy on the part of the magistrate. —S. 118—Security for good behaviour—Forfeiture—Commission of offence—Proof of

When security is given for good behaviour, neither the principal nor surety can be made liable for an offence which occurred before the security was given. The period for which a person is bound over to be of good behaviour begins from the date on which he was bound over.

The conditions under which a security bond taken under Chapter VIII, Criminal Procedure Code, may be forfeited are given in S. 121. In the case of a bond for good behaviour taken under the provisions of S. 110, Criminal Procedure Code, the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond. The word "commission" in this section does not necessarily imply a conviction. It is true that the conviction is ordinarily considered necessary to establish that an offence has been committed.

At the same time there is no authority for the extreme view that the commission of an offence cannot be proved otherwise than by a conviction, the flight of a person accused of dacoity to the independent Afridi territory raises the strongest possible presumption of the absconder to join a band of dacoits. In such cases, a bond for good behaviour given under S. 118, Criminal Proce-

Mere solvency of the surety may not invariably be sufficient to ensure the good conduct of the accused, any more than his residing at a district place may be a sufficient ground for rejecting him. If the sureties undertake to keep the accused within the area of their observation supervision and control, there can be no inherent objection to their being accepted, though they live 18 miles from the place of the accused (*Kanhaya Lal, J. —Ss 133, 134 and 135—Highway—Obstruction—Duty of Magistrate to determine whether a place is highway—Communication of order

When an order under S. 133 Cr. P. Code is communicated to those concerned, it is immaterial that the method in which it was served on them is not strictly in accordance with the provisions of S. 134 Criminal Procedure Code.

The duty of determining whether the site of the obstructions is a public place or a public way is cast by statute on the Magistrate in the first instance, and under no circumstances can it be left to the Jury. If the Magistrate finds on the parties appearing before him to show cause against the conditional order that a question of title to the locus in quo is involved, he must refuse to act in the particular case unless he comes to the conclusion that the claim of title is not bona fide. Further, unless he finds that the place or the way, as the case may be, is public, he has no power to proceed with the investigation, where it is apparent on the face of the order itself that this question which goes to the root of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, has been wrongly left to the jury the proceedings are bad.

Where questions as to public nature or private ownership of the locus of an obstruction are left to a jury, the order of the Magistrate referring to the determination of such a question to the jury is bad and should be quashed.

This has been held even in cases where the defect in the proceedings does not appear, that is, where a want or an excess of jurisdiction is apparent on the face of the proceedings themselves. Where the order of the Magistrate is itself indefinite or ambiguous, the objection to allowing an order in such a case to stand is far stronger (Scott Smith and Forde, JJ.) KHUSHI RAM v EMPEROR. 4 Lah. 224 : 5 Lah. The Magistrate must deal with an alleged "public" way even though it is disputed. But it is obvious that these summary powers were or mainly intended to be exercised in cases where there was no question that the way was one vested in the public, and when that question is seriously disputed, and its decision becomes a difficult matter of mixed fact and law, a Magistrate clearly has jurisdiction to exercise his discretion by declining to decide it, and sending the parties to a civil court. It is not open to the Magistrate to convert private property into public merely because it looks as though it ought to be, and because to do so would be convenient to a section of the public who have enjoyed permissive user over it. —S. 144—Scope of—Jurisdiction.

Under S. 144 Cr. P. Code, a magistrate has no jurisdiction to make any order unless he is satisfied there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace and that immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable. If he has made up his mind it is so, he must state the material facts in the order. The section is applicable only to temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger and not to cases where there is a dispute as to land for the settlement of which S. 145 provides the proper remedy. (Kulwant Sahay, J.) AKAL MAHTON v. MAHABIR MAHTON. 1 Pat. L. R. 223 (Cr.).

—S. 144 (4)—Order made by subordinate Magistrate without jurisdiction—Revision before High Court without going to District Magistrate—Competency of—Interference

Under S. 144 (4) Cr. P. Code, when an order is passed by a subordinate Magistrate, the District Magistrate has full power to rescind or alter the order and the ordinary practice is that parties should in the first instance approach the District Magistrate before going up to the High Court. But where the order passed is one entirely outside the scope of the section and thus made without jurisdiction, it must be taken as an order unauthorised by the Code, and as such revisable under S. 107 Government of India Act by the High Court. There is neither revisional nor appellate jurisdiction in the Magistrate under S. 144, Cl. 4, Cr. P. Where a magistrate finds there is not likelihood of a breach of the peace and refuses to take action under S. 148 CrI. —S. 145—Breach of the peace—Successive proceedings—Legality of—Submerged land.

Where possession proceedings have once been started and one of the parties has been declared to have been in possession of the disputed property, it is the duty of the Magistrate to see that his possession is not thereafter disturbed. The order of the Magistrate is binding on all the parties and the unsuccessful party cannot be allowed to disturb the possession of the other party without having recourse to law. It is not proper for a magistrate to initiate fresh proceedings under S. 145 for keeping the peace. The mere fact that the lands in respect of which a previous order under S. 145 has been made, have been submerged does not affect the force of the order under the section (Ghose and Chotzner, JJ.) ARAN SARDAR v. HARA SUNDAR MAJUMDAR. 27 C. W. N. 171 : 37 C. L. J. 30 : 71 I. C. 225 : 24 Cr. L. J. 97 : 1923 Cal. 95

—S. 145—Compromise of proceedings—Continuation—irregularity.

Pending proceedings under S. 145 Cr. P. Code, parties reported to court that they had agreed that the first party was to be in possession, whereupon the file was consigned to the record room. On a complaint made a few days later by the first party of dispossession, the Court revived the proceedings and ordered possession to him Held the proceedings were in continuation of the old order and there was nothing irregular. ## CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 145.

—S. 145—Different plots of land Different parties interested—Single proceedings—Legality of.

Proceedings under S. 145 Cr. P. Code are not without jurisdiction because some of the parties are concerned only with possession of a portion of the lands in dispute. To require a magistrate to hold separate proceedings in respect of each plot of land claimed by each of the ryots would be to require him to undertake what would be almost impossible from the intricate character of such proceedings. The jurisdiction of the Magistrate would depend on the nature of the information, on which he has acted. If the dispute so brought to his notice is one likely to cause the breach of the peace, it would be impossible to characterise his proceedings as without jurisdiction because in the course of the judicial enquiry subsequently held the claim of some of the parties related only to particular plots of land out of the entire area in question (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) SAJANI KANTA ROY v. SHAMSHER ALI SHEIKH. 71 I. C. 699 : 24 Cr. L. J. 235.

—S. 145—Duty of Magistrates—Land in the possession of tenants—Parties.

In taking action under S. 145, Cr. P. C., Magistrates should state the grounds on which he is satisfied about the likelihood of a breach of the peace. Otherwise his proceedings are without jurisdiction. Where the dispute is regarding lands in the possession of tenants, they too should be made parties. (May Oung, J.) MA MA GYI v. KING EMPEROR. 2 Bur. L. J. 295.

—S. 145—Enquiry into possession by Civil Court—Effect of.

A Magistrate in deciding the question of possession under S. 145 Cr. P. Code is not in every case bound by the previous order of a Civil Court or Criminal Court relating to the possession of the subjectmatter of the dispute. The weight to be attached to any such previous order depends on the facts and circumstances of the case before him. When there is a recent order of a Civil Court delivering possession to a particular party, the order ought ordinarily to be respected and given effect to by a Magistrate under S. 145, Cr. P. Code unless and until there is something shown which might induce the Magistrate to hold that subsequent to the delivery of possession something had happened which had the effect of dispossessing the party to whom possession had been delivered by the Civil Court. (Kulwant Sahay, J.) RAMBARAI RAI v. SAGINA RAI. 4 Pat. L. T. 333 : 75 I. C. 363 : 24 Cr. L. J. 939 : 1923 P. 437.

—Ss 145 and 350—Enquiry under—Entries in Survey and Settlement Register—Decision of officer under the Survey and Settlement Act—Value of—Decision on evidence given before another magistrate—Propriety of.

It is open to a Magistrate in deciding a case under S. 145 of the Cr. P. Code to go behind the orders passed in favour of a party under the Survey and Settlement Act and the Bengal Tenancy Act. It is also open to the magistrate to hold that on the evidence the presumption arising from an entry in the record of rights has been rebutted.

CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 145.

S. 350. Proviso A. of the Criminal Procedure is limited to Criminal Trials and does not extend to enquiries under S. 145. Consequently a magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed with the further trial of a case under S. 145 Cr. P. Code even though a portion of the evidence has been recorded by his predecessor and an application is made to him on behalf of one of the parties to start proceedings de novo (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) SYED SADEK REZA v SACHINDRA NATH ROY.

—S. 145—Enquiry under—Evidence—Agreement to dispense with oral evidence—Recent decree of Civil Court—Effect on Criminal Court.

As the Magistrate is required in disputes under S. 145, Cr. P. Code to come to a conclusion on the fact of actual possession at the date of order or 2 months prior to it, an agreement between the parties to get the case decided on documents or without adducing evidence of possession is outside the scope of the section. Where however there is a decree of a civil court in execution of which possession has been recently delivered the Criminal Court is bound thereby. The Criminal Court must uphold a recent delivery of possession by the Civil Court. (Adami, J.) MAHARAJA PRATAP UDAI NATH SAHI DEO v BHAIJAIN SUNDERBAS KOER.

Code he has jurisdiction to pass final orders even though one of the parties has produced a decree of a Civil Court or writ of delivery of possession. It is the duty of the magistrate to maintain the auction purchaser in possession free from the disturbance of the judgment—debtor. The delivery of possession under O. 21, R. 95 C. P. Code does not affect persons who are not parties to the decree e.g. persons having encumbrances which have not been annulled under S. 167 of the B. T. Act. In proceedings under S. 145 Cr. P. C. the magistrate may well maintain the decision as to title passed, and possession delivered by a Civil Court in execution of its decree if such possession had been given within a reasonable time from the initiation of proceedings under S. 145, (Adami, J.) KEDAR NATH CHAUBEY v. JALESWAR RAMTEWARI. 4 Pat. L. T. 248; 1 Pat. L. R. 166 (Cr.); 72 I. C. 883 (2); 24 Cr. L. J. 467 (2); 1923 P. 364.

—S. 145—Power to go behind decree of Civil Court—Symbolical possession.

In a proceeding under S. 145, the Magistrate cannot go behind the decision of the Civil Court in the matter, if there is one such. The fact that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction or that the delivery in pursuance of the decree inter-partes is symbolical is immaterial. It is not for the magistrate to question the validity of a decree that has not been set aside by a competent court. (Newbould and Suhawardy, JJ.) ABHOY MONDAL v. BASU RAI. 27 C. W. N. 267; 1923 Cal. 176 (1).

—S. 145—Powers of Magistrate—Order for restoration of case.

In proceedings under S. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to order restoration of possession. The section itself contains no provisions to the effect that party in whose favour the order is made, is to be put into possession nor does this section provide any machinery by which the successful party can have his possession restored by the Court. All that the Magistrate is empowered to do is to declare that he is entitled to possession.

At the same time, if a party is declared to be entitled to possession, and the world at large is forbidden to disturb his possession, he would be entitled to take possession and no one would have any right to interfere with his doing so. (Broadway, J.) BAHAWALA v. EMPEROR

—S. 145—Preliminary order—Failure to record—Enquiry as to rightful possession—Revision.

Where a Magistrate fails to record a preliminary finding that he is satisfied that the dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists, he is not justified in taking any action under S. 145, Cr. P. Code. A Magistrate is not justified in deciding the question of possession without reference to the actual facts of possession before the date of the preliminary order (Pratt, J.) *NGA PO TIN v. —S. 145—Proceedings under—Duty of Magistrate to finish enquiry.

Once a Magistrate initiates proceedings under S. 145 Cr. P. Code and passes a preliminary order under the section it is his duty to complete the enquiry after taking the evidence offered by the parties. 2 L. W. 1208 Ref. (Ramesam, J.) VIRAPPA CHETTIAR v. KATHAYEE AMMAL.

—S. 145—Proceedings under—Jurisdiction to initiate—Breach of the peace—Omission to put in written statement—Effect of—Transfer of case.

In order to give jurisdiction to a Magistrate to proceed under S. 145 Cr. P. Code all that is necessary is that he should be satisfied of there being a likelihood of a breach of the peace and he should make a note stating his ground of his being so satisfied and require the parties to attend and put in written statements of their claims. When that is done and the Magistrate being satisfied on a police report made an order calling for written statements, the mere fact that party did not put in a written statement would not take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to proceed with the case. The proceeding being properly initiated, it was incumbent on the Magistrate to make the inquiry and to take such evidence as the parties offered irrespective of the fact that one or other of the parties failed to put in a written statement. The Magistrate would not be justified in refusing to proceed with the case because the parties neglected to file a written statement on the date fixed; he has to take evidence if offered by any of the parties and to decide the case upon such evidence. The basis of a proceeding under S. 145, Cr. P. Code is not the written statement but the police report or other information from which the Magistrate is satisfied about the fact of the likelihood of a breach of the peace.

If no written statement is put in, the Magistrate is bound nevertheless to hear the parties and take the evidence produced by them. The non filing of the written statement does not take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to make an order in his favour. It is open to a Magistrate to transfer the case to any other competent Magistrate for disposal where after the issue of a notice no written statement has been filed.

Where each party claims exclusive possession of one half of the plots in dispute, it cannot be said that it is a case of a claim for joint possession rendering S. 145 Cr. P. Code inapplicable. (Kulwant Sahay, J.) MR. RAMJHARIA v. PIAR KOERI. 4 Pat. L. T. 308 : 73 I. C. 173 :

—Ss. 145 and 435—Proceedings without jurisdiction—Breach of the peace—Preliminary order—Revision—Interference by High Court.

The omission to pass an order under S. 145(1) of the Criminal Procedure Code stating that the Magistrate is satisfied of the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace is not a mere technical defect. Where the Magistrate has not made the initial order prescribed by that sub-section and has also not made at any subsequent stage of the proceedings an order which essentially complies with the requirements of that sub-section, the proceedings are without jurisdiction and cannot be regarded as proceedings under S. 145 of the Criminal Procedure. Accordingly S. 435 (3) of the Criminal Procedure Code does not preclude the High Court from entertaining an application for revision in such a case (Martineau, J.) HAKAM v. RALLA RAM.

—Ss. 145 and 439—Proceedings under—Revisional power of High Court—Jurisdiction—Material irregularity—Evidence of possession not considered—Effect of—Government of India Act, S. 107.

Where there is initial want of jurisdiction proceedings, though they may purport to be under S. 145 Cr. P. Code are not really proceedings under it and the High Court can interfere under S. 439 Cr. P. Code but if the proceedings were properly started all interference on the ground of serious irregularity amounting to improper exercise of jurisdiction or improper refusal to exercise it can be only under S. 107 of the Government of India Act. 36 M. 275 ; 286, 41 A. 302 ; 37 M. Pattas and kist receipts are evidence not merely of legal right but of possession also. Where the Magistrate comes to a perverse conclusion on the question of possession after getting rid of the oral and documentary evidence in the case the High Court can interfere in revision. ## CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 145.

The object of S. 145 is to prevent a breach of the peace by a summary decision as to the possession of the contending parties leaving them to decide their title and right to possession in a competent Civil Court where naturally the proceeding has to be a protracted one. It is therefore incumbent upon Magistrates to dispose of proceedings under S. 145 as quickly as possible and with due regard to the rules of procedure prescribed by that self contained section. The procedure for the trial of a case under S. 145 is that laid down for the trial of summons cases where witnesses are examined, cross-examined, and re-examined, and then discharged. The Magistrate is wrong in treating the case as if it was a warrant case. (Jwala Prasad and Coutts, JJ.) MOTI SINGH v. DHANUKDHARI SINGH.

If the first party shows that the land in dispute is within the boundaries of the land leased to him and if on the oral evidence he establishes possession, it is immaterial that the land was subsequently leased to the second party. Moreover the Magistrate is bound to decide on a consideration of the lease of the first party itself, whether the disputed land was within the land leased to the first party; he is not entitled to go outside that document in order to interpret its terms. 75 I. C. 69 : 24 Cr. L. J. 869 : 1923 P. 546.

—S. 145—Question of possession—Decree of Civil Courts—Value of.

In proceedings under S. 145 Cr. P. Code, the magistrate in considering the question of possession should not go behind the decision of the Civil Court between the same parties. Where a Magistrate acts in disregard of an order of a Civil Court directing delivery of possession he acts with material irregularity justifying interference by the High Court in revision. Where the decree of the Civil Court is between the same parties it does not matter whether the delivery of possession is actual or symbolical (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) AKHOY MONDAL v. —S. 145—Renewal of proceedings—If allowed.

Proceedings under S. 145 Cr. P. Code cannot be renewed after the dispute has been settled and an order has been made that the case be struck off. Under such circumstance, a new proceeding which is based merely on the materials on which —Ss. 147 and 148—Proceedings drawn up by one Magistrate—Power to transfer to another Magistrate—Local inspection—Procedure.

Proceedings under Ss. 145 and 147 are criminal cases and a Magistrate has power to transfer such cases under Ss. 192 and 528 of the Cr. P. Code. S. 148 of the Cr. P. Code provides for local inspection whenever such enquiry is deemed necessary for the purposes of Chapter

CRIM. PRO CODE (1898), S. 148

XII of the Code. Such enquiry can be made either by any Magistrate subordinate to the Magistrate before whom the case is pending or by that Magistrate himself. The rule that in criminal cases the Court is only justified in holding a local inspection in order to explain the facts appearing in the evidence does not apply to S. 147 of the Cr. P. Code. Special provision is made in the Code for local inspection in these cases and, in cases, where rights of irrigation and rights of taking water through particular channels from particular reservoirs are concerned, a local inspection is immediately necessary. Although as a rule it is better to have such an investigation made by some other person there is nothing in law to prevent the presiding Magistrate from making the investigation himself provided he records what he saw and does not act upon hearsay evidence.

It is a salutary principle of law that the finding of a Court must be based upon evidence duly recorded by it and not upon the impression formed by the Judge on a local inspection of the locality. He can in order to elucidate the evidence make a local inspection and the object of a local enquiry would be only with a view to understand the evidence actually adduced in the case. Moreover, it is absolutely necessary that if a Magistrate makes a local enquiry he must make a note of what he saw and must place it on the record so that the parties may be in a position to know what impression the Magistrate had got by the local enquiry. It is possible that the Magistrate may have formed a wrong impression, and, if the results of his inspection are recorded, the parties would be in a position to know if there has been an error and will be in a position to remove the wrong impression formed by the Magistrate. Per Dawson, Miller, C. J. The information referred to in S. 154 Cr. P. Code is something in the nature of a complaint or accusation, or at least information of a crime given with the object of putting the police in motion in order to investigate as distinguished from information obtained by the police when actively investigating a case. The information referred to in S. 154 may come from more than one source and more than one such information may be recorded at or about the same time, but once the police have taken active steps to investigate, any written statements taken by them cannot be admissible in evidence as they would come within the scope of S. 162, Cr. P. Code.

Per Mullick, J. If the allegations made are in the nature of a complaint, the Police officer must record them as information under S. 154, Cr. P. Code and the writing will attract the provisions of S. 35 of the Evidence Act. In every case it is for the Court to decide whether the communication is an information in this technical sense and whether and when the Police investigation had in fact begun.

A choudkdar informed a Police officer that the accused had dealt him a severe blow on the head and thereupon the police proceeded to the village and took statements from the relations of the accused who however never made any voluntary statement accusing the alleged culprit. ## CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 162

Opportunity to accused to cross-examine the witnesses—Procedure if irregular—Examination of accused thereafter—Necessity for.

Where the accused was examined under S. 342, Cr. P. Code, the Magistrate asked that a plan should be prepared of the scene of the offence. This was not done, but the Magistrate personally visited the scene of offence with the prosecution witnesses and the Vakil for the accused, and observed for himself the relative positions of the huts and the plans from which witnesses claimed to have seen the acts deposited to by them. After this acting under the powers vested in him by S. 540, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate recalled some of the prosecution witnesses, and examined them in such a way as to put on record the most important point which he had observed at his personal inspection. The witnesses were then cross-examined by the defence.

Held that it was open to the Magistrate to use the evidence of his own eyes to test the truth of what the witness had deposed to, that the Magistrate made no improper use of his local inspection; and that, as he had really embodied the results of his inspection in the examination of the prosecution witnesses on recall, and the accused had a full opportunity of cross examining them with reference to the facts elicited, he did not use his local inspection illegally or in such a way as to prejudice the accused.

Held further, that; under S. 342, Cr. P. C., it was not legally incumbent on the Magistrate to further question the accused with reference to the evidence elicited from the prosecution witnesses after the framing of the charges when they were recalled by the Magistrate under S. 540, Cr. P. C.; though it might be highly desirable that he should so question the accused if the evidence contains a new matter of importance.

Where a magistrate who recorded a confession was called and he swore that he had all the police removed from the court room and also had the handcuffs removed from the accused before recording the confession and the magistrate also asked the accused whether he was tutored by any body and after being satisfied that the accused was not tutored by any body recorded his confession, Held, that any irregularity in the recording of the confession was cured under S. 533 of the Cr. ## CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 174.

Before recording the confession the Magistrate failed to question the accused as to whether he was making the confession voluntarily. Held this defect is a fatal one and renders the confession inadmissible in evidence. ## —S. 164 (3)—Questions by Magistrate recording confession—Form of.

All that section 164 (3) requires is that the Magistrate on questioning the person making the confession shall have reason to believe that it was made voluntarily. No express form of question is prescribed and the extent to which a Magistrate should question the person making the confession must largely depend on the particular facts of each case. There are cases which on the face of them attract the suspicion of a Magistrate and there are others which do not attract suspicion at all and it is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule on the subject. The Court must in each case satisfy itself that the Magistrate honestly believed and took steps to ascertain that the confession was a voluntary one. No particular form of questioning is necessary. 4 Pat. L. T. 168 foll. Even where confessions are properly recorded the Court must further consider whether they should be accepted as statement of the truth having regard to all the circumstances and the other evidence in the case. ## —S. 164 (3)—No question as to detention—Duty of magistrate.

Where an accused person was actually produced before the Magistrate as soon as he was arrested and was produced before him the next day for recording the confession Held that the confession should not be ignored on the ground that the Magistrate did not ask him how long he was in Police custody. It is highly irregular for the Magistrate to peruse the alleged statements of the accused made to and recorded by the Police Officer before proceeding to question the prisoner. A Magistrate should generally "question the accused closely as to his motives in making a confession." It is desirable that a Magistrate in recording the confession should put various questions to an accused to enable him to decide whether the confession is a voluntary one or not ; but, there is nothing in law which lays down that a Magistrate cannot satisfy himself as to the voluntariness of the confession by putting a single question to the accused person. The Sub-Registrar, after a protracted inquiry, passed an order on the 5th April, 1921, refusing to register a document.

An appeal was made to the District Registrar under the provisions of the Indian Registration Act, but the appeal was dismissed on the 28th July, 1921, and on the 2nd August, 1921, the District Registrar directed the prosecution of the accused for an offence under S. 471, Penal Code, and referred the case under the provisions of S. 476, Criminal Procedure Code, to another District Magistrate.

After the usual inquiry the accused was committed to the Court of the Sessions Judge, who agreeing with both assessors, has found the accused guilty of the offence charged.

A preliminary point was taken that the Magistrate, who made the commitment enquiry, had no jurisdiction to take cognizance inasmuch as the District Registrar not being a Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court within the meaning of S. 476, had no jurisdiction to proceed under that section. Held, that this contention could be accepted but the District Registrar was also the District Magistrate and as such District Magistrate he was competent to take cognizance under S. 190, clause (1), sub-section (c), of the Criminal Procedure Code, and to transfer the case to a Subordinate Magistrate in order that a commitment inquiry might be held; That officer had committed the case to the Sessions Court in accordance with law and the commitment was valid. —S. 195—Grant of sanction—Discretion of court—Duty of trying Magistrate.

The fact that a court sanctions a prosecution is no intimation to the Magistrate that the court thinks that there is a case to go to a jury or that he thereby is in any way relieved from his duty of considering whether the accused ought to be committed for trial or not. This view is not inconsistent with the duty of the court to refuse sanction, if it is clearly of opinion, on the evidence before it, that no reasonable jury should convict.

Per Oldfield, J. :—A Court granting sanction must put on record sufficient materials to demonstrate that its exercise of discretion has been judicial.

Per Coutts Trotter, J. :—A Court granting sanction does no more than say that on the materials before it, it is not apparent that a prosecution would be against public interests or a mere indulgence of private spite. Where the court is of opinion that the public interest would not be served by such a prosecution it is not debarred from refusing sanction even if there is a prima facie case (Schwabe, C. P. C., The proper attitude of the court and the principle that should guide it in the case of offences against public justice are exactly the same as those of the police officer who actually sees the commission of what appears to be cognizable offences. He must make full inquiry. He fails in his duty if he takes no action at all, but merely waits for the aggrieved party to complain and also if when such a complaint has been made, he does no more than scrutinise the evidence put before him by that party or that of the facts he happens to have seen himself (*Hallifax, A. ———Ss. 196 and 537—Sanction to prosecute—Order not given to determinate person, but communicated to competent officer—Effect.

An order of the Local Government under S. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code sanctioning the prosecution of certain persons for offences punishable under S. 121, I. P. C., was communicated to the District Magistrate, Malabar, the Public Prosecutor, Malabar and the senior special Judge, Malabar. In pursuance of the order a complaint was presented and a prosecution carried on against the persons named in the order by a gentleman, who signed and described himself as additional Public Prosecutor, South Malabar. In an appeal from their conviction, objection was taken that the order of authorisation was not to any determinate person as required by S. 196 Cr. P.C., and that a condition precedent to the validity of the proceedings was therefore wanting. No such objection was however, taken at the trial.

Held, the order of authorisation was sufficient in itself and was sufficient to justify the initiation and carrying on of the proceedings by the additional public prosecutor referred to above.

Held further that the alleged defect would in any view, be only an irregularity covered by S. 537, Cr. P. C. or S. 16 of the Ordinance I of 1922 and not an illegality vitiating the proceedings.

The order was communicated to the District Magistrate, the officer entrusted with the duty of initiating prosecutions for offences punishable under the Penal Code, and the Additional Public Prosecutor, who presented the complaint, must, under S. 114 of the Evidence Act, be presumed to have been empowered to initiate and carry on the proceedings, especially as no objection was

The complaint referred in S. 199 Cr. P. C. must be to a Magistrate. A complaint to the Police is not sufficient under that section. (Krishnan, J.) ARMUGA MUDALIAR In re, 1923 Mad. 59.

—Ss. 200, 202—Cognizable offence—Complaint to Magistrate—Order for Police enquiry—Arrest by Police—Legality of.

The Criminal Procedure Code draws a clear distinction between jurisdiction to try and jurisdiction to investigate and it is possible to conceive of cases where, although the Magistrate may distrust a complainant or delay in passing orders the police would be failing in their duty, if they did not arrest an offender against whom a cognizable offence has been made out. Much more so would this be the case where the Magistrate, after recording the complaint, finds that a regular police investigation would be more suitable and intentionally keeps the complaint pending in order that the police may exercise their powers of investigation and arrest independently of the Magistrate. The order of a Magistrate under S. 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code directing the Police to enquire into a cognizable case does not debar the police from exercising their powers of arrest and investigation in regard to the same matter as forms the subject of the complaint. Where a Magistrate to whom a complaint had been made passed an order directing the police to take cognizance under S. 379 I. P. C., make a quick enquiry and report, it cannot be held to be an order under S. 202 Criminal Procedure Code but it is merely an order directing the police to exercise the independent powers conferred on them by the law. Consequently an arrest made by the Police in the course of their investigation is not illegal. Even if the order was made under S. 202 the Police would have power to arrest and send up a charge sheet against the accused. A complaint recorded by a Magistrate under S. 200, Criminal Procedure Code constitutes "credible information" upon which the Police can effect an arrest under S. 54, Cr. P. C. even in the absence of a process issued by the Magistrate. (Mullick and Bucknill, J.J.) EMPEROR v. BHOLA BHAGAT, 2 Pat. 379 : 4 Pat. L. T. 521 : 1 Pat. L. R. 248 (Cr) : 24 Cr. L. Where a complaint has been dismissed, if the appellate Judge wants it to be set aside, he must do it himself. Where the dismissal was before giving notice to the accused, the order of dismissal can also be set aside without notice to the accused (Daniels, J.) MATA PALAT v. EMPEROR. 74 I. C. 715 (2) 24 Cr L J 811 (2). 1923 All. 479 (2).

—§. 204—Order under—Subsequent passing of another order under S. 202.

A complaint was made before a magistrate on the 22 d December and he passed an order directing that two accused persons be summoned. Subsequently on that date one of the persons against whom summons had been ordered to be issued appeared and laid a cross complaint. The Magistrate then rescinded the order passed by him and sent both the cases to a Subordinate Magistrate for local enquiry and report.

Held, that there is nothing in the Code which forbids the Magistrate to reconsider an order of this kind on sufficient grounds, and that the order passed by him was a right and proper order (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) LALIT MOHAN BHATTACHARJEE v NONI LAL SARKAR 1923 Cal 662

—§. 205 — Warrant case — Absence of accused—Trial in his absence—Magistrate appointing mukhtear to represent him—Legality of.

Sec 205, Cr. P. C., applies only to cases in which the Magistrate has issued summons in the first instance. It does not apply to a case where the accused has been arrested without or after the issue of a warrant.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to hear the case in the absence of the accused and jurisdiction could not be confirmed by any consent on the part of a Mukhtear appointed by the Magistrate for the accused suo motu.

CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), §. 205.

If the defect could be cured by Sec. 537, Cr. P. Code, his acquiescence would have been an important factor, but where there was a complete absence of jurisdiction to hold the trial in his absence the question of the application of Sec. 537 does not arise (Mullick and Bucknill JJ.) *ABDUL HAMID v. —§. 205 (2)—Prosecution under the Income Tax Act—Appearance by pleader

The petitioner was served with a notice on the 12 December 1922, by a Sub-Divisional Officer in his capacity as an Income Tax Officer, requiring the petitioner to submit a return of his income within seven days. The petitioner thereupon raised a question as to whether separate income should or should not be included in the income of the family of which he was a member. On the 11th February 1923, the Sub-Divisional Officer applied to the District Magistrate in the latter's capacity as an Assistant Commissioner of Income tax for sanction to prosecute the petitioner under S 51 (c) of the Income Tax Act, for having failed without reasonable cause or excuse to furnish in due time a return which had been called for from him under S 22 of the Act.

The District Magistrate granted sanction for prosecution on the 15th February, 1923. On the 14th February 1923 the Sub-Divisional Officer in his capacity as an Income Tax Officer reported to make a report to himself as the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, with a request for issue of a process against the petitioner and on the same date the Sub-Divisional Officer took cognizance of the case and summoned the petitioner to appear before him on the 26th February, 1923. On the 27th February 1923 the petitioner appeared before the Sub-Divisional Officer through a Pleader and prayed for exemption from personal attendance and for permission to appear through a Pleader. This prayer was granted by the Sub-Divisional Officer, and on the case being put up before him on the 28th February 1923, the Sub-Divisional Officer took the statement of the Pleader, wherein it was stated that the petitioner was not legally bound to submit a return and that the learned Sub-Divisional Officer had no jurisdiction to try the petitioner. Thereupon the Sub-Divisional Officer recorded the following order in the Order Sheet:—"He (the petitioner) further objects to trial by me. I have no objection to give the accused option to have the case tried elsewhere but, I am afraid, his attitude shows that he is bent on delaying the ends of justice anyhow. I cannot quash the proceedings at this stage on the objection taken by the accused without entering into the merits of the case. Before, however, writing to the District Magistrate for transfer of the case from my file, I must enforce the attendance of the accused, so I revoke the concession granted under S 205 (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure and order the issue of warrant against him with bail of Rs. 200; fixed 6th March, 1923." Held, that having regard to the circumstances of the case the Sub-Divisional Officer should not have revoked the concession which he had previously extended to the petitioner of allowing him to appear by

—S. 208—Failure to take defence evidence—Effect.

Before committing an accused to the Sessions, it is obligatory to record such evidence as the accused wants to produce. Where after the prosecution evidence was recorded and the statements of the accused taken down, a charge was framed without asking the accused if they had any evidence to produce, the whole procedure is illegal. (Kanhaya Lal, J.) KUAR JASWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR. 21 A. L. J. 911.

—S. 209—Case triable by Sessions Court—Preliminary enquiry—Grounds for committing accused.

When there is no credible evidence on which a Court could convict, it is the duty of the Magistrate to discharge the accused and he should not commit to the Court of Session. But a Magistrate holding a preliminary enquiry ought to commit the accused to the Court of Session when the evidence is enough to put the party on his trial and such a case obviously rises when credible witnesses make statements which it believed would sustain a conviction. It is the duty of the Magistrate to commit when the evidence for the prosecution is sufficient to make out a prima facie case against the accused. (Scott Smith, J.) MAULU v. EMPEROR, 4 Lah. 69 5 Lah. L. J. 276: 1923 Lah. 337.

—S. 209—Sessions case—Inquiry by Magistrate—Powers of Discharge.

In a case triable by a Sessions Judge, where the magistrate making the inquiry comes to the conclusion that the prosecution evidence is not worthy of credit, he has power to discharge the accused. (Martineau, J.) AHMAD v. EMPEROR. 1923 Lah. 279.

—S. 213—Charges exclusively triable by Sessions Court—Duty of Magistrate.

Where charges exclusively triable by a Court of Session are brought before a Magistrate and some evidence is offered in support thereof, it is not his duty in all cases to commit the accused to the Session. The Magistrate should exercise his discretion and after weighing the evidence decide whether or not he should try the case himself. (Malmsley and Suhrawardy, JJ.) EMPEROR v. HARI DAS MITRA. 37 C. L. J. 34: 73 I. C. 770: 24 Cr. L. J. 674. 1923 Cal. 103.

—S. 215—Power to quash commitment—Credibility of evidence—If a question of law.

A High Court can quash an order of commitment only if there is an error of law in the order. The question of credibility of evidence is not such a point, if the court thinks that there is some evidence which might properly be placed before the jury. (Leitnagie, J.) MAHOMED MOIDIN v. ## —S. 228—Charge under Railways Act—Conviction under Railways Act read with S. 149 I. P. C.—Legality.

CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 231.

Where the charge mentions only an offence under S. 120 Railways Act, a conviction under that section read along with S. 149 I. P. C. is bad, as the accused cannot be expected to meet that case in the absence of notice of it. (Kamesam and Wallace, JJ.) THAKKOTTATHIL KUNHAN, In re. 18 L. W. 946.

—Ss. 235, 239—Abduction and concealment on different dates—Same transaction—Joint trial.

If a series of acts are so connected together by proximity of time, community of criminal intention and continuity of action and purpose or relation of cause and effect as to constitute one transaction, a joint trial is valid, and is required in the interests of public time and convenience.

Where a girl is abducted on a certain night and thereafter various people conceal her, the first offence being a continuing offence, all can be tried together. (C. C. Ghose, and Cuming, JJ.) KUSHAI MALLIK v. EMPEROR, 50 Cal. 1004.

—S. 235—Charges under Ss. 218 and 477 (a) I. P. C.—Framing incorrect records—Falsification of accounts.

A police officer who took charge of the properties of the deceased lady misappropriated some of her ornaments and altered the entries he had made in the police diary regarding the said property and substituted some fresh pages to show that the said ornaments were never taken to the police station. He was tried for offences under Ss. 218, 409, and 477 (a) I. P. C. and convicted under Ss. 218 and 477 (a). On appeal it was argued that the trial was bad for misjoinder of charges. Held that all the charges were framed in relation to acts which were so connected together as to form one transaction and they could be legally joined and tried at one trial. ## CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 235.

—Joint trial—Joinder of charges—Legality—Transaction—What is.

The determining factor as to the legality of a joint trial is not its result.

The word transaction in Section 235, Criminal Procedure Code, has a very wide connotation and covers a series of acts connected together.

Where a proposal for a boycott is made by the President of an Association and shortly afterwards the secretary and a member take joint action to boycott the person against whom the resolution is directed, the inference is that they are acting in furtherance of a common purpose or, in other words, that they are taking part in a conspiracy. Acts done in pursuance of such a conspiracy must be deemed to be part of the same transaction. (Pratt, J.) EMPEROR v. MAUNG AUNG GYAW, 1 Rang. 604, 2 Bur. L. J. 224.

—Ss. 235, and 239—Dacoity—Several offences by same gang—Joint trial.

Where a gang of dacoits assembled on a highway for robbing passers by and in the course of the dacoity several offences were committed by them, Held that all these offences were committed in the course of the same transaction and it was not material whether all the members of the gang took an active part in each dacoity. ## —S. 235—Joinder of charges—Escaping from lawful custody, rioting, hurt and abetment—Joint trial.

Where a number of accused were charged with escaping from lawful custody, rioting, hurt and assisting in the said acts there is nothing wrong in having one trial, as everything happened in the course of the same transaction. (Krishnan, J.) ARUMUGA GOUNDAN In re, 18 L. W. 818.

—S. 235—Joint trial—Different offences and acts—Legality.

Where two acts were committed on different dates and there was no connection between the two so as to make them the same transaction, a joint trial is illegal. (Sulaiman, J.) SHAHI v. EMPEROR, 21 A. L. J. 859.

—Ss. 235 and 239—Joint trial—Numerous accused—Same transaction.

Where a large number of persons amounting to more than 300 persons were charged with and tried for the offence of wilful murder committed by the members of an unlawful assembly at a time when each of the persons was alleged to be a member of that assembly, the joint trial of the accused must be held to be legal under S. 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code. —S. 236—Alternative charges.

Alternative charges may be properly run against an accused person of the same set of facts, but alternative charges which include offences which do not arise out of the same set of facts as those with which they are linked, even though tried in the same proceedings, ought to be made clear to the accused before the trial and clearly dealt with in the Judge's final decision, (Walsh, J.) JODHA SINGH v. A charge under S. 54-A of the Calcutta Police Act might have been joined with a charge of theft under the provisions of S. 236, Criminal Procedure Code. Held, that as the accused could have been tried under the provisions of S. 236, on charges of offence punishable under S. 380, Indian Penal Code, and S. 54A of the Calcutta Police Act, therefore, under S. 237 Cr. ## CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 239.

—S. 237—Charge for one offence—Conviction for another—Legality—Test of.

The petitioner, was convicted of an offence punishable under section 54 A of Act VI of 1866 Calcutta Police Act.

At the trial the only charge framed against her was that she committed theft in respect of gold and silver ornaments, cloths and cash Rs. 13,410 in G. C. notes, sovereigns and coins valued in all about Rs. 18,000 from the room of one Khelwan Ahir and thereby committed an offence punishable under S. 380, Indian Penal Code. Held, that the conviction was valid under the provisions of S. 237, Cr. P. Code.

The legality of a conviction for an offence not charged depends on whether reliance is placed on S. 237, or whether the different offences of which the accused has been convicted is one for which she might have been charged under the provisions of S. 236, Cr. P. Code. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) TULSI TOLINI v. EMPEROR.

—S. 238 (2)—Witnesses—Order of.

—S. 239—Joint trial—Discretion.

Where a number of persons are tried for offences committed in the same transaction it is a question for the Court in the exercise of its judicial discretion to say whether the accused should be tried together or separately (*Maclean, C. —S. 239—Misjoinder of charges—Numerous accused—Murder—Unlawful assembly.

In determining whether S. 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code does or does not authorize a Sessions Judge not only to try a large number of the accused at one and the same trial but to try them on each and all of the charges set forth against them, under the orders of the committing Magistrate the Sessions Judge has to look to the case for the prosecution as set forth in the charges themselves. If according to that case the offences were such as could be regarded parts of the same transaction he would be justified in entering upon the trial of all the accused on the charges framed. It would not be necessary for him to consider what the position would be if he finally comes to the conclusion that no offence had been committed or that the offence committed was one which was excluded from his cognizance by S. 196A of the Cr. ## — S. 239—Same transaction—Keeping a gaming house—Using it—Joint trial.

The trial of the owner or keeper of a common gaming house under S. 3 of Act III of 1867 together with the trial of persons found gaming or present for the purpose of gaming in such house under S. 4 in one trial is not illegal. It is always necessary to justify a joint trial and to point out the provisions under which it can be held. The separate trial is the rule, the joint trial is the exception, and this trial can only be justified if the provisions of S. 239 Cr. P. Code have application. (Stuart, J.) GANESHI LAL v. EMPEROR,

— S. 239—Same transaction—Question of fact.

The question whether certain offences specified in different charges were or were not so connected together, that it might fairly be said that they had been committed in the same transaction, is substantially one of fact, and admissions on a question of fact made by accused persons can undoubtedly be received and acted upon by a trial court. ## — S. 247—Absence of complainant—Acquittal of accused—Effect—Bar of fresh trial.

An order of acquittal under S. 247 Cr. P. C. on account of the absence of the complainant is a final order which operates as a bar under S. 403 Cr. P. C. The presence or absence of the accused has no bearing on the question. (Foster, J.) KIRAN SARKAR v. EMPEROR. 4 Pat. L. T. 15 :

accused was tried and convicted of an offence under S. 379 I. P. C. Held that the acquittal by the Magistrate on the charge under S. 426, I. P. C. and that the conviction and trial under this latter Section were without jurisdiction. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) FAZAR PRAMANIK v. EMPEROR. 37 C. L. J. 253 : 1923 Cal. 407.

— S. 247—Acquittal under—Revision—Improper clutching at jurisdiction.

The High Court will not ordinarily interfere in revision against an order of acquittal, but this rule does not apply to an acquittal under S. 247, Cr. P. C. especially where the acquittal is the result of an improper clutching at jurisdiction. (Ashworth, A. J. C.) RAM NIDH V. RAM SARAN. 26 C. C. 283.

A Magistrate took cognizance on complaint of an offence under S. 352, I. P. C., examined the witnesses and closed the case and adjourned it for judgment. There was no express direction to the complainant that he should attend to hear delivery of judgment. On the day fixed for delivery of judgment the Magistrate acquitted the accused on the ground that the complainant had absented him-self. Held that the acquittal was improper and that the case did not fall within S. 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code. ## — Ss. 247 and 403—Autrefois acquit—Acquittal under S. 247—Effect of.

An acquittal under S. 247, Cr. P. Code acts as a bar to further proceedings equally with an acquittal after trial on the merits by virtue of S. 403, Cr. P. Code. 4 C. W. N. 346; 34 M. 253 Ret. (Ryves, J.) EMPEROR v. DULLA 45 A. 58.

— S. 247—Complainant absent—Accused not acquitted automatically.

S. 247 gives the Magistrate a discretion and the absence of a complainant in a summons case cannot result in the acquittal of the accused without the Magistrate passing any order in exercise of that discretion. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) SHERMULL v. THE CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA.

S. 247—Summons case—Trial—Warrant case procedure—Absence of—Complainant at adjourned hearing—Acquittal—Legality.

The accused was charged under S. 430, I. P. C. a warrant case. The Magistrate tried the accused under the procedure prescribed for the trial of warrant cases but eventually framed a charge under S. 426, I. P. C. a summons case offence. The Magistrate however proceeded with the trial under the warrant case procedure recalling the prosecution witnesses for examination and for further cross-examination and then eventually acquitted the accused under S. 247 Cr. P. C. on the ground that the complainant did not appear on the adjourned date of hearing. Held, that the acquittal was legal and proper. S. 247 Cr. P. Code lays down a general principle that a person charged with a summons case offence is entitled to an acquittal if the complainant is absent and there is no reason why this right should be denied to him simply because the Magistrate has adopted a particular procedure in the trial of the case. ## Ss. 248, 333 and 439—Charge—Acquittal without framing charge—When justified.

It is clear that there are only three contingencies under which a person can be acquitted without a charge having been framed against him (1) in summons cases by the operation of S. 248, Cr. P. Code (2) under S. 345 Cr. P. Code, when there has been a valid composition and (3) under S. 333 Cr. P. ## S. 250—Order for compensation—Information given to village magistrate—Liability of informant for false information.

A man who complains to a village munsif of a bailable offence knowing that the latter must in the ordinary course of his duty report the substance of the complaint to the Police gives information to the police just as effectively as if he went in person to the Police station. Consequently the informant is liable to pay compensation under S. 250 of the Cr. P. Code. 39 M. 1008 : 5 L. W. 290 : 4 L. W. 73 : 25 M. 667 : 32 M. L. J. 138 Ref. ## S. 250—Order for compensation—Non-examination of complainant's witnesses—Propriety of order.

Though compensation can be awarded in exceptional cases before all the evidence for the complainant has been recorded, when as in the present case there are witnesses present whom the complainant wished to produce the magistrate should have examined them before passing his order awarding compensation. ## S. 250—Order for compensation—Security proceedings.

S. 250 of the Crl. Procedure Code, by its terms applies only to a case where a person is accused before a magistrate of an offence and not to proceedings the object of which is to require him to give security to keep the peace. (Danids, J.) RAM BADAN SINGH v. JANKI.

A Magistrate ordered the complainant to pay compensation to the persons who had been discharged without giving the complainant an opportunity to show cause why such an order may not be made against him. Held the proviso (a) attached to S. 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code lays down that before making any direction as to the payment of compensation, the Magistrate shall consider any objections which the complainant on information may urge against the making of the direction. (Abdul Raouf, J.) MUGHLA v. MAHOMED. 1923 Lah. 458 (1)

—S. 250—Person includes a corporation.

The expression "person" includes not only a natural person but also a juristic person. 3 (39) of the General Clauses Act makes it perfectly clear that the word "person" includes "any company or association or body of individuals whether incorporated or not". (Shadi Lal, C. J.) THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE OF LAHORE v. RATTAN CHAND. 72 I. C. 623 : 24 Cr. L. J. 463 : 1923 Lah. 31 (1).

—S. 253—Discharge complainant absent but pleader present.

Where after framing a charge and the recording of some evidence, the complainant was absent on the date of hearing and though he was represented by his pleader an application for adjournment made on his behalf was refused and the accused was thereupon discharged by the Magistrate under section 253 Cr. P. C. on the same date Held that the order passed cannot be regarded as an order of acquittal (Ghose and Cuming, JJ.) IRISHIKESH SEN v. PARESH NATH MUKERJEE. 1923 Cal. 403 (2)

—Ss. 253 and 437—Discharge—Setting aside—Notice if necessary—Prejudice.

As a general rule before an order of discharge is set aside, notice should go to the accused. In a case where the order was set aside solely on a question of law and the accused was fully heard on what he had to say in his revision petition in the High Court, held mere want of notice was not a ground to set aside the order (Krishnan, J.) PARAVADA CHINA VENKU NAIDU, In re 17 L. ## —S. 254—Commitment to Sessions—Ground for—Petty case—Commitment to Sessions.

A petty case of robbery ought not to be committed to the Sessions simply because the Magistrate was a witness to the identification proceedings. The proper course is for the District Magistrate to send the case to another magistrate for trial (Ryves, J.) EMPEROR v. RAM JATAN 21 A. L. J. 420 : L. R. 4 A. 215 (Cr.).

—S. 256—Omission to ask accused if he desired to recall prosecution witnesses for cross-examination after framing of charge.

The omission to follow section 256 usually involves remand and re trial of the case from the point of drawing up of the charge.

The provisions of S. 256, Criminal Procedure Code, are imperative, and the accused have a right to be given an opportunity of further cross-examining the prosecution witnesses, if they so desire, after the framing of a charge. (Abdul Qadir, J.) MAHAN SINGH v. EMPEROR 72 I. C. 371 : 24 Cr. L. J. 371.

—S. 257—Failure to summon defence witnesses—Effect

Where in a case of murder, some defence witnesses were not summoned for the mere reason they were living at a great distance, there is such a grave irregularity that failure of justice must be deemed to have resulted. (Ayling and Odgers, JJ.) AYAVALI POKKER, In re. 45 M. L. J. 305 : (1923) M. W. N. 758 : 18 L. W. 899 : 74 I. C. 952 : 24 Cr. L. J. 840.

—S. 257—Refusal to summon defence witnesses—Warrant case—Effect

As a general rule Courts should always issue process on the defence witness, except when the court considers the application for process vexatious, which ground must be recorded in writing by the magistrate. Inability or even refusal to pay costs is not an adequate ground for refusal in a warrant case. (Marphersan, J.) DEBI SINGH v. EMPEROR. 74 I. C. 863 : 24 Cr. L. J. 831.

—S. 257 (2)—Scope of.

Section 257 (2) of the Cr. P. Code fully empowers a Magistrate trying a case to order that reasonable expenses of a witness shall be deposited by the applicant in Court before he is summoned. If the rule laid down in 7 P. R. 1898 was to be literally followed, section 257 (2) of the Cr. P. C. would become an entirely dead letter. One can hardly conceive of a case where an accused person would willingly deposit the expenses of his witnesses if he knew that he had only to express his unwillingness to entitle him to get his witnesses summoned at the expense of the Government. But the Magistrate should summon only so many witnesses for one hearing as he thinks he will be able to examine on that hearing, to save expenses of parties. The language of section 257, Cr. P. C. is imperative and the Magistrate has no discretion to refuse to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness merely because he thinks that no useful purpose will be served by summoning him as a witness to attend the Court. The only grounds upon which an application can be refused are those enumerated in clause (1) of section 257 of the Criminal P. C., and the Magistrate is not entitled to refuse the application of any other grounds. It is not for the District Magistrate to say which witnesses shall and which shall not be of any use to the accused, where the petitioner wanted to prove his presence in various courts on the dates when he was alleged to have made certain objectionable speeches and that the fact of his presence in these courts was recorded in the records. Held that the records should have been allowed to be produced without the petitioners having been made to undergo the necessary expense of obtaining certified copies. —S. 260—Summary trials—Judgment

In summary trials it is very important that there should be clear findings on questions of fact because it is only through such findings that the Court of Revision can form its own judgment with regard to the legality or otherwise of the proceedings of the trial Court. (Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.) JAGMOHAN DAS v. EMPEROR. 9 O. & A. L. R. 1001.

—Ss. 262 and 263—Warrant case—Trial as summons case—Effect of—Plea of accused.

S. 263 applies to cases in which no appeal lies and exempts the Magistrate from framing a formal charge in such cases. But there is no such exemption in a case tried summarily in which, as in the present case, the sentence passed is appealable. Further under S. 262, Cr. P. Code, it is necessary that in a summary trial the procedure prescribed for warrant cases shall be followed in warrant cases with certain exceptions. One of the distinguishing points between a summons and warrant case is that in a warrant case sufficient evidence to support the charge must be recorded before a charge can be framed and the accused called on to plead. Where this was not done in the present case, Held, that the conviction was illegal. (Newbould and Ghose, JJ.) NATABAR KHAN v. EMPEROR. 27 C. W. N. 923 : 1924 Cal. 63

Under S. 262 Cr. P. S. 441 of the Cr. P. Code does not abrogate the terms of S. 263 or S. 370 and a Bench of Presidency Magistrates imposing a sentence of imprisonment for an offence must record their reasons for the conviction. The omission to do so in a case where no record of the evidence was taken is a grave irregularity. 18 Bom 97, 6 C. 579, foll.

—S. 264—Summary trial—Judgment, contents of.

The accused were tried summarily and convicted. In the judgment all the Magistrate said about evidence was that the witnesses, for the prosecution support the statements of the complainant and that the statements of the defence witnesses were conflicting and he did not believe them, without giving any indication of what they said. Held, that this is not sufficient compliance with S. 264. The record should at least have shown how the witnesses came to be on the spot and how much affair they saw. (Daniels, J. C.) SALIM v. EMPEROR. 9 O. & A. L. E. 165 : 72 I. C. 948 : 24 Cr. L. —Ss 262 and 263—Jury—Power of judge to discharge, misconduct.

Where the question of misconduct on the part of the jury or of other similar sufficient cause arises the Sessions Judge has inherent power to discharge the jury and empanel another. It is true that the Code does not provide for such circumstances, but on the other hand, the presumption that jurors will discharge their duties without impropriety may explain the omission. The power to discharge a jury on such grounds is not to be exercised lightly nor until the Judge has satisfied himself by such form of enquiry as in the circumstances he can adopt reasonable grounds for exercising such a right exist. (Buckland and Cuming, JJ.) RAHIM SHEIKH v. EMPEROR. 50 Cal. 872 : 37 C. L. J. 595 : 73 I. C. 773 (2) : 24 Cr. L. J. 677 (2) : 1923 Cal. 724.

—S. 288—Evidence before committing Magistrate—Sessions Trial—Admissibility.

S. 288 of the Cr. P. Code clearly intends that the evidence taken before the committing Magistrate where the witnesses produced are examined at the subsequent trial may be treated as substantive evidence in the case. The court is not restricted to admitting the evidence of a witness duly taken before the committing Magistrate merely for the purpose of contradicting that witness when giving evidence in the Sessions Court but can read the previous evidence as substantive evidence at the trial. Where, for the purposes of justice, the adoption of such a course is found necessary by the judge. 21 A. 111 : 28 A. 613 : 24 M. 414 Ref. Section 291 of the Cr. P. —S. 297—Charge to jury—Evidence incomplete—Fresh charge after verdict—Legality.

It is only after the whole prosecution and defence case is concluded that the Court should proceed to charge the jury. Where under the impression that the jury wanted to acquit, the judge closed the case and after addressing the jury their verdict was taken, but on its turning out adverse to the accused, further evidence was let in and a fresh verdict obtained the procedure is absolutely irregular and a fresh trial must be had. Where the only issue in the case of a trial for causing grievous hurt is whether the right of private defence exists or not, it is a misdirection for the Judge to refer to S. 300 Exception 2 I. P. Where a Judge in explaining S. 100 of the Penal Code to the Jury omits mention of the apprehension of grievous hurt there is misdirection even though the whole

Section is read out to the Jury. On a charge under S. 326 I. P. C. the omission to refer to the provisions of S. 101 I. P. C. is a misdirection. Similarly where the statement of the accused before the Magistrate is put in at the trial, his deposition in a cross case should also be put in if he considers it as part of his defence. It is the duty of the Judge to warn the jury that the statement of an accused, not amounting to a confession cannot be considered against the co-accused (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) MAHOMED YUNUS V. Where there are two trials, one original and the other supplementary it is proper for the Judge to warn the jury in the supplementary trial that they should not be influenced by the fact that the first batch have been convicted. The second trial must be decided on the evidence on its own merits. As a general rule there ought to be uniformity in the convictions and punishments but it is impossible to apply this principle in all cases where there are two trials one original and the other supplementary. Where on a disagreement of judge and jury the case is referred to the High Court, the whole case must be examined with such assistance as is denied from the opinions of the judge and the jury. The opinion of the judge is expressed in the reference or at the hearing, while the verdict contains the opinion of the jury. The High Court is not in any way bound by them. (*Schwabe, C. In acting under S. 307 Cr. P. Code the High Court must act with great caution, as it has not the advantage which the judge and jury had i. e. to see the witnesses giving evidence. Where acting on the evidence of the same witnesses the judge agrees with the jury in acquitting some of the accused, while as regards the others the judge disagrees with the jury and wants to convict the accused, the verdict of the jury should be up-held. ———S. 307—Reference to High Court—Duty of the High Court.

The High Court's duties under S. 307 Cr. P. Code do not end by merely finding that the defence story is one which cannot be accepted. The High Court has to find out for itself whether on the evidence such as appears on the record it was possible for the jury to take the view which they had taken in the case with reference to the accused persons whose case had been referred to the High Court. ## —S. 307—Verdict of jury—Reference to High Court—Interference when justified

To justify a conviction for murder by poison must be proved that the accused knowingly administered poison to the deceased with at least the intention of causing him death or hurt. The most natural way in which it could be done is to trace possession of the poison to the accused. Where there is a substantial gap in the chain of evidence which one generally expects to see completed in a case of murder by poisoning and though the jury had not mentioned this point in the reasons which they had given for their verdict whatever may be the proper practice as regards asking the jury for their reasons in such a case as the present the High Court could not leave out of sight the fact that they had reasons for their verdict which they had not mentioned in answer to the Judge's question. Held having regard to the gap in the evidence which might be expected in the case the rest of the case was not so strong that the High Court ought to set aside the unanimous verdict of the jury. S. 310 of the Criminal Procedure Code lays down a special form of trial of the issue of liability to enhanced punishment in consequence of previous conviction. But this section is expressly made applicable to trials before the Court of Sessions only, and does not apply to trials before a Magistrate. Admission of evidence of a previous conviction and the framing of a charge under S. 75 I. P. C. before the accused is called on for his defence is not illegal. (Newbould and Suhrwardy, JJ.) There is no provision of Indian statute law, nor is there any principle of natural justice, which makes an accomplice, as such an incompetent witness at the trial of another person in respect of the offence in the commission of which he was an accomplice. A refusal to admit his evidence merely because the case is one outside the purview of S. 337, would be a clear error of law. (Mears, C. J. and Piggott, J.) EMPEROR v. The duty of a Magistrate under S. 342 of the Cr. P. Code is to examine the accused after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined, cross examined and re-examined. The filing of written statement, at the time of the plea in no way exonerates or exempts the Court from examining the accused as required by S. 342. A discussion with the counsel for the defence as to the number and nature of the witnesses the accused were going to call is not sufficient compliance with the provisions of the Section. Non-compliance with the provisions of S. 342 Cr. P. Code is fatal to the proceedings and the trial must be treated as having become illegal from the moment when without compliance with the section, the Magistrate called up in the accused to enter on their defence. made under S. 342 Cr. P. Code. Where the accused is defended by a legal practitioner an elaborate examination is unnecessary. Where an accused is undefended, the tribunal may well point out to him the elements of the evidence adduced against him which seems in his own interest to demand his explanation, but where an accused is defended by a legal practitioner, it would not be desirable to contemplate a tribunal entering upon a lengthy examination of an accused person which might easily develop into a recounting of the history of the whole case or into, what would be far worse, some sort of cross examination. —Ss. 342 and 537—Examination of accused by Court—Stage at which examination should be held—Irregularity—Effect on trial.

S. 342 Cr. P. Code requires the Magistrate to question the accused generally on the case after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined and before the accused is called on for his defence. S. 256 enables the accused to recall the prosecution witnesses for further cross examination after the charge has been framed, but while making it clear that the accused does not enter upon his defence until the termination of such cross examination, that Section says nothing about any second examination of the accused after the further cross examination. It is often desirable that the accused should be asked at this stage whether he wishes the Court to record any additional explanation but S. 342 cannot be interpreted as conveying a peremptory direction to that effect, if the Court has already questioned him before the charge when the case for the prosecution has been closed and the prosecution witnesses have been cross-examined. If there is any such direction, failure to comply with it, would amount to not more than an omission in the proceedings during trial within the meaning of S. 537 of which the accused would obtain advantage if he satisfies the Court that it has occasioned a failure of justice, but which is otherwise no ground for setting aside the finding of the Trial Court. Where an incomplete chalan is put up in a hurry before the committing Magistrate and the Magistrate recorded the appellants' statement in the way he did, i.e. the questions he put were not for the purpose of explaining circumstances appearing in evidence against him but to implicate him and others it is probable that the police knew he would make some statement if examined at once, but thought that he probably would not admit anything if the Magistrate waited until he had recorded the whole of the prosecution evidence. S. 342 of the Cr. P. C. no doubt allows the court at any stage of any enquiry or trial, to put such questions to the accused as the court considers necessary but the object of putting such questions is, as laid down in the section, "for the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him". Per Curiam—The provisions of S. 342, Cr. P. Code as regards the examination of the accused are mandatory and failure to comply with them is an illegality vitiating the trial.

In a warrant case the prosecution witnesses were examined and the accused did not avail themselves of the opportunity to cross examine the witnesses. The accused were then questioned generally in the case for the purpose of enabling them to explain the circumstances appearing from the evidence against them and they stated they would put in a written statement. The Magistrate then framed a charge against the accused under S. 411 I. P. C. and they pleaded not guilty and the case was adjourned. At a later date the accused cross examined the prosecution witnesses under S. 256, Cr. P. Code and the witnesses were also re-examined. Evidence was then called for the defence and the accused were not further questioned generally on the case after the cross-examination and re-examination of the prosecution witnesses. Held, by the majority (Venkatasubba Rao, J. dissenting) that there was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of S. 342 Cr. P. Code and that the trial and conviction of the accused were legal. 43 M. L. J. overruled, 6 Pat. L. J. diss. from (Schwabe, C. J. Phillips.

—S. 423—Appellate Judgment—Contents of.

A Criminal appeal having been once admitted it could not be disposed of summarily without considering the whole evidence in the case and writing out a judgment under S. 423 Criminal Procedure Code. If the pleader of the appellants did not appear it was the duty of the Magistrate then to go through the record and write out a proper judgment according to law. (Kulwant Sahay, J.) NEWA LAL RAI v. EMPEROR 4 Pat L. T. 552 : 72 I. C. 613 (1) 24 Cr. L. J. 453 (1) : 1923 P. 368.

—Ss 423 and 439—Criminal case—Remand for fresh trial—When permissible

When the trial before a Magistrate was perfectly regular the mere fact that he had held a preliminary enquiry does not incapacitate him from trying the case. It is not competent for an appellate Court to order a retrial when the trial in the first Court has been regular and the record of that Court is as full as the law requires it to be and there is evidence on record to enable the appellate Court to decide the appeal on its merits. If inadmissible or irrelevant evidence had been admitted it should be left out of consideration. (Pratt, J.) MRS. MAY BOUVILLE v. EMPEROR. 74 I. C. 72 : 24 Cr. L. J. 744 : 1923 Rang. 65 (1)

Where some of the accused in a case are convicted for terms of imprisonment for which appeal lies to the High Court and others are given lesser sentences, the latter are not bound to appeal to the High Court but should appeal as if they have been convicted in a separate case of their own. 40 M. 591 foll. The petitioner was convicted by a Magistrate under S. 143, I. P. C. and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 100. On appeal the Sessions Judge upheld the conviction and sentence and for her passed an order setting aside the order of acquittal of the offence under S. 379, I. P. C. which had been passed by the trying Magistrate. Held that the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to set aside the order of acquittal when he upheld the conviction under S. 143, I. P. C. It was not a case of altering the conviction which was within his powers under S. 423 Cr. P. Code. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) PROSARNA CHANDRA MAJUMDAR v. UPENDRA NATH SHAW

—Ss. 424, 367—Appellate judgment—What it should contain.

The provisions of S. 424 Cr. P. C. read with S. 367 are imperative and an appellate judgment should indicate clearly that the evidence has been gone into and tested extrinsically as well as intrinsically and that it has arrived at an independent opinion for itself. It must be not be a supplement to that of the trial Court, but one which would enable the High Court to dispose of the case in revision without the necessity of going through the record. In a trial for possession of cocaine, the articles were sent for examination to the Chemical Examiner, but his report was not tendered in evidence in the trial Court. In appeal the Court sent for the report but without recording an order under S. 428, Cr. P. C., refused the report and convicted the accused. Held the procedure was wrong and the conviction based on it illegal. (Sulaiman, J.) WALI MUHAMMAD v. EMPEROR. 21 A. L. J. 869 : 9 O. & A. L. R. 994.

Where no question of European British subject is involved, the Madras High Court has no power of revision over a sentence by the Sessions Judge of Bangalore, the proper tribunal being the Resident's Court. —Ss. 435 and 439—Interference by High Court suo Motu—Calling for records—Revision

A Court should be loath to interfere on behalf of a person convicted in a Criminal case if that person is an adult of ordinary intelligence when that person himself in no way contests the propriety of his conviction. Under the very extensive powers conferred by S. 435, Cr. P. Code, the High Court can call for and examine the proceedings of inferior courts if the necessity for doing so is brought to its notice in any manner. But before it does so it would have to be satisfied that there are a priori grounds for apprehending a miscarriage of justice (Stuart, J.) NARAIN PRASAD NIGAM v. EMPEROR. 45 All. 128 :

—S 435—Security for good behaviour and keeping peace—Order based on insufficient material—Interference.

The High Court seldom interferes in the preliminary stage with the discretion of a Magistrate taking action under the preventive sections of the Cr. P. Code but when the materials on which the orders are passed are clearly insufficient to support the orders the High Court will interfere. (Newbould and C. C. Ghose JJ.) NAFAR CHANDRA PAL CHOWDHURY v. EMPEROR. 38 C. L. J. 198 : 28 C. W. N. 23.

—S 436 (New Code)—If applies to proceedings under Ch VIII.

The present S. 436 (old S. 437) contains the words "any person accused of an offence" instead of "any accused person" and hence does not include persons against whom proceedings were taken under Ch. VIII (May Oung, J.) MAUNG THAN v. EMPEROR. 2 Bur. L. J. 285.

—S. 437—Further enquiry—Order for—Grounds for.

The mere fact that the District Magistrate does not agree with the decision of the Trying Magistrate is not sufficient ground for ordering a further enquiry under S. 437 Cr. P. Code. Moreover notice must be given to the accused before action is taken under S. 437 Cr. P. Code. 44 A. 697 followed. (Ryves, J.) UMRAO KHAN v. EMPEROR 21 A. L. J. 194 : L. R. 4 A. 89 (Cr.) :

—S. 437—Further enquiry—Order for—Lapse of time—Effect of.

Mere lapse of time is not a sufficient ground for refusal to order further enquiry if the Court feels that an offence has been committed which should be enquired into. Any other view would offer an inducement to accused persons to delay the proceedings. (Kotwal, A. J. C.) BIRJUBHUKAN v. JANRAO. 69 I. C. 633 : 23 Cr. L. J. 745 :

1923 Nag. 100.

—S. 437—Further enquiry—Order for when to be made.

Further enquiry cannot be ordered on the bare possibility of an offence being disclosed on further evidence being taken. There must be something on record to indicate that such an offence was committed or there must be something to show that further evidence is available, which has not been taken and which would support a charge for that offence. (Krishnan, J) ARUMUGA MUDALIR In re. 1923 Mad 59.

—S. 437—Further enquiry—Order for—Whether notice to accused necessary.

S. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not specifically mention that notice must be issued to the accused but it has always been held that notice is proper and there must be some special reason for not following the general rule prescribing notice. Where however there has been a second trial and conviction the trial would not be vitiated by the fact that an order for further enquiry was made without giving an opportunity to the accused before ordering a re-trial. The trial can be invalidated only if the accused can be shown to have been prejudiced by the fact of not having been given an opportunity of being heard in the proceedings under S. 437. (Pipon, J C) KHWAJA HASSAN v EMPEROR. 71 I. C. 360 : 24 Cr. L. J. 136.

A Court has jurisdiction to direct a further enquiry upon the same materials as were before the trial Magistrate. (Dalai, J C) HAIDER KHAN v EMPEROR. 9 O. & A. L. R. 868.

—S. 437—Further enquiry—When to be ordered.

A Sessions Judge can under S. 437 direct further enquiry in a case where the accused has been discharged under S. 253, but where no fresh evidence is likely to be produced the Court should hesitate before exercising such powers unless there are many palpable errors in the decision of the first Court. —S. 437—Order for further enquiry—Validity—Failure to consider prospect of public advantage from re-opening of case—Effect—Setting aside of order in revision—Jurisdiction.

An order directing further enquiry under S. 437 Cr. P. C. without regard to what is really the material consideration in such cases viz., the prospect of any public advantage from the case being re-opened is one passed without jurisdiction and is liable to be set aside by the High Court in revision. —Ss. 438 and 439—Revision—Application to High Court—No application to Sessions Court.

The appeal in the lower Court was disposed of by a first class Magistrate, who was empowered to dispose of appeals from the decisions of 2nd and 3rd class Magistrates under the provisions of S. 497 Sub-clause (2) of the Criminal procedure Code. A revision application to the High Court, without going to the Sessions Judge and asking him to make a reference to this Court was held to be not in order.

Ordinarily an applicant ought to go to the Sessions Judge and move him for a reference to this Court. But so far as the Rule in question was concerned the Court held that they could not discharge this Rule on that ground. The application having been heard and the Rule having been granted the High Court was bound to dispose of the Rule on the merits. —S. 439.—Revision—Interference with finding of fact.

Where an appellate Court has dealt with the evidence carefully and has not omitted to consider any relevant or important portion of the evidence, the High Court would not interfere in revision with findings of fact of the Appellate Court (Mullick and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.) *GAJO SINGH v. Except in very exceptional cases, the sentence passed by the High Court under its powers of enhancement should not, where the sentence has been imposed by a Magistrate, exceed 7 years rigorous imprisonment which a magistrate empowered under S. 34 has power to pass. —S. 471—Crl. lunatic—Power of Court to pass order for detention and safe custody.

The intention of the Legislature in amending S. 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code was that the Court in a case where it has been found that an offence has been committed by a lunatic, should confine itself to making an order that he should be kept in safe custody in such place and manner as the Court thinks fit. It is the duty of every Court to take action of its own motion in every apparent case of forgery or perjury which is committed before it or brought to its notice and to institute proceedings in all such cases if there is a reasonable probability of the prosecution resulting in a conviction. If this is done there would be no room left for application from private persons for sanction to prosecute. The matter of reasonable probability of the prosecution ending in a conviction is practically the only matter which a court has to consider in proceedings under S. 195 or 476 Cr. P. The trial of a suit after the ex parte decree against the defendant is set aside may be regarded as a continuation of the trial of the same suit which first ended in a decree for the plaintiff. The definition of judicial proceeding in S. 4 (m) Criminal Procedure Code is not opposed to this view. An Assistant Collector, after deciding to act under S 478 neglected to follow the directions contained in the second sub section of that section, which requires that if he concludes the enquiry himself, his proceedings shall be conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with chapter 18, Crim. Pro. Code. He framed no charge and although he made some sort of enquiry it was of a perfunctory character and when he came to write his committal order, he incorporated as the main grounds for committing for trial the reasons which he had given in his judgment in a Civil suit, with the result that there was nothing in any way resembling a proper record in the Committing Magistrate's Court. Held, that the trial was irregular, there having been no proper proceedings before the Committing Magistrate. 40 All. 32, Foll. (Walsh, J.) *EMPEROR v. —S. 488—Order for maintenance—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to entertain a suit for declaration—Effect of decision of Civil Court.

A Magistrate's order for maintenance under S. 488 Cr. P. Code has not the effect of taking away the jurisdiction of the Civil Court and it can entertain a suit for a declaration that the person who has been required to maintain another as his son not his father. The Civil Court could not grant an injunction restraining the magistrate from enforcing the order for maintenance but the plaintiff could ask the magistrate to abstain from giving further effect to his order in view of the finding of the Civil Court, (*Saunders, A. A private complainant was allowed to conduct the prosecution. ———S. 494—Accomplice witness—Corroboration—Dacoity.

An accomplice witness against whom a criminal case has been withdrawn under S. 494, Cr. P. C. is a less reliable witness than one to whom a pardon has been tendered under S. 337. His evidence is tainted and must be corroborated in material particulars before it can be acted upon. This is not so necessary on a charge of dacoity where the only direct evidence that can be given of association is that of accomplices. (Campbell, J.) CHHAPROLIA v. EMPEROR. 73 I. C. 808 : 24 Cr. L. ———S. 494—Scope withdrawal—Reasons

Where the Magistrate should have given his reasons for allowing withdrawal and did not act properly in passing the very brief order viz., the case is withdrawn, the accused is hereby discharged, without reference to S. 494 which could have shown him that his consent was necessary and that (under certain authorities) he had to state his reasons for giving that consent ;

CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 494.

Held : the absence of any statement of reasons in the particular case did not vitiate that order to such an extent as to make this case a fit case for exceptional treatment and to justify the setting aside of an acquittal on revision in the absence of appeal by local Government under S. 417. Order of discharge in summons cases under this section is an order of acquittal. (Abdul Qadir, J.) MUL SINGH v. EMPEROR. 72 I. C. 593 : 24 Cr. L. J. 433 : 1923 Lah. 163.

Where a prosecution is withdrawn under S. 494, Cr. P. C., the validity of the order is not open to interference in revision at the instance of a private party. The Court need not record its reasons for permitting the withdrawal (Mullick and Macpherson, JJ.) GULLI BHAGAT v. NARAIN SINGH. 2 Pat. 708.

———S. 494.—Withdrawal of a case—Interference by High Court in revision.

CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 496.

—S. 496—Directing bail before the Police investigation—Crim. Pro. Code, S. 202.

A Magistrate being of opinion that further inquiry was necessary, sent the complaint to the Police and directed further that if the crime be proved, the accused should be challenged in due course, and that if he gave bail of Rs. 2,000 he be released. Held: that the powers under S. 496 are very wide and cover a case of this kind (Lumsden, J.) NARAYAN SINGH v. EMPEROR.

—S. 497—Bail—Grant of—Considerations

Bail is not to be withheld merely as a punishment. Its object is to secure the attendance of the accused at the trial and the test to be applied is whether it is probable the party will appear to take his trial considering the nature of the accusation, the evidence in support of it and the punishment awardable. The power to admit to trial is not arbitrary but judicial. (Mookerjee and Chatterjee, JJ.) NAGENDRANATH CHAKRABARTI v. EMPEROR.

Persons accused of non-bailable offences should not be released on bail as a rule, but they may be so released if there are reasons for believing the case against them will not succeed and there are special circumstances justifying bail. The law is not that such persons should be enlarged on bail, unless and until the court is satisfied that there are good grounds for believing them to be guilty. (Stuart, J.) EMPEROR v. MT. —S. 498—Bail—Reference to sessions judge—Power to let on bail.

It stands to reason that if in the case of a person who is convicted and who has preferred an appeal bail is allowable, bail can similarly be allowed in the case of a person against whom an order has been made under S. 118 and which order is liable to be revised by a Sessions Judge under the provisions of S. 123, sub S. (2). At any rate, there is no reason why any restriction should be placed upon the wide provisions of section 498. (Ghose and Cuming, JJ.) AHMED ALI SANDAR v. EMPEROR.

A proceeding under S. 512 (1) Cr. P. C. is neither an enquiry nor a trial within the meaning of S. 517 Cr. P. C. It is not the function of a criminal court to decide nice questions involving principles of civil law, if there is a dispute between rival parties claiming return of property. In such cases, the normal procedure is to return it to the person from whom it was seized and leave the dissatisfied party to his remedy in a civil court. (May Oung, J.) P. R. V. N. —S. 517—Disposal of property—Order regarding—When can be made.

An order for the disposal of property regarding which an offence has been committed can only be made upon the conclusion of an inquiry or trial, and not on the application of a person subsequently made after the trial is over. (Moti Sagar, J) ABDUL v. GULAM MAHAMMAD.

—S. 517—Gold entrusted to goldsmith for making jewel—Pawn of jewel when made Restoration of property.

A goldsmith was entrusted with a certain quantity of gold and diamonds for making a comb for the complainant. When the article was nearly completed the goldsmith pledged it for Rs. 800 with a diamond merchant who had no knowledge that the property was the property of the complainant. The Court ordered the jewel to be returned to the complainant. Held that the order was justifiable. (Macgregor, J) CHAGANLAL v. MAUNG PO KAU. 2 Bur. L. J. 152.

—Ss. 517 and 520—Order for disposal of property—Power of appellate Court—Application by accused who was acquitted on appeal.

An application by an accused person who was acquitted on appeal of an offence under S. 411 I. P. C., to the Appellate Court for an order directing the return of the money is an independent application to the Appellate Court with a view to its taking action under Ss. 517 and 520, Criminal Procedure Code. No period of limitation is prescribed for such an application and it can be made within a reasonable time from the date on which an accused person is acquitted of the offence charged. The words "and take any further orders that may be just" in S. 520 of the Criminal Procedure Code are intended to cover cases of this nature and to enable superior courts to pass proper orders in cases where property has been erroneously disposed of under S. 517 of the Cr. P. Code. (Moti Sagar, J) KANSHI RAM v. EMPEROR. 4 Lah. 49 : 73 I. C. 937 : 24 Cr. L. J. 713.

A pledgor dishonestly removes from the possession of the pledgee certain goods and sell them to a third person for good consideration and the pledgor is convicted for theft, it is open to the court to pass an order under S. 517 of the Cr. P. Code directing the stolen articles to be returned to the pledgee who as the person, holding a lien on them, was entitled to their possession. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) GOUR M. HAN-DALUI v. merchant at a great distance, who has honestly aided in the detection of the offence, a criminal court ought to hesitate a long time before making an order of restitution, even if the goods were still in esse. When a question of bona fides and of title by purchase or otherwise clearly arises, the duty of the Criminal Court is to leave the complainant to his remedy in the Civil Court.

The jurisdiction to pass an order under S. 517 Cr. P. ## CRIM. PRO. CODE (1898), S. 526.

It is not incumbent on a Magistrate to hold a judicial enquiry on oath before passing an order under S. 523 Cr. P. Code. Such an order can be passed on Police reports and papers alone without an independent enquiry on oath held by the Magistrate with regard to the question of possession. —S. 526—Grounds for—Extra judicial duties of Magistrate—Suspicion Consequent upon the many extra judicial duties of a magistrate, where a magistrate in the discharge of his executive duties has acted in such a way as to raise in the mind of an accused person the suspicion that he was not likely to get justice when the Magistrate came to inquire into a particular matter judicially, it is advisable to transfer the case to another magistrate, especially where he is easily available. —S. 526—Grounds for transfer—Proceedings under S. 145.

Where in proceedings under S. 145, Cr. P. C. the Magistrate is believed to have made up his mind already on the question of likelihood of breach of the peace, it is no ground for transfer. The definition of enquiry given in S. 4 clause (k) Cr. P. Code which includes every enquiry other than a trial conducted under the Code of Criminal Procedure by a Magistrate or a Court, is not exhaustive so as to exclude an enquiry under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act of the nature above referred to. Any enquiry by a Magistrate or a Criminal Court subordinate to the High Court, can, therefore be transferred under S. 526, Criminal Procedure Code to any Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction subordinate to its authority, if the requisite grounds set forth in the section are established. S. 526 applies only to proceedings pending in courts subordinate to the High Court. Panchayat courts established under U. P. ———S. 528—Transfer of case—Notice to accused—Omission of.

The omission to issue a notice upon the accused before considering the transfer application is an irregularity but it does not follow that the order of transfer is illegal. It is not the object of S. 528 that a case should be transferred merely because it is going against a particular party. Where the trial magistrate has full power to enquire into the case, nothing should be done by appellate Court that may give rise to any impression that an attempt is being made to interfere with the judgment of the trial Court. Where a Magistrate who tried the case wrote a judgment, signed and dated it but owing to physical disability asked another magistrate to read out the judgment, this procedure is at least a mere irregularity covered by S. 537, Cr. P. Code. (Ryves, J.) Nur Mahomed Khan v. Emperor ———Ss. 537 and 342—Non-compliance with provision of the Code—Effect of irregularity.

The test to be applied in considering whether a particular infringement of the provisions of the Cr. P. Code is one which does or does not come within the purview of S. 537, Cr. P. Code appears to be this : "does the error go to the whole root of the trial? Does it in effect vitiate the proceedings? Has the court assumed an authority which it does not possess. Has it broken the vital rules of procedure?" If the error is of such a nature that the proceedings are vitiated in the very inception S. 537, Cr. P. C. has no application. But the mere fact that a certain provision of the Code is imperative does not in itself indicate that a breach of the provision vitiates the whole proceeding. (Stuart, J.) *Bechu Chaube v. under this Code, summon any person as a witness or examine any person in attendance, though not summoned as a witness, or recall and re-examine any person already examined, and the Court shall summon and examine or recall and re-examine any such person if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case.

The first part of this section is an enabling provision whereby a Court, in the exercise of its discretion, is empowered, at any time before it actually pronounces judgment to take further evidence either for prosecution or for the defence, and for that purpose it may adjourn the hearing of a case in order to procure the attendance of the proper persons. In many instances it happens that a new light is thrown on the case by witnesses for the defence and it then becomes desirable, sometimes in the interests of the accused himself, that fresh evidence should be called for. Where this fresh evidence is likely to prove prejudicial to the accused the Court should proceed with the utmost circumspection. It should not exercise its power under the section merely because the prosecution desires it to do so.

The second part of the section, on the other hand, is imperative. If the new evidence appears to the Court essential to the just decision of the case, and this must depend entirely on the particular circumstances of each case, the Court has no option but is bound to take the evidence. The case was tried by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates of which the Municipal Commissioner was a member and ended in a conviction. On objection being taken to the validity of the trial on the ground that the Municipal Commissioner sitting on the Bench of Magistrate was a person interested in the success of the prosecution within the meaning of S. 556 Cr. —S. 562—Mis appropriation—Meaning of—Cheating.

In S. 562 of the Cr. Procedure Code the word "misappropriation" covers Ss 404 and 405 of the Penal Code as well as S. 403 and the word "cheating" covers Ss. 418, 419, and 420 as well as S. 417. Indeed it appears more correct to say that those words were not meant to cover Ss. 403 and 417 at all, and only do so accidentally. 41 M. 533 dissented. 4 N. L. R. 18 ; 12 A. L. J. 465 followed. —S. 562—Order under, if punishment.

An order under S. 562 Cr. P. C. directing release upon probation of good conduct cannot be said to be punishment. It is one of the various kinds of punishments described in S. 53 I. P. C., what is done is that the sentence of punishment is postponed and something which is not a punishment is substituted therefor. (Kotwal, A. J. C.) BABA v. EMPEROR 74 I. C. 66 : 24 Cr. L. J. 738.

—Accused in same degree of insanity.

The medical and the local standards of sanity are not identical. From the medical point of view it is probably correct to say that every man at the time when he commits a murder is insane, that is, he is not in a sound, healthy normal condition, but from the legal point of view a man must be held to be sane so long as he is able to distinguish between right and wrong, so long as he knows that the offence he is committing is a wrong thing to do, so long as he has a guilty mind. (Shadi Lal C. J. and Le Rossignol, J.) SHER SINGH v. EMPEROR. 1923 Lah. 508 —Alternative charges.—Offences arising out of different facts.

Alternative charges may properly be run against an accused person on the same set of facts, but alternative charges which include offences which do not arise out of the same set of facts as those with which they are linked, even though tried in the same proceeding, ought to be made clear to the accused before the trial and clearly dealt with in the Judge's final decision. ——— Approver—Corroboration—Nature of.

As an Approver's evidence is tainted, other evidence which is itself tainted cannot be sufficient for purposes of corroboration. 71 I. C. 789 : 24 Cr. L. J. 145.

CRIMINAL TRIAL.

—Civil dispute—Duty of Magistrate.

Where a criminal case is launched on the basis of a civil dispute between the parties it would be proper for the Magistrate to consider whether or not the case was of a civil nature and if he came to the conclusion that only a civil wrong had been committed, he should have said so and dealt with the case accordingly. If, on the other hand, he was of opinion, that a criminal offence had been committed, though he might refer to the evidence in a manner equally appropriate to civil proceedings he should not have lost sight of this fact that he was dealing with a criminal prosecution and ultimately he should have disposed of the case purely from the stand point of the criminal law. Where the judgment of the Magistrate, is neither the one nor the other, it is liable to interference in revision. (Buckland and Cumming, JJ.) BHABAN PRASAD MOITRA v. HARI CHARAN BHATTACHARJEE. 38 C. L. J. 7 : 73 I. C. 938 : 24 Cr. L. J. 714.

—Complaint—Offence under S. 211, I. P. C.—Conviction under S. 500, I. P. C.

A conviction under S. 500, I. P. C. where the complaint and charge were under S. 211, I. P. C. is illegal 18 P. R. 1889 Ref. (Simpson, J.) GAYA BARDAI v. EMPEROR, 26 O. C. 44 : 1923 Oudh 4.

—Conduct of accused,

The evidence of conduct of an accused person, unless it is incompatible with his innocence, is in fact a make weight and nothing more, and care should be taken that it may not have an exaggerated effect. It depends upon temperament, surroundings and other circumstances as to how a man would act in a particular situation, and all these combine to form a most fallacious basis for assured conclusions. (Das and Adams, JJ.) EMPEROR v. DEWAN KAHAR, 4 Pat. L. T. 186. 72 I. C. 961 : 24 Cr. L. J. 497. 1923 P. 13.

—Confession how tested.

It is the universal practice of the Patna High Court not to rely or act on a confession which has been retracted, unless after consideration of the whole evidence in the case the Court is in a position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true.

This procedure will practically effect the same results as a rule requiring proof of the voluntary character of a confession, inasmuch as though these decisions require evidence of the truth of the confession and not of its voluntary character, the truth of voluntariness may no unreasonably, though not necessarily, be inferred where the truth of the confession is established.

There is no rule or law which compels the Court to raise an inference of improper inducement from the mere fact that a confession is retracted; but as a rule of prudence, the Courts in this country have consistently declined to act on a retracted confession unless the confession is corroborated by credible independent evidence. In the case of admission or confession, courts cannot ignore a portion of such admission or confession and act upon what remains of that admission or confession. It is settled law that an admission or confession must be taken and considered as a whole (Das and Adams, JJ.) EMPEROR v. DEWAN KAHAR, 4 Pat. L. T. 186 : 72 I. C. 961 : 24 Cr. L. J. 497. 1923 P. 13.

—Consent of accused or counsel—Irregular procedure—Effect.

Where a criminal trial takes place under a procedure which is not authorised by law, even the consent of the accused and their counsel will not validate the proceedings. (Broadway, and Forae, JJ.) ALLU v. EMPEROR, 4 Lah. 376.

—Conviction based on finger prints—Verification of expert's evidence.

Where finger prints are clear, an argument by way of deduction can be as sure a foundation for a conclusion as any based on direct evidence. It is not correct to lay down that a conviction based on finger prints is absolutely unsafe. (Oldfield and Ramesam, JJ.) EMPEROR v. VIRAMMAL. 46 Mad. 715.

—Conviction—Basis of.

An accused person can be convicted only on evidence that is actually on the record, and not on evidence which it is believed the witnesses might have given, had they not been won over. (Harrison, J.) MURAD v. EMPEROR. 1923 Lah. 128.

—Conviction—Error—Reference to repealed enactment.

Where the Deputy Magistrate overlooked the fact that Act 1 of 1904 had been replaced by the Poisons Act of 1919 and recorded a conviction under the Act of 1904, held this error, however, was not vital and did not vitiate the conviction recorded by the Deputy Magistrate. (Dalal, A. J. C.) EMPEROR v. SARJU PRASAD. 10 O. L. J. 208 : 9 O. & A. L. R. 867 : 1924 Oudh 32.

—Counter cases—To be tried by same magistrate.

It is always desirable that counter cases arising out of the same occurrence should be tried by one and the same court. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) JULISTHIR GOPE v. SHEIKH SAMIR. 27 C. W. N. 700.

—Credibility of accused—Subsequent conduct.

The subsequent conduct or statement of an accused may affect his credibility but it does not deprive him of presumption of innocence until his guilt is established beyond reasonable doubt. (Walsh, UMED SINGH v. EMPEROR.) 21 A. L. J. 765 : L. R. 4 A. 221 (Cr.).

—Cross complaints—Simultaneous trial.

The simultaneous trial of the two cases before two different Courts over one and the same occurrence is undesirable and unsatisfactory, the proper course is that both cases should be tried by one Magistrate one after the other (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) SHEIKH SAMIR v. BENI MADHAB GOPE. 37 C. L. J. 410 : 75 I. C. 364 : 24 Cr. L. J. 940. 1923 Cal. 644.

CRIMINAL TRIAL

—Cross trial—Prosecution evidence in each treated as defence evidence in the other.

Where two cross complaints are heard together the prosecution evidence in each being treated as defence evidence in the other, only one set of findings recorded and one composite judgment delivered, the whole procedure is bad. (Broadway and Fforde, JJ.) ALLU v. EMPEROR. 4 Lah. 376 —Duty of counsel—Admission of guilt—Duty of Court.

Per Mookerjee, J. It is not the duty of an advocate for a prisoner to approach the trial judge and apprise him that in his opinion the man whose fate has been entrusted to his care, has no defence to make. It is also proper that the judge to whom this confession has been made should not hear the case against the accused. (Mookerjee, Richardson, Ghose, Cumming and Page, JJ.) EMPEROR v. BARENDRA KUMAR GHOSE.

28 C. W. N. 170 : 38 C. L. J. 411.

—Duty of court—Approver's evidence.

A judge must direct himself to treat the evidence of approver with the greatest caution and suspicion, but nevertheless to act on his evidence if he believes it. A conscientious jury must treat the advice of the Judge with the greatest respect, but must nevertheless give a decision in accordance with their conscience. (*Halifax and Macnair, A. J. The fact that a subordinate Police Officer took the accused along with the approver to the Superintendent of Police as she was a confessing prisoner and it was necessary to decide which of them should be selected as the approver in the case is not admissible in evidence and must be ignored (Chevis and Abdul Qadir, JJ.) SHUA DIN v. EMPEROR.

would be justified in not sending up that witness as a witness for the prosecution and his absence at the trial ought not to be a reason for disbelieving the prosecution witnesses if they are otherwise worthy of credit. It is of course not for the Police or for the prosecutor to champion a particular theory and to suppress the evidence of a reliable witness simply because his testimony is inconsistent with it. If the witnesses called by the prosecution are otherwise worthy of credit, the Court is not entitled to disbelieve them simply because some persons, who could have thrown light upon the case, have not been put before the Court by the prosecution, (Mullick and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.) RAMJIT AHIR v. —Evidence—First information—Dying declaration—Difference between.

A discrepancy between a first information report and dying declaration makes it incumbent on the Court to examine both pieces of evidence with extreme care, but such a discrepancy does not render the dying declaration wholly unreliable (Broadway, J.) MULA SINGH v. EMPEROR.

71 I. C. 593 : 24 Cr. L. J. 177.

—Evidence—Identification—Mistake as to—Evidence if untrustworthy.

—Evidence—Witness not in attendance though summoned—Adjournment.

On the date fixed for hearing of a criminal case one of witnesses for the defence did not attend and the accused informed the Court that the witness was ill and asked for a postponement in order to enable him to produce the witness. The application was refused on the ground that the petitioner had not produced a medical certificate to show that the witness was actually ill. Held that the Magistrate, having once issued process against the defence witness, was bound to enforce his attendance. If he did not believe the story of the accused that the witness was ill he should have issued a warrant to enforce his attendance. The accused having obtained summons from the Court against this witness was entitled to have his attendance enforced. (Newbould and Suhrawardy JJ.) MIHIR LAL ROY v. EMPEROR.

—First information report—Use of.

First information reports are not substantive evidence of the facts recorded in them and a conviction cannot be based on them. They can be used to corroborate the witnesses who made them and are of value showing that they told the same story at the first possible occasion. If they told a different story in court, it can be used to contradict them or discredit their testimony. But it is not legitimate for a court when witnesses tell a different story on the witness box and contradict the report made by them to discard the evidence given by them on oath and to rely on the report. —Interval of three years between filing of complaint and trial—Procedure defective

On the 23rd March 1920 the Food Inspector of the Corporation of Calcutta filed a complaint in the Court of the Municipal Magistrate asking for summons against the petitioners under Ss. 574-495 A (1) of Act III (B. C.) of 1899 as amended by the Calcutta Municipal Amendment Act of 1917. The offence complained of was that the petitioners had been selling adulterated ghee on the 4th February 1920. The Magistrate ordered summons to issue for the 17th April 1920. On that date the petitioners appeared by pleader and the Magistrate passed an order directing that proceedings be stayed for six weeks as the Food Inspector was on leave. On the record no further order appeared until 29th November 1922. On that date the Food Inspector prayed for the revival of the case and the Magistrate directed the record to be put up. On the 16th December 1922 the Magistrate passed the following order, Case revived. Issue fresh summons for 13th January 1923.

Held : that the procedure which results in such a long delay is defective though not illegal. 24 C. W. N. 467 Dist. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) SHERMULL v. THE CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA.

—Joint trial Separate trials—Evidence taken in one used in another.

There were three separate trials of the accused. A witness was examined in the first case. All three of the accused had been present during the course of the examination of this witness. Counsel for the three accused agreed that the statement of the witness be read over in the connected cases as well. They agreed that their clients would not be in any way prejudiced in this way and it would be a great saving of time. The court accordingly had the Statements of the witness in the previous case read out in the subsequent case. Held that the procedure adopted of reading out the statements of witnesses recorded in the first case was irregular, but it was quite clear that no prejudice has been caused to any of the appellants. ## CRIMINAL TRIAL.

—Jury—Inadmissible evidence read out to jury by Public Prosecutor—Confession—Effect of Where in a jury trial for murder, the Public Prosecutor in his opening address read to the jury the confession made by the accused, which was inadmissible in evidence not having been recorded according to law, and the accused was sentenced to death for murder.

Held, that however, carefully the Sessions Judge had endeavoured to remove the impression by asking the jury to ignore the confession altogether, the reading out of the confession was bound to affect in some measure the minds of the jurors and the trial was consequently vitiated and the court ordered a new trial (Das and Bunknill, JJ.) DAMODAR RAMJI EMPEROR.

The jury are entitled to discount the evidence which has been given by the prosecution witnesses because of the fact that the witnesses who have come and deposed on the side of the prosecution are witnesses who are admitted by adherents of a party opposed to that of the accused. The fact that merely all the witnesses had been at sometime or other, concerned in criminal cases either started by them or started against them is a circumstance so important that the jury can hardly be blamed if they took that into their consideration and came to the conclusion that the evidence on the side of the prosecution was one which they could not accept. —Murder—Sentence—Political agitation—Ignorant victims.

The accused, who were ignorant peasants, were led to commit offences under Ss. 149 and 302 of the Penal Code by misrepresentations and preposterous promises of millennium the arrival of which was to be forwarded by courage and resolution on their part. Some of them entertained a belief that the person whose behest they believed they were carrying out was a worker of miracles: Held that this was a sufficient reason for passing on the accused the lesser sentence of transportation for life in the place of the normal sentence of death. —Plea of guilty—Conviction when valid—First information report—Record of confession

A first information report is not admissible in evidence at all, if in substance it is a confession to the Police

As a matter of practice in Sessions trials for murder many judges very properly prefer not to act on a plea of guilty but proceed to take the evidence as if the plea had been one of not guilty in order to ascertain the accused's state of mind and whether there is sufficient to reduce the offence to one of culpable homicide or only sufficient to affect the sentence.

It is not illegal to convict in a murder case on a plea of guilty, and in each case the circumstances must be examined to see whether the plea of guilty is one which should have been acted on. (Batten, J. C. and Halifax, A. J. C.) MANJIBO v. EMPEROR.

CRIMINAL TRIAL.

Statements embodied in police diaries can be used in favour of an accused person, but not against him. (Zafur Ali, J.) RAJINDAR SINGH v. EMPEROR. 1923 Lah. 516.

—Previous conviction—Not to be let in till the end

It is illegal to let in evidence of the previous convictions of an accused till the end of the trial, as otherwise the court is likely to be unconsciously prejudiced against the accused. This is the principal underlying S. 54, Evidence Act and S. 310 Cr. P. Code. (May Oung, J.) MAUNG E GYI v. EMPEROR. 1 Rang 520.

—Principal and agent—Liability for acts of agent—Possession of agent. See PRINCIPAL AND AGENT. 21 A. L. J. 481

—Private defence—Duty of Court to give effect to defence.

If on the record a right of private defence can be clearly raised the Court would give effect to it, even although not pleaded by the person accused (Broadway, J.) WARYAM SINGH v. EMPEROR. 72 I. C. 611 : 24 Cr. L. J. 451

—Private prosecutor—Locus standi.

In prosecutions for cognisable offences, the private prosecutor has no position at all in the litigation and the Crown being the sole prosecutor and custodian of the public peace. (Mullick and Macpherson, JJ.) GULLI BHAGAT v. NARAIN SINGH. 2 Pat. 702.

—Procedure—Questions put by Judge to the Jury in private chambers and not in open Court—Irregularity

After the Jury had retired to consider their verdict in a criminal case they saw the Judge in his Chamber and asked him for direction on a point of Law. The Judge and the jury both went into the Court room and the Jury in presence of the pleaders put certain questions to the Judge and the answers thereto were recorded. Held that the mere fact that a question was put by the Jury to the Judge not in open Court but in Chambers did not vitiate the trial and it was at best a mere irregularity. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) BILASCHANDRA BANERJEA v. EMPEROR. 27 C. W. N. 626 : 1923 Cal 647.

—Retrial—Murder—Inadmissible evidence placed before jury.

A confoss on which was opened by the Public Prosecutor and was read to the Jury in the course of the trial was not recorded according to law and had to be ruled as inadmissible. The Jury was informed that the accused had made a confession. Held that the statement may be very reasonably regarded as having been bound to affect in some measure the minds of the jurymen, however, carefully the learned Judge may have (and quite rightly) endeavoured to remove impression from their minds. A retrial was therefore ordered. (Das and Bucknill JJ.) MADODAR RAM v. EMPEROR. 1 Pat. L. B. 171 (Cr.)

—Search—Irregularities in—Offence committed—Effect.

CRIMINAL TRIAL.

Where the evidence is clear of the commission of an offence, any irregularity or illegality in the search can neither vitiate the trial nor affect the conviction. (Sulaiman, J.) ALI AHMAD KHAN v. EMPEROR. 21 A. L. J. 858 : L. R. 4 A. 252 (Cr.).

—Sentence—Considerations in determining—Motive of the offence.

In criminal trials the motive with which the offence is committed always guides the measure of the sentence imposed. (Wazir Hasan, A.J.C.) CHINTAMAN v. EMPEROR. 100 L. J. 54 : 1923 Ouch 180.

—Sentence—Fine—Extent of.

A sentence of fine should not be imposed which it is wholly impossible for the accused person to pay without ruining himself and without inflicting great hardship upon his family. The maximum fine to be imposed upon any individual should depend in every case upon his position in life. If the offence is of an aggravated type a sentence of imprisonment is obviously more suitable than fine. (Harrison, J.) ABDULLA v. EMPEROR. 5 Lah. L. J. 271 : 71 I. C. 998 : 24 Cr. L. J. 278.

—Sentence—Period of detention while under trial—If can count towards sentence.

The period during which a person was kept in custody as an under-trial-prisoner cannot count as part of the sentence, nor can the court order it to be considered as such. (Brasher, J.) DANGER KHAN v. EMPEROR. 5 Lah. L. J. 224 : 1923 Lah. 104.

—Sentence—Protraction of trial—Strain, anxiety and mental suffering to accused—Mitigation of sentence. See PENAL CODE Ss. 120 B, 420 and 511. 27 C. W. N. 821.

—Sentence—Separate trials—If can be concurrent.

Sentences passed in separate trials cannot be ordered to run concurrently. (Heald J.) NGA SEIN PO. v. EMPEROR. 1 Rang 306.

—Sessions Case—Omission to examine a large number of witnesses examined before Committing Magistrate—Inconsistent defences.

Ten witnesses were examined before the Committing Magistrate on behalf of the prosecution. Of these seven were not examined in the Sessions Court, nor were they tendered for cross-examination although an application was made on behalf of the accused that this should be allowed. It was not suggested that these witnesses were discarded by the Public Prosecutor on the ground that if examined they would not tell the truth. Held the accused was entitled to have them put in the box for cross-examination. Held further that the Sessions Judge erred in holding that the accused could not set up an alternative defence which was inconsistent with the first defence set up by him. By setting up an inconsistent defence there can be no doubt that the case for the accused becomes considerably weaker than if he settled his best line of defence and set up at defence only. But there is nothing illegal in setting up an alternative and inconsistent defence and the accused's pleader should be allowed to argue the alternative defence before the jury. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.)

—Stay of—Principles—Pendency of Civil suit.

There is no statutory provision as to the stay of criminal proceedings. The question is one of expediency and has to be decided on the merits of the particular case keeping in view the desirability of avoiding the possibility of conflicting decisions and also the necessity of protecting the accused in the civil proceedings in the sense that he should not be prejudiced.

Where the question in the civil and criminal court though arising out of the same transaction are different and can be decided independently of each other, a stay should not be granted, (Harrison, J.) TAJUDDIN v. TAJ MUHAMMAD NASIR.

Where in a case under S. 124-A some of the witnesses produced are Zaildars and Lambardars who have admittedly appeared as witnesses on behalf of the police in a large number of political or semi-political cases Held, that little reliance should be placed on evidence of such stock witnesses, and as to the police constables and Sub-Inspectors of police Held that where they have given a highly coloured and exaggerated statement with regard to the whole affair, it is impossible to sustain the convictions on their oral evidence alone where it is contradicted by their own police diaries. CRIMINAL TRIBES ACT, s. 22—Conviction under—Solitary confinement if can be ordered.

CUSTOM—Court's duty.

4 Lah. 202 : 73 I. C. 898 : 1923 Lah. 448.

—Deductions not permissible.

Custom is not always logical and the Courts should guard against the danger of seeking to extend custom by logical processes, e.g. by analogy. (Broadway and Campbell, JJ.) NAIMUDDIN v. ABDUL HAMID. . . . 72 I. C. 845 : 1923 Lah. 175.

—Evidence of—Custom set up to be precisely proved—Proof of different Custom.

Evidence to prove a custom must not only be consistent with the custom which is alleged but must also prove a custom which is not wider than that alleged. If the evidence tends to prove a custom wider than that which is alleged, the party seeking to establish the custom is not at liberty to adopt part only of the evidence and to reject the rest. But this does not necessarily establish the converse, namely, that if a broad custom is pleaded the existence of a lesser custom could not if proved be found.

The defendants alleged a custom which they failed to prove; but from evidence given on behalf of the plaintiff to rebut the evidence given on behalf of the defendants, the Courts considered that it was apparent that a custom had been proved, of the same type as that which the defendants had alleged but of a narrower compass. Held that in modern times a court could have little hesitation in finding that although the entire custom alleged by the defendant did not exist but a material part of it did, (Bucknill and Ross, JJ.) *NATHUNI RAI v. ## Local Custom—Proof of—Right of way—Antiquity—Open user.

A Court should not find a local custom unless it is satisfied of its reasonableness and its certainty as to extent and application and is further satisfied by the evidence that the enjoyment of the right was not by leave granted or by stealth or force and that it had been openly enjoyed for such a length of time as suggests that originally by agreement or otherwise, the usage had become a customary law of the place in respect of the persons and things with which it is concerned. The evidence must be sufficient to show that the right has been openly enjoyed for such a length of time as suggests that originally by agreement or otherwise the usage had become customary law of the locality. The doctrine of lost grant is applicable to private rights claimed by prescription. It is inapplicable to a right claimed on the basis of immemorial custom. The question of legal origin is only of importance where it is suggested that the right claimed might have originated within the time of memory, whatever that time may be. In the case of a custom its legality depends on such considerations as its reasonableness and its certainty. As to the length of user or enjoyment which must be proved before a local custom may justifiably be inferred no definite rule can be laid down. But if the existence of the custom depends on oral evidence, and the user of enjoyment is taken back as far as living memory can be expected to go, then in the absence of rebutting evidence it is not unreasonable to say, presumptio retro or to infer an immemorial enjoyment of the right, or say, in Bengal, an enjoyment from the time of the Permanent Settlement. ## Proof of.

Proof of custom is not confined to judicial precedents alone and the fact that no contest has taken place in the past may well raise a presumption that the custom was so well recognised that no one thought of contesting it. Custom is not a matter of inference but of proof, and it is the evidence adduced in support of the custom set up that can, and must, alone be looked to ascertain whether or not it has been proved to exist, 29 C. 433 (P.C.) Foll. and 77 P. R. 1904 Foll. (Broadway and Campbell, JJ.) NAJM-UD-DIN v. ABDUL HANID.

5 Lah. L. J. 63.

Adoption—Proof.

In a case where the power of customary adoption by a sonless proprietor is not disputed all that is necessary to constitute an adoption is the clear expression of an intention on the part of the adoptive father to adopt the boy concerned as his son, and a sanction manifestation of that intention is the execution and registration of a deed of adoption coupled with a clear declaration in court and subsequent treatment as adopted son. The proof of such subsequent treatment cannot, however, be reasonably demanded in a case where very soon after the execution of the deed of adoption the reversioners of the adoptive father sue for a declaration that the adoption did not in fact take place. — Alienation — Gift — Will — Pathans of Charsadda — Peshawar — Sonless proprietor — Bequest to daughters.

The distinction under Customary Law between the power of gift inter vivos and the power of testation is a matter of degree and form only, and where the power of gift is shown to exist, an initial presumption arises that there is a co-extensive power of testation.

Where the practice of gift-making has established itself, the effect must be to incline public opinion favourably towards the practice of testamentary bequests which are really in the nature of deferred gifts which are more easily revocable.

They are undoubtedly special customs upon special points existing among the various Pathan tribes of the Charsadda and Peshawar Tahsils, but there is a strong presumption that their customs are substantially similar, unless some special reasons for divergence can be established.

The power of a sonless proprietor to make a bequest in favour of his daughters, was held to be established among the Pathans.

No restriction exists upon the testamentary power of a Muhammadzai proprietor except that which prohibits, in certain circumstances, the disinheritance of sons. (Pipon, J. C.) ABDUL MANAN v. MT. FARQA. 73 I. C. 79 — Alienation — Legal necessity.

It is not the duty of the alienee to see to the application of the money or to find out if the whole of the money due to the antecedent creditor was actually paid if a decree was in existence, the payment of that decree constitutes a valid necessity. The fact that the decree-holder subsequently accepted only a portion of the amount due and gave up the rest of his claim is of no consequence and does not in any way affect the validity of the debtor of the alienation. (Moti Sagar, J.) BALBIR SINGH v. GOBIND. 1923 Lah. 532.

— Alienation — Legal necessity — Presumption.

The mere lapse of time does not remove the need for proving necessity. Although it may render the quantum of proof comparatively small, it certainly cannot be presumed. (Broadway, J.) WALI MAHAMMAD v. FATEH KHAN. 75 I. C. 680 : 1923 Lah. 307.

— Alienation — Limited owner — Reversioner.

CUSTOM.

The alienation of a female limited owner can be challenged by another female who is the next reversioner. (Le Rossignol and Martineau, JJ.) MAWAZ KHAN v. MT. ZOHRA JAN. 73 I. C. 533.

— Alienation (Mortgage) by agriculturist — Money borrowed for trade.

Where the mortgage was for trading purposes, held : this would not justify an alienation of ancestral land by an agriculturist. The previous mortgage, (the money on which had also been borrowed for trading purposes) cannot be considered as an antecedent debt because it was in favour of the same mortgagee and was effected only a few days before the mortgage in dispute and the two mortgages formed practically one transaction. 19 P. R. 1915 Foll. (Broadway and Brasher, JJ.) MD. USMAN KHAN v. ATA MOHI UD-DIN. 5 Lah. L. J. 304 73 I. C. 871 : 1923 Lah. 142

The mere fact that a decree has been obtained cannot be treated as if in itself it amounted to legal necessity justifying an alienation especially where the decree is ex parte. (Leslie Jones and Abdul Raoof, JJ.) BARIAM SINGH v. PHAGGU MAL. 5 Lah. L. J. 99.

— Alienation — Necessity — Money borrowed for the purposes of subsistence.

Where a Saiyed agriculturist alienates a serai for the purposes of his subsistence and he has no other means of livelihood, the alienation is justified by legal necessity. (Scott Smith and Moti Sagar, JJ.) MAHOMED HASSAN-UD-DIN v. SAIF ALI SHAH. 4 Lah. 122 5 Lah. L. J. 246 : 74 I. C. 451 : 1924 Lah. 41

— Alienation — Necessity — Small debt — Lapse of time. See (1922) DIG. COL. 516. RAMJI LAL v. RAM SARUP. 72 I. C. 448.

— Alienation — Powers of — Robtak Tahsil — Rivaj-i-am. See (1922) DIG. COL. 517, GIANI v. TEK CHAND. 4 Lah. 111.

— Alienation — Proprietors — Consent of — Necessity for.

Held on the evidence that in Mauza Raja Jang, Tahsil Kasur, District Lahore which was a village and not a town non-proprietors had no right to transfer their rights of residence without the consent of the proprietors. Acquiescence of the proprietors in past sales does not mean that they are precluded from objecting to future sales. (Campbell, J.) MAHOMED DIN v. LABH SINGH. 73 I. C. 220 — Alienation — Residential houses with the houses by non-proprietors in Sankali Kalam Tahsil.

There is no custom in the Punjab which takes away from the zemindar the right to the site or the tenants' holding. On the determination of the tenancy, such a right would make the tenancy into a permanent one. (Abdul Raof and Moti Sagar, JJ) SEWA SINGH v. GHULAM.

1923 Lah. 467.

—Alienation—Right to challenge—Son unborn at the time.

A son can challenge an alienation made by his father before his death, if at the time of the alienation there were heirs who could challenge it and the transaction was not satisfied before his birth. (Moti Sagar, J.) BHUP SINGH v. PREM SINGH.

5 Lah. I. J. 384.

—Alienation—Sale of portion beyond legal share.

Where the vendor transferred without legal necessity property beyond the share that would fall to him on partition. Held the other reversioners can claim joint possession. (Campbell, J.) RAM NATH v. RAM SARUP.

—Alienation—Setting aside—Right of remote reversioners.

Where a male proprietor who has alienated ancestral land has adult sons living it is not open to the remote reversioners to sue to challenge the alienation in the absence of proof that the adult sons of the alienor waived their right to impeach the alienation. 84 P. R. 1918 Ref. (Abdul Qadir, J.) SUBA SINGH v. GOPAL SINGH.

—Alienation—Sonless proprietor—Ancestral land.

In respect of alienation of ancestral land in the Rohtak Tahsil, Rohtak District, a sonless proprietor has unrestricted powers. 45 P. R. 1917 Ref. 73 P. R. 1895 dist. (Campbell, J.) UGAR SAIN v. TELU.

—Alienation—Sonless proprietor in Rohtak.

A sonless proprietor of the Rohtak Tahsil of the Rohtak District has unrestricted powers of alienation in respect of ancestral land. (Martineau and Moti Sagar, JJ.) KALA v. MAM CHAND.

4 Lah. 282 : 5 Lah. I. J. 404 : 73 I. C. 988

—Alienation—Suit by collateral challenging.

A collateral governed by the customary law of the Punjab does not derive his right to sue from or through his father but from or through the common ancestor who owned the land. (Scott Smith and Fforde, JJ.) SARUP SINGH v. PAL SINGH.

73 I. C. 357 : 1923 Lah. 642.

—Alienation by widow—Legal necessity.

A widow can alienate her husband's land after his death to pay off his just debts. Every person having an interest in property whether absolute or as a life tenant, e. g., a widow, can sell or mortgage such property for a necessary purpose. (Scott Smith and Brasher, JJ.) HASSAN MAHOMED v. MAHANDA.

5 Lah. I. J. 292 :

—Alienation—Widow—Necessity—Debts of husband—Future maintenance.

CUSTOM.

A widow in possession of ancestral property inherited from her husband has only a limited right therein and she cannot alienate the estate in anticipation of future expenses. Where the debts of her husband are not charged on ancestral property the widow is not justified in alienating the property for the discharge of such debts. Nor is the widow justified in alienating the property for raising money for her future maintenance. 4 P. R. 1913; 17 P. R. 1919 followed. (Broadway J.) SUCHA SINGH v. PAL SINGH. 69 I. C. 554 (2).

—Alienation—Widow—Powers of—Daughter of collateral in fifth degree—Bandus. See (1921) DIG. COL. 486. MT. DIYAL KAUR v. MT. MEHTAB KAUR. 74 I. C. 639.

—Alienation—Will—Self-acquired property—Peshawar District.

The practice of will-making in the Peshawar District is of comparatively recent date and it must be regarded as a growth of customary law. In other words Courts are faced with a custom which not only have developed in the past but is developing and will continue to do so in the future. The whole pathan community though it follows its own custom in preference to Mahomedan law, continued attempts are made by Courts to introduce features borrowed from Mahomedan law. As regards will-making in general and in particular in the kamalzai tribe an owner, who has sons, can make a will subject to two known restrictions, (a) he cannot disinherit a minor son, and (b) he cannot disinherit an adult son except for disloyalty. (Pipon, J. C.) FIRDANS KHAN v. SHAH SOWAR. 69 I. C. 853.

—Alienation—Will by sonless proprietor—Khot Sarang of Talagang Tahsil Attock District.

A sonless awan of Kot Sarang Tahsil Talagang, has not a free power to dispose of his ancestral property by Will. (Broadway, J.) MT. RAKSHI v. BAZA. 75 I. C. 659 : 1923 Lah. 305.

—Applicability of agricultural custom.

One of the most important tests to be applied in determining whether a particular caste is or is not governed by agricultural custom is to ascertain whether or not they form a compact village community or, at least a compact section of the village community. If they do so, the presumption is strongly in favour of the applicability of custom. This presumption in favour of custom has been applied even in cases of Brahmins, and must be still stronger when applied to a tribe whose religious and social status is much inferior. Where the caste concerned forms a compact section of the village community there is a strong presumption in favour of custom. (Scott-Smith and Fforde, JJ.) PREM SINGH v. DARBARA SINGH. 72 I. C. 775 : 1923 Lah. 557.

—Burden of proof—Opposition to Hindu Law and agricultural custom.

When a litigant in the Punjab sets up a custom which is contrary both to the Hindu Law and the agricultural custom of the Province, the onus is heavily on him to prove it. (Abdul Raof and Campbell, JJ.) RAM NARAIN v. MT. HAR NARIN-KAN KUR. 4 Lah. 297.

CUSTOM.

—Gift—Gift to two donees without defining shares—Tenants-in-common.

Among the Mahomedan agriculturists of the Punjab a gift in favour of two or more persons without defining their shares creates a tenancy-in common among the donees without benefit of survivorship. (Abdul Qadir, I) MUSA v. GUL MAHOMED. 69 I. C. 538 —Gift by male proprietor to collaterals—Gilatar Jats of Jhang District.

Among the Gilatar Jats of the Jhang District there is a custom by which a male proprietor is empowered to make a gift in favour of a collateral. (Broadway and Moti Sagar, JJ) SAMAIL v. AHMADA. 4 Lah. 189: 73 I. C. 452. 1923 Lah. 517 —Heirship—Persons of the same caste and Got,—Inference.

The mere fact that plaintiff is of the same caste and Got as the alienor does not necessarily lead to the inference, that he is descended from the same common ancestor and is his heir. (Moti Sagar, J) KIRPA v. MT. CHINTI. 1923 Lah. 530.

—Legal Necessity—Reversioner—Gift of self acquired property and charge on ancestral property.

There is no authority for the proposition that a male holder of land both ancestral and acquired, must charge his just antecedent debts on the non-ancestral land. Custom permits the alienation of ancestral land for the purpose of paying just antecedent debts and a provision that this cannot be done, if there is self acquired land to alienate for that purpose would give the reversionary heirs a control over self acquired property to which they are not entitled. A person has a perfect right to gift his self-acquired lands to his daughter's son and to charge the ancestral land with debt. (Campbell, J.) ARJUN v. JUG LAL. 1923 Lah. 422.

—Pre-emption—Mohala in a town—District Karnal—Sub-divisions of a town.

Where a town is divided into sub-divisions, the pre-emptor must prove affirmatively the existence of the custom of pre-emption in the particular sub-divisions in which the property is situate and the onus is not discharged by proof of the custom in the neighbouring sub-divisions.

A judgment based upon a compromise or confession, though of some probative force, cannot be placed on the same footing as one in which after contest a custom is held to be proved or negated.

One or two solitary instances of admission of the custom supported by a few instances in the neighbouring sub-divisions are not sufficient to discharge the onus of proving the existence of the custom in Mohalla Bagarian which lay heavily upon the plaintiffs. (Moti Sagar, J) LEKH RAJ v. INDAR MAL. 4 Lah. 176: 73 I. C. 658.

—Proof of—Custom at variance with law—Onus.

The person who sets up a custom must establish it to the whole length of abrogating the law under which the opposite party claims title and if this is not done the general law must prevail. Possible inferences or probable implications cannot uphold a custom. (Simpson and Wazir Hasan, J. J. C) BALBHADDAR PRASAD v. NARAYAN DAS. 73 I. C. 727. 1923 Oudh 102.

—Proof—Pleading—Variation—Evidence of—Judicial decisions.

Although a custom must be sufficiently defined for its application to the facts of the particular case in which that custom is pleaded, so that it may be clear and undoubted, yet the party pleading the custom can be allowed to prove the same in a sense narrower than that stated in the pleadings. Decisions by courts on questions of custom afford valuable evidence as to the existence of the custom. 45 C. 450; 49 I. A. 119 Ref. A usage of recent date cannot be regarded as a custom. A custom must be proved by clear and unambiguous evidence to be ancient and invariable. In this respect there is no difference between a family custom and local custom. 14 M. I. A. 570, 45 C. 450, 461, 3 C.W.N. 21 Ref. (Ashworth and Simpson, J. J. C) THAKUR RUDRA PRATAP NARAIN SINGH v. THAKUR NIRMAL PRASAD SINGH. 1923 Oudh 61: 74 I. C. 225.

—Proof of—Entry in wajib-ul arz.

An entry in a Wajib ul arz: that in a village a Sale or mortgage can only be made to co sharers and not to strangers is the record of an existing custom. (Cunning, A. J. C.) RAM KUMAR v. HAR PRASAD. 9 O. & A. L. R. 648.

—Proof of—Entry in Wajib-ul-arz—Presumption, See WAJIB-UL-ARZ. 21 A. L. J. 822.

—Reversioners—Declaration not of right.

Grandfather's brother's sons cannot seek a declaration as reversioners in the presence of uncle. No one can ask for a declaration of a non-existing right but of a  spes successionis i. e., the chance or possibility of acquiring a right in the future. It will be open no doubt to him when succession opens out to sue for possession of the property if possession is denied him. (Abdul Raouf and Moti Sagar, JJ.) LALU v. FAZIL DIN. 4 Lah. 106. 73 I. C. 893: 1923 Lah. 403 —Reversioner—Declaratory suit—Alienation by widow—Daughter.

Even a remote reversioner is entitled to maintain a declaratory suit regarding a widow's alienation in the life time of the daughter.

A gift to a son-in-law, by any widow (whether the wife or mother of the last male holder) is not sanctioned by custom. 149 F. R. 1908; 4 P. R. 1890 followed. (Campbell, J.) LUDDAR v. MT. BANSI. 72 I. C. 873: 1923 Lah. 28 —Sale of materials of house.

Sale by non proprietor of standing house i. e. materials of house is ordinarily allowed by custom. (Martineau, J.) SARDAR DIN v. MT. AJAH BIBI. 1923 Lah. 394 (2).

—Sonless proprietor—Appointment of heir

According to the customary law, a sonless proprietor has the power to appoint one of his kinsmen to succeed him as his heir. The appointment in order to be valid must be made in some unequivocal and customary manner and the execution of a deed coupled with a long course of treatment has always been recognised as one of the modes of manifesting such an appointment. 9 P. R. 1893, 4 P. R. 1892, 94 P. R. 1893, 3 P. R. 1901, and 40 P. R. 1905. Foll. (Broadway and Moti Sagar, JJ.) BAJ SINGH v. PARTAP SINGH 1923 Lah. 497 (2).

———Succession—Agnates of a land owner—

Prima facie agnates of a deceased person are entitled to a share in his estate even though they live in another village and own no land in the village in which the land in dispute is situated. 47 P. R. 1917 Foll. An entry in the Riwaj-i-am is a strong piece of evidence in support of the custom mentioned therein. (Scott Smith and Fforde, JJ.) MT. SANT KAUER v. SHER SINGH 4 Lah. 392 73 I. C. 786 1923 Lah. 476.

———Succession—A neshal property—Presumption—Equal shares.

Where two branches of a family were found holding equal areas of property, while some were still joint, the presumption is that the properties were originally ancestral. This is also probablisied by the fact that a pedigree table mentions a common ancestor to whom the properties must have belonged. (Shadi Lal, C. J. and Fforde, J.) MT. MARYAM BIBI v. GHULAM MUHAMMED 73 I. C. 881.

———Succession—Collaterals—Sister—Competition—Preference—Khotis of Pind dad Khan—Jhelum—District.

As between collaterals of the eighth degree and sisters the burden of proving that the sister has a preferential right is on her especially when the entry in the riwaj-i am is against their contention. So held in a case of succession to non-ancestral property among the Khotis of Thasil Pind Dadan Khan, Jhelum District. (Abdul Raoof and Adul Kader, JJ.) HAYAT v. AHMUN 71 I. C. 201 ———Succession—Daughter—Brother—Preference.

Under the customary law prevailing among the agriculturists of the Punjab the daughter takes the self acquired property of a deceased in preference to the brother. (William and Ganga Ram, JJ.) WAZIRI MAL v. GANGA RAM 69 I. C. 573.

———Succession—Daughter and daughter's son and collaterals—Beris Sub-caste of Khatris—Hindu Law.

Hindu Law is applicable to Khatris Beries, according to which the daughter and daughter's son excludes collaterals. Held plaintiffs, collaterals failed to prove that there was a custom among Beris (and specially the particular family) that the collaterals excluded daughter or her son. A single instance, however valuable is inconclusive. (Broadway and Harrison, JJ.) BAL MUKAND v. MT. KISHAN DEVI 72 I. C. 445 : 1923 Lah. 6.

———Succession—Jats of Hoshiarpur Tahsil Rights of appointee's heirs.

In the absence of a special custom among the Jats of Hoshiarpur Tahsil that in the presence of descendants of the appointee's (adopted son's) natural father, the descendants of the appointee are excluded from inheritance in his natural father's family simply because he has succeeded to the property of his adoptive father, it must be held that the tie of kinship with the natural family was not dissolved and the fiction of blood relationship with the members of the new family has no application to the appointed (adopted) heir and that the descendants of an adopted son can succeed to estate of the adopted son's natural family in the presence of the descendants in the natural family. (Moti Sagar, J.) ISHER v. HUKUM SINGH 73 I. C. 738 : 1923 Lah. 495.

———Succession—grant—Special rule of devolution—Burden of proof.

On a question arising as regards the succession to certain paikan lands (lands granted for the maintenance of paiks in a temple) held that the burden of proving that the daughters were excluded from inheritance was on the person alleging such custom. (Chatterjee and Pearson, JJ.) SRIMAT DHARINI KALITANI v. SISURAM KALITA 70 I. C. 36.

———Succession—Jats—Sisters—Collaterals.

The position of females generally, as has been established in many decisions, is every much stronger in the Western Punjab than elsewhere. According to the customary law of the Muzaffargarh District a sister or sister's son of a deceased jat excludes his collaterals of the third degree in the matter of succession to the estate. (Harrison, J.) KADIR BAKHSH v. ALLAH DITTA 73 I. C. 308 ———Succession—Joshi Brahmans of Hoshiarpur—Daughters.

There is no custom among the Joshi Brahmans of Hoshiarpur District under which the widow and daughter of a predeceased son are entitled to succeed in preference to the daughters of the deceased. (Martheau and Zafar Ali, JJ.) MT. BAL KUAR v. DEOKI 4 Lah. 236 : 75 I. C. 109 : 1923 Lah. 579.

———Succession to a landowner—Contest between sisters and cousins—Onus.

Where the contest is between the sisters of the deceased landowner on the one hand and the uncle and cousins on the other. The onus lies on the sisters to prove that they have a better claim to succeed to the property in dispute than the uncle or cousins. (Scott Smith and Fforde, JJ.) *MT. SANT KAUER v. ———Succession—Mukwal Jats of Isan mahar Muzaffargarh District.

All the tribes of the Muzaffargarh District recognise that on a man dying without male lineal descendant and leaving neither widow nor daughters nor daughter's sons the property passes to his (1) father, (2) brother or their descendants, and (3) sisters or their descendants. The position of a sister, therefore, in this District in matters of succession is a strong one. (Broadway, J.) HAYAT v. ALI MAHOMED. 73 I. C. 216.

—Succession—Pagwand and Chandawand
In matter of inheritance the Gakhars of Bara Gowah village follow the rule of Chandawand (Scott Smith, J.) SAKHI MAHOMED KHAN v. MAIZ ALI KHAN 1923 Lah. 604.

—Succession—Pagwand—Whole blood and half blood—Gagians of Peshawar.

In the case of parties following the pagwand rule of succession, if a party sets up that whole blood excludes half blood he must prove it. Among the Gagians in Peshawar such a rule of exclusion exists.

General dicta on nature of custom, and duty of courts laid down. (Pirpon, J. C.) SARDAR KHAN v. MUHAMMAD ZAMAN. 73 I. C. 577.

—Succession—Partly Muh Law and partly Custom.

Although an heir may get inheritance according to Muh Law his estate may be governed by custom (Martineau, J.) RASUL KHAN v. MT. HAWASI. 75 I. C. 458 : 1923 Lah. 284 (2).

—Succession—Per capita or per stirpes—Jats of Mauza Gurdaspur.

The normal custom in the Punjab undoubtedly prescribes a division according to the pagwand rule, and the onus lies heavily upon the person who relies upon the chundawand rule i. e. division per stirpes. Not only is there a general presumption in favour of the division of property per capita but there are judgments relating to the Jats of Gurdaspur Tahsil in which the rule chundawand was held not to be proved and the rule of pagwand was followed in the matter of inheritance. Held also defendant failed to prove a family custom or to discharge the onus (Shadi Lal, C. J. and Abdul Qadir, J.) SHANKAR v. BAHADUR. 5 L. L. J. 212 : 71 I. C. 864. 1923 Lah. 37.

—Succession—Qureshis of Multan—Special custom in contravention of the Islamic Law—Proof See MAH. LAW 1923 Lah. 184

—Succession—Rajputs of Rohtak District—Self acquisitions.

Though under the customary law of the Punjab a daughter succeeds to the self acquisitions of the father in preference to the collaterals, among the Rajputs of Rohtak District the reverse is the case. The onus is on the collaterals to show the general custom did not apply, but the entries in the Riwayat are shifted the burden of proof. (Broadway and Abdul Qadir, JJ.) NANDOO SINGH v. BALJIT SINGH. 5 L. L. J. 203 : 69 I. C. 495.

—Succession—Reversion—Descendants of donee alive.

There is no reversion to the collaterals of the donor so long as the descendants of the donee whether male or female are existing. 100 P. R. 1917 and 82 P. R. 1918 Foll. (Shadi Lal, C. J. and Brasher, J.) MT. CHHOTU v. MT. SONA DEVI. 70 I. C. 299 : 1923 Lah. 11 (2).

CUSTOM.

—Succession—Sadoz family—Exclusion of females.

In the absence of proof of special custom, the personal law of parties must govern. The Sadozis are descendants of Shah Shuja and are governed by Mahomedan Law in matters of succession, and females are not excluded. (Pirpon, J. C.) FATEH MAHOMMED KHAN v. MT. WAFIA BEGUM 73 I. C. 609.

—Succession—Self-acquired property—Collaterals if exclude daughters.

Among the agricultural tribes of the Sialkot Dt., the collaterals of a sonless proprietor do not exclude daughters from succession in the case of self-acquired property. (Scott-Smith and Zafar Ali, JJ.) BUDHA v. MT. FATIMA BIBI. 4 Lah. 99 : 1923 Lah. 401.

—Succession—Shaikh converts from Bahal Khatri.

Among sheikhs who are converts from Bahal Khatri sons exclude daughters from succeeding to their father's estate. Sons exclude daughters from succession to their maternal estates.

Brothers exclude sisters from succession to a childless brother's estate. (Broadway and Campbell, JJ.) NAJM-UD DIN v. ABDUL HAMID. 72 I. C. 845 : 1923 Lah. 175.

—Succession—Sister—Khatri of Attock District.

The sister of a childless male owner among the Khatri of Attock District is entitled to succeed to his non-ancestral property in preference to the collaterals of her father (Abdul Raof and Abdul Qadir, JJ.) MT. CHANNI BIBI v. AHMAD KHAN. 69 I. C. 331.

—Succession—Sodhis—Rights of widows.

There is no custom among the Sodhis of Anandpur whereby widows get no rights of inheritance but are only entitled to maintenance. (Abdul Raof and Campbell, JJ.) RAM NARAIN v. MT. HAR NARINJAN KUAR. 4 Lah. 297.

—Succession by Step-mother—Aroras of Montgomery District—Presumption.

There is no agricultural custom among the Aroras of Montgomery District by which a step-mother succeeds to her step-son. The fact that the tribe to which the parties belong have in many matters adopted agricultural custom is no doubt a fact to be considered in deciding whether or not the said tribe have adopted the particular custom set up by the plaintiff. But the fact by itself does not afford basis for the deduction that in the said tribe a custom exists by which a step-mother succeeds to her step-son. (Broadway and Zafar Ali, JJ.) MT. DIYAN v. -----Succession—Swath's—Pagawand rule—Exclusion

Among Swath's, the whole blood excludes the half blood. It is not always the case that under the Pagawand rule whole blood should succeed along with half blood relations. Under the chundawand rule, the whole blood excludes the half blood. (Piton, J. C.) GUL AHMAD v. GHULAM RABANI KHAN. 73 I. C. 675

-----Succession—Whole blood and half blood—Chundawand rule—Pagawand rule.

In cases of collateral succession arising under the customary law of the Punjab where the dispute is as regards the property of a common ancestor or the deceased and of the claimants, if the chundawand rule of distribution prevails the whole blood excludes the half blood, if the pagawand rule prevails both succeed together. (Abdul Raouf, J.) RIZK RAM v. SANWAT 69 I. C. 474 1923 Lah. 65.

-----Trade custom—Unreasonable—Not to be recognised.

A trade custom to be recognised by a Court of law must be universal as well as reasonable. A custom allowing an agent to make himself to a principal and thereby profit himself at the expense of the principal, is unreasonable, and cannot be implied in a contract of agency. (Piggott and Walsh, JJ.) KISHORI LAL v. JIWAN LAL. 1923 A. 242.

-----Wajib-ul-arz—Ambiguous statement—Evidentiary value.

A custom is not established by an ambiguous statement of it in a Wajib-ul-arz. But when it is not shown by reliable evidence that the Settlement officer neglected to perform his duty or was misled in recording a custom, and it does not appear that the statement of the custom is ambiguous, the record in a wajib-ul-arz of a custom is most valuable evidence of the custom, much more reliable evidence than subsequent oral evidence given after a dispute as to the custom has arisen. The powers of a widow in possession of her husband's property to make an alienation by way of gift not wider under the customary law of the Punjab than under the Hindu Law. (Abdul Raouf, J.) MT. DURGA v. PREM SINGH. 74 I. C. 653.

DAMAGES

-----Succession—Widow—Right of—Relinquishment.

A widow who takes a life interest in her husband's property is competent to make a bona fide relinquishment to accelerate the reversion. It is however not open to her to do so merely in order to convert her limited title into an absolute one by collusion with the presumptive reversioner. More distant reversioners are entitled to impeach such a transaction exactly as they would be entitled to impeach an alienation to outsiders made by the life-holder with the assent and collusion of the presumptive reversioner. (Piton, J. C.) MT. RAM RAN v. ZARGUL. 70 I. C. 39.

-----Succession—Zargais of Batala—Law governing.

The Zargais of Batala are non-agriculturists and prima facie they would follow Mahomedan and not agricultural custom. The onus is on the party who wants to set up succession by custom to show it. (Broadway and Abdul Qadir, JJ.) ABDUL KARIM v. M. AMAT-UL-HABIB. 70 I. C. 205 : 1923 Lah. 121.

DAMAGES—Cause of action—False imprisonment—Warrant of arrest issued by error of court

No action will lie against any person for issuing execution or otherwise acting in pursuance of a judgment or order of a court of justice, even though it is erroneous. A valid order, though erroneous in fact or law, is a sufficient justification for any act done in pursuance of it. Where a person is arrested in pursuance of a warrant of Court, though illegal, he has no cause of action for false imprisonment against the person executing the warrant. -----Contract for sale of goods—Breach—Conversion of English currency into rupees—Date of.

The date at which the damages for a breach of contract are to be calculated is the date of the breach, and, following the English authorities, it is clear that the date on which the rate of exchange is to be taken for the purpose of converting the amount in English currency into rupees is the date on which under the agreement the money was to be paid and on which a breach occurred by its not being paid. DAMAGES.

—Contract to sell—Mutual obligations—Effect.

In a case where there are mutual obligations on the parties, it is on the plaintiff to show that on the date fixed for performance of the contract, he was ready and willing to perform his part of the bargain. It may perhaps not have been necessary for him to prove that he made an actual tender of the money but it was, at any rate, incumbent on him to show that he had made arrangements for the purchase-money and was in a position to hand it over to the first defendant as soon as he was satisfied that the bulk of the goods was in accordance with the sample and that everything was satisfactory, (Rafique and Lindsay, JJ.) MAHOMED ISMAIL KHAN v. HASAN ALI KHAN. 1923 All 220 —Doctrine of frustration of contract.

To interpret a business bargain, expressed in the language of commerce, it is no doubt important to appreciate the methods and the point of view of business men, but this is merely a prudent way of qualifying the mind to construe their words, and so to determine their meaning, and is a very different thing from postulating that reasonable men would have been likely to agree to one kind of liability and not to another, and from this concluding that, whatever the words of the contract say that kind of liability, and that alone, is the obligation of the contract. As a matter of fact there is nothing surprising in a merchant binding himself to procure certain goods at all events. It is a matter of price and of market expectations. No doubt it is a speculation, but many dealings even in cotton goods are of that character.

Where the vendor performed a subsequent contract with Govt. during war after breaking the contract with plaintiff to supply goods as and when they may be received from mills, Held the adventure, of which the commercial purpose is suggested to have been frustrated, is of course, the purchase and sale of these goods between the parties to this contract, and this adventure was not frustrated. All that happened was, that the defendants failed to perform their contract. When they have paid the damages, one commercial purpose, at any rate, will, so far from being frustrated, have been fulfilled. The Mills, from which the goods were to come no doubt were contemplated as continuing to exist, though it does not follow that in a bargain and sale the closing or even the destruction of the Mills would affect a contract between third parties, which is in terms absolute; but where the Mills did continue to exist and did continue to manufacture the goods in question, only they were made for and delivered to somebody else, the matter is completely outside the principle enunciated in (1903) K. B. 740 or (1903) K. B. 756 (Lord Sumner). HARNANDRAI FULCHAND v. PRAG RAJ.

—Negligence—Injury to workman on account of negligence of employer—Measure of damages.

The defendants (employers) for the purposes of their own business used a method of breaking up caste iron which consisted of dropping a heavy weight on pieces of iron on a bed of iron with the intention that these pieces should be broken into smaller pieces. The weight was dropped from a height of 35 feet with the inevitable result that pieces of iron flew about. It was found that the iron pieces habitually flew to distances of four or five yards from the pit. The fencing around the pit was only three feet high and in spite of it iron pieces were flying about. The plaintiff's husband who was employed under the defendants was working at a distance of 70 to 80 yards from the pit was hit by a piece of iron and killed. In an action by the plaintiff for damages held that the defendants owed a duty not only to the public but to their servants to take adequate precaution that the pieces of iron shall not cause injury, and that they were obviously negligent in putting up an inadequate screen round the pit. The defendants were therefore liable in damages, and they could not succeed on the plea of volenti non fit injuria as they failed to prove that the person injured knew of the danger, appreciated it, and voluntarily took the risk. As regards damages the High Court increased the award of the lower Court by giving three years' wages instead of one year's wages awarded by the lower Court. (*Sir Muller Schwabe, C. DECLARATION—Suit for, that certain decrees were illegal—Maintainability—Decree for profits by Revenue Court in favour of recorded co-sharer.

H mortgaged certain property to four persons, one of whom was the predecessor of defendant B. B. transferred a part of his share to his wife and both B and his wife afterwards sold their share to S and another. Possession was however, not given as the whole of the purchase money was not paid. B and his wife sued S and another for the unpaid purchase money obtained a decree which was discharged in 1913. Their names were on the revenue papers before that date and they sued tambardar, who was a representative of the mortgagor, for their share of profits for those years obtained decrees in 1913 and 1915 and realised the amounts decreed. In 1911 the representatives of H had deposited the mortgage money in court for payment to Mr. and Mrs. B but on the court refusing to order payment, as there was a dispute between B and S, had withdrawn. The mortgagors then redeemed their property from S. and another and sued B and his wife for refund of the profits paid to them under decrees of 1913 and 1915, on the ground that the decrees were unlawful. Held, that B and another, being recorded co-sharers on the dates in respect of which decrees for profits were made, the decrees were good and the suit was not maintainable. —Construction—Decree for sale on a mortgage—Description of property in the body of the mortgage deed and in the schedule—Mortgage of a Zemindari village—Residential buildings if included.

A mortgage decree directed the sale of a Zemindari village as described in the mortgage deed. In the body of the mortgage the property was thus described: "We (the mortgagors) have mortgaged to you for Rs. 15,000 the village of K. which is included in the four boundaries given below and which is attached to our Zemindari and which ancestrally belongs to us and is in our enjoyment . . . and which is capable of yielding an annual melvaram kist of Rs. 3,000". At the foot of the document was given a specification of the mortgaged property in these terms: "The four boundaries of the village of K attached to Zemini. (Then followed a description of the boundaries. The village of K situate within the four boundaries is inclusive of poramboke, nanja 52 velis (and odd) panjah 204 velis (and odd). The total of nanjah and panjah is 256 velis (and odd) excluding the lands sold up to date, the remaining lands and all the rights and privileges I possess in the waste lands, poramboke and other lands attached thereto all kinds of trees, topes, wells, ponds tankbunds, etc. have been given as security." On a question arising as to whether the residential buildings of the Zamindar situate in the village of K and within the four boundaries above-mentioned, were included in the security, Held (1) that the specification at the foot of the mortgage controlled the general words in the body of the deed, (2) that the words "and other lands attached thereto" occurring in the specification of the property were ejusdem generis with waste lands and poramboke, etc. enumerated previously; and that the residential buildings of the Zemindar did not pass under the mortgage. —Construction—Mortgage—Redemption—Decree for redemption on payment of mortgage money in chaitra of any year—Rights of parties.

A consent decree was passed in a suit for redemption of the year 1886 in these terms: The plaintiff (mortgagor) do pay to debts 2 and 3 mortgagees) Rs. 55 in respect of the debt on mortgage in the month of Chaitra of any year and the plaintiff do obtain possession of the lands in suit considering the same to have been redeemed from the mortgage. It should be understood that plaintiff is not entitled to take possession of the lands in dispute in any other month except the month of Chaitra. The plaintiff applied in 1919 to execute the decree and claimed in the alternative that the application be treated as a suit. Held that the effect of the decree of 1886 was not to put an end to the mortgage, that the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee continued to exist between the parties and only the amount due was ascertained. Even if the application of 1919 be considered to be one for the execution and as such barred under S. 48 C. P. Code still it could be converted into a suit for redemption under S. 47 C. P. Code. The owner of a village mortgaged it subject to certain alienations of the Kudivaram interest already made by him. The mortgage itself as well as the alienation were made to discharge a decree on a prior mortgage. The mortgagee brought a suit to enforce his mortgage and claimed priority over the alienee of the Kudivaram interest. The alienee who had purchased the Kudivaram interest set up his own priority as regards one of the items but said nothing as to the other two. The priority set up by the alienee was negatived and the decree directed the sale of the right title and interest of the mortgagor. The alienee took objection in execution proceedings to the sale of the whole property inclusive of the Kudivaram interest. Held that as regards one of the items in respect of which the alienee set up his priority there was an adjudication negativing his claim and that that item was liable to be sold in execution. As regards the other two items, there was no claim negativing the priority set up by the alienee and that the decree should be construed strictly so as not to affect the interest of the alienee. —Effect of—Decree not put into execution.—Lapse of time—Declaration.

Where the plaintiff's title was established by a decree of 1907, the fact that the decree was not put into execution cannot affect the declaration of title made therein. The decree would only cease to have effect if it was set aside and otherwise it is erroneous on the part of the Court to go behind the decree into the question of title again. (Ross, J.) JHUMAK SINGH v. MAHINDRA SINGH.

—Fictitious decree—Effect of.

A decree which is fictitious does not require to be set aside; for a collusive and fraudulent proceeding in a court is not a judicial proceeding and is to be treated as availing nothing to the party who sets it up. (Greaves and Cumings, JJ.) SOSHI KUMAR v. CHANDRA KUMAR —Setting aside—Consent decree—Mistake—Unilateral mistake—Effect of revival of suit.

The law requires men in their dealings with each other to exercise proper vigilance and to apply their attention to those particulars which may be supposed to be within the reach of their observation and judgment and not to close their eyes to the means of information which are accessible to them. Where two parties are at arms length, either of them may prima facie remain silent, and avail himself of his superior knowledge as to facts and circumstances equally open to the observation of both or equally within the reach of their ordinary diligence. A consent decree could be set aside only on a ground which would justify a cancellation of the agreement on which the decree is passed. Though a suit does not lie to set aside a decree in a previous suit on the ground that the judge in passing that decree made a mistake, yet as an agreement may be rectified for an appeal is made in stake so may also the consent be given upon such agreement. A consent is not the act of one party only, not caused by the fraud induced by the act of the other party but of both, the agreement or the decree is not vitiated. 43 C. 217, 34 C. L. J. 257 8 C. W. —Setting aside—Consent of parties—Review of parties.

A party is not to be allowed to correct its own consent when it is satisfied that in passing a compromise decree it was misled by one of the parties. A dispute has been drawn between fraud practiced upon the Court, where the question is whether there was a consent in fact of the parties to a decree, there is power to investigate the matter in a properly constituted application and to set aside the decree if satisfied that a party never consented to it, but where there was a consent in fact but a party alleges his consent was procured by fraud, the Court cannot investigate the fact either in review or in exercise of its inherent power and the only remedy is by suit. In other words the factum of consent can be investigated in summary proceedings, but not so the reality of the consent. (Das and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.) SADHO SARAN RAI v. ANANT RAI. (1923) Pat. 197; 2 Pat. 731 1923 P. 483.

—Setting aside—Ex parte decree—Fraud—Non service of summons.

The mere fact that an ex parte decree has been passed does not show that there was no service of summons on the defendant and if anything, the presumption is that the Court passing the decree was satisfied that there had been a proper service of summons. It is incumbent on a person seeking to set aside the ex parte decree in a subsequent decree to prove that it was obtained by fraud. ROSS, J. HARNARAIN PANDEY v. NAND KESHWAR PANDEY. 1 Pat. L. R. 127; 71 I. C. 573; 1923 P. 406.

—Setting aside—Ex parte—Suppression of summons—Incomplete statement in plaint.

To set aside an ex parte decree on the ground of fraud in not serving the summons, there must be a finding that there was a fraudulent suppression of summons at the instance of the plaintiff.

An incomplete statement of a proposition of law in the plaint does not constitute fraud. (Ghose and Pantar, JJ.) MAHAUL PRASAD v. MAHABIR PRASAD. 1923 Cal. 569 —Setting aside—Fraud—Ex parte decree—Suppression of summons.

Where a decree is obtained ex parte after suppression of summons and on a misrepresentation of the facts to the Court, such a decree can be set aside by a separate suit and it stands on a different footing from a decree obtained by perjury. (Chatterjee and Pearson, JJ.) THE INDIA PROVIDENT CO. LTD v. GOVINDA CHANDRA DAS. 27 C. W. N. 359; 1923 Cal. 425

—Setting aside fraud—Nature of.

A decree can be set aside on the ground of fraud, if the fraud is extraneous to the suit. But one Court cannot entertain a suit to set aside a decree of another court, when the sole point is whether the latter court erred in believing the evidence before it. (Behlsey, J.) MUSTHAN v. BABU MOHENDRA NATH SINGH. 1 Rang 500 —Setting aside—Fraud—Non service of summons.

A suit to set aside an ex parte decree on the ground of non-service of summons is not maintainable when the same ground was taken unsuccessfully in an application under O. 9, R. 13, but if other grounds of fraud are alleged, it will lie. —Setting aside—Fraud—Plea in defence—Decree acted upon.

Where a decree has been obtained by fraud, a party to the decree as a defendant in a subsequent suit can plead that the decree was vitiated by fraud and therefore not binding on him even though he had not sued to avoid the decree. 26 C. 891, 27 C. 11 Rel. If however he had acted in accordance with the decree, he cannot be allowed to challenge its validity unless he proves specifically the circumstances which constitute the alleged fraud on him of the Court. (Mookerjee and Chatterjee, JJ.) PULIN BEHARI DEY v. SATYA CHANDRA DEY. 70 I. C. 548; 1923 Cal. 79.

—Setting aside—Fraud—Suppression of evidence—If amounts to.

Suppression of evidence in a case where the onus of proof is on the other party does not amount to fraud on the basis of which the decree could be set aside. (Macleod, C. J. and Crumf, J.) SHRINIWAS SARJERAO v. NARAYANRAO NAVLOH-RAO. 1923 Bom 379.

—Setting aside—Fraud—Suppression of evidence—False claim.

The mere fact that a notice of a suit was not served on a party is not necessarily fraud. If, on the other hand, it is shown that there was any deliberate suppression of notice particularly in order to give effect to any scheme such as that alleged, then such suppression of notice would be clearly fraud. Further it is not necessarily fraud on the part of any person to put forward a claim which is in fact unfounded in law. A person may make a claim to which he is not entitled and his conduct is not fraudulent merely on that ground. It must be found that there were circumstances which establish that the over-claim, if there be one, was made with knowledge and for a fraudulent purpose. (Woodroffe and Suhrawardy, JJ.) JOGESH CHANDRA GHOSE v. PROSANTA KUMAR TALUKDAR. 71 I. C. 962

——— Setting aside—Fraud—What constitutes—Procedure on setting aside decree.

The test as to whether a suit lies to set aside a decree is whether there was fraud practised in relation to the proceedings in court by which the defendant in the original suit was prevented from placing his case before the court.

Where a decree is set aside as fraudulent, the suit cannot be re-heard. Where a suit is brought to set aside an ex parte decree as fraudulent, the onus is upon the plaintiff to show that the summons was suppressed, and he can show that the claim was false so as to lead to an inference as to the fraudulent suppression of summons. It is not upon the defendant to show that his claim in the previous suit was a true one. (Das and Bucknill, JJ.) DAMODAR PRASAD v. RAMSARUP KUMAR. 4 Pat. L. T. 102 : 71 I. ——— Setting aside—Grounds for—Reliefs going beyond the prayer in the plaint.

In a suit to set aside a decree in a prior suit as having been passed without jurisdiction the facts found were these. In the plaint in the previous suit it was alleged that a certain lease hold property was pledged as security for the unpaid commission or royalty and though no specific prayer was inserted for enforcement of that charge, the facts upon which the charge might have been asked for were stated in the plaint. The plaintiff prayed for a much wider relief namely possession of the leasehold property according to the terms of the kabuliyat which gave him a right to reenter. The Court passed a decree for a certain amount and directed that in the event of the same not being paid within a certain time, the leasehold property was to be sold. Held that in the prior suit a case had been made which could serve as a foundation for the relief granted in the prior suit, though it had not been specifically asked for consequently it could not be said that the relief was not within the scope of the prior suit and that the decree in the prior suit was not without jurisdiction. Under O. 7 R. 7 C.P.C. it is competent to the court to grant a general or other relief even though it had not been asked for. (Miller C. J. and Foster, J.) SATYATARAN CHAUDHURY v. JYOTI PRASAD SINHA DEO. (1923) Pat. 153 : 1923 P. 386

——— Setting aside—Inconsistent relief

A person cannot sue to set aside a decree against a firm on the ground that he was not a member of the firm and that the decree was obtained against the firm by fraud and collusion. (Harrison, J.) JAWAHAR SINGH v. SASSOON & Co. 75 I. C. 165 : 1923 Lah. 290

DEED.

——— Setting aside—Jurisdiction—Void and Voidable decrees—Distinction between—Absence of jurisdiction—Irregular assumption of jurisdiction—Minor—Guardian—Appointment of.

There is a clear distinction between a judgment which is voidable and that which is void. An erroneous judgment is a voidable judgment for the argument that a judgment is erroneous assumes both the regularity of the procedure and the jurisdiction of the court to render it. An erroneous judgment is one which, though regularly rendered, is contrary to law or facts, and is, therefore liable to be reversed by an appellate tribunal. An irregular judgment is also a voidable judgment; but the distinction between an erroneous judgment and an irregular one is this, that whereas an erroneous judgment will always be reversed by an Appellate Court, an irregular judgment will be reversed in appeal or ignored in a collateral proceeding only when it is shown that the irregularity in the proceeding has affected the merits of the case between the parties. A void judgment on the other hand, is a judgment where there was a total lack of jurisdiction in the Court to render it. Such a judgment is a mere nullity. It is not necessary to set it aside. It can be completely disregarded whenever it is pleaded in support of a claim or in answer to a claim. There is also a distinction between existence of jurisdiction and exercise of jurisdiction. Where there does not exist any jurisdiction to try and determine the cause, the judgment is void, and it can be impeached collaterally. But where there does exist such a jurisdiction, but in the exercise of the jurisdiction, the Court has acted illegally or with material irregularity, the judgment is voidable, and it can be vacated in an appropriate proceeding either by the Court which rendered it, or, under the C. P. Code, by the Appellate Court, either in appeal or in revision, (1905) 33 Cal. 68; (1920) 24 C. W. N. 723 followed.

Jurisdiction is of four kinds:—

(1). Territorial jurisdiction (2) Pecuniary jurisdiction (3) jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and (4) jurisdiction of the person.

Jurisdiction as to person is conferred on the Court by suing the person in a court competent to try the cause as against that person before the Court. Where the conditions for the assumption of jurisdiction as against a person exist, the authority of the court to try and determine the cause as against him is complete, and the mode which the court adopts to bring that person before it affects the exercise of jurisdiction, and not its existence. A judgment will not be regarded as a nullity, although it has been rendered in direct contravention of a statutory provision. (1893) 21 C. 66; (1901) 25 Bom. 337, (1920) 24 C. W. N. 723 followed. afterwards built anew and "are hereby sold to you with the right of ingress and egress through the main door, and given over to your possession". Then followed the particulars of boundaries. Then a clause "there is an open Chowk belonging to these three houses, and in front of the door of my other house. All may use the said Chowk according to the limits of their respective houses and the inmates of all the four houses have the right of egress and ingress through the main Kadki door". Held that the words "Open Chowk belonging to these three houses" do not mean having regard to the context that the Chowk was to be in the exclusive ownership and possession of the three houses. The words "all may use the said Chowk" meant all four houses and that they have the same meaning as "in front of all the four houses" referred to in the next sentence. The words "according to the limits of their respective houses" meant not all might use the Chowk and this means the whole Chowk. (Marten and Fawcett, JJ.) *SHAH EULAKHIDAS v. ## —Construction.

Clause 2 of the document provided that the vendor shall draw upon the purchasers through any bank in sterling for the total amount of the invoice at 60 days sight free of interest, the bill of lading and shipping documents to be handed to the purchasers on payment of the draft. The purchasers further bind themselves to accept such drafts upon presentation and pay at maturity notwithstanding any objection they may have on account of any variation whatever from the terms of the indent, such objections if any, to be settled privately or by arbitration. Clause 8 contained the provisions as to arbitration and commences with the statement that the purchasers shall not raise any claim in respect of the transaction unless they have accepted and relied the draft or drafts. Held upon the true construction of that agreement that purchasers are bound to accept the drafts upon presentation or tender of the bills of lading and shipping documents and that no claim by the purchasers can be raised, nor arbitration invoked, until such payment has been made. (Shadi Lal C. J., and Ffordce, J.) BUBBY HURBY AND CO. v. HERTZ AND CO. 4 Lah. 215 : 73 I. C. 421 : 1923 Lah. 541.

—Construction—Consideration.

A sale purported to be for a sum of Rs. 1,200. It was recited in the sale-deed that a sum of Rs. 550 was being left with the purchaser to redeem a prior mortgage and the balance of Rs. 650 was to be paid before the registering officer. It was found that the money was handed over to the vendor before the registering officer but that after it had been so made over it was returned again to the purchaser. It was found that the market value of that property sold was not more than Rs. 500; held that if by this transfer the vendor was getting rid of the liability to pay a sum of Rs. 550 it cannot be said that there was no consideration for the transfer. (Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ.) ALAMA CHAND v. CHHABU. 45 A. 559 : 1923 A. 530 : 74 I. C. 339.

—Construction—Ambiguity—Conduct of parties.

DEED.

Where a document is ambiguous, it is always to construe it by showing how the parties have acted under the document (Wazir Hasan A. J. C.) SHAIKH ALI ABBAS v. RAJA KUMAR SHER BAHADUR SINGH. 9 O. & A. L. R. 815 : 75 I. C. 267.

—Construction—Clause altering rule of succession and restraining alienation—Effect, See (1922) DIG. COL. 536. MT. MAHADAI KUAR v. BAGESHAR RAI. 69 I. C. 777.

—Construction—Conflict between area and boundaries.

Where a deed contains an adequate and sufficient definition of the property intended to pass, any erroneous statement contained in it as to the dimension or quantity of the property will not vitiate the description. (Das and Foster, JJ.) LINTON MOLESWORTH AND CO. v. JAGANNATH SUPAKAR. 1 Pat. L. R. 377.

—Construction—Consequence.

A document purporting to be an adoption deed contained the following words, "you (the adopted-son) alone are the full owner of my moveable and immoveable property." Held the executant in executing the deed, which was to evidence the previous adoption did not intend to transfer thereby all his immoveable and moveable properties unless he used in the document words of conveyance or transfer. (Macleod, C. J., and Crump, J.) SHIDAPPA v. SANTAWA KOM. 1923 Bom. 302.

—Construction—Description of property—Conflicting description.

When the premises is sufficiently described, as by giving the particular name of close, or otherwise, an erroneous additional description will be rejected as a 'false demonstration', but if there is not this certainty in the first description as if it is expressed in general terms and a particular description is added, the latter controls the former and limits the generality of the earlier description. Where there is a conflict between the two descriptions, the question which the court has to consider is, whether the words constituting the second description, should be rejected as a false description, or whether they should be read as words of restriction. The test is this, if the first description is sufficient in itself to identify the land which is conveyed, then, if there is a conflict between the first description and the second description, the second description ought to be rejected as a false description, but if the first description is not sufficient by itself to identify the lands intended to be sold, then the second description ought to be read as restricting the operation of the grant. The question then is this: is the first description sufficient in itself to identify the lands in dispute? (Das and Kulwant,

You will on no account be entitled to claim a reduction of rent. ## —Construction—Gift to adopted son—Adoption invalid—Effect.

Where a testamentary disposition contains a gift to an adopted son, but the adoption fails courts have to consider whether under the circumstances of the particular case whether the adoption was the reason or motive for the gift or whether the mention of the donee adopted son was merely description, in which latter case he would still take (*Shadi Lal, C. —Construction—Gift by husband to wife—malik mustakil Kamal. Provision in favour of future son or daughter—Effect.

Where a husband gifted away properties to his wife, making her the permanent and full owner malik mustakil Kamal, but adds a final clause to the effect that if a son or daughter is born and lives at her death, that person is to be the permanent or full owner.

DEED.

Held, the deed should be construed as a whole and the mere use of the words "malik mustakil Kamal" did not confer an absolute estate, as it would be inconsistent with the last clause. Taking the document as a whole, it conferred only a life interest. (Coutts and Ross, JJ.) SORABHAI PANDE v. RAJ KUMAR PANDE 69 I. C. 957 (1) : 1923 P. 87.

—Construction—Gift of occupancy and inam rights

In a gift deed of inam lands the Inamdars stipulated that the lands were free from assessment and undertook to be liable for the same, in case the donee had to pay it. Held, it was a gift of occupancy and inam rights and the donors and their heirs were liable in respect of the stipulation. (Shah A. C. J. and Coyajee, J.) RAMCHANDRA MADHAVRAO v. ## —Construction—Gift or will

A document though called a will, if the intention as gathered is to make a transfer in praesenti is really a deed of gift. (Abdul Raouf, J.) MT DURGEO v. PREM SINGH 74 I. C. 653.

—Construction—Heirs and representatives

—Meaning of.

In construing an instrument carrying out a decision of court, the maxim ut res magis valeat quam pereat should be borne in mind. The words "heirs and representatives" are words of limitation and not of purchase and following words conveying a life estate, are intended to convey an absolute estate. (Lord Phillimore). LAL RAM SINGH v. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF PARTABGAR. 45 A. 596 21 A. L. J. 777 : 26 O. C. 257 : 33 M. L. T. 355 (P. C.) : 9 O. & A. L. R. 746 : 50 I. A. 285 : (1923) M. W. N. 591 : (1923) P. C. 160 (P. ## —Construction—Intention of parties,

—Construction—Intention of parties—Subsequent admissions—Value of.

Whatever title may have vested in a mortgagee from a tenant must be traced to the mortgage bond and cannot be rested on an admission of the tenant himself. The question clearly is not, what the tenant intended to mortgage, but what was conveyed by virtue of the description actually inserted therein. The admission of the tenant cannot be utilized to contradict the document, and it would be dangerous to allow outside evidence to show the intention of the writer, which is not disclosed by the authorised channel, namely, the words which he himself selected. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) MANMATHA NATH KAR v. PROBODH CHANDRA. 37 O. L. J. 52 : 73 I. C. 416 : 1923 Cal. 102.

—Construction—Lease or mortgage.

Where the consideration for a document is an old debt and possession of the property was given over to the other party for a fixed period of time but there were no terms making him accountable for profits or for the repayment of the debt, the document is a lease and not a mortgage. ## —Construction—Lease or sale deed—Terms and conditions.

A document purported to be a perpetual lease of 5 bighas, 5 biswas and 8 dhurs for a premium of Rs-493, the rent reserved being Rs. 5-5-0. The lease went on to provide that the lessee, generation after generation, shall be entitled to remain in possession of the leased property as pattadar and would have the right to have his name recorded in the revenue papers as tenant and perpetual pattadar, that he would be liable to pay the rent reserved year after year and instalment after instalment; in the event of the rent falling in arrears, the lessor would have all the rights of an owner with respect to its realisation, but that there would be no right to have the lease cancelled, the rent enhanced or to eject the lessee.

It was clear that the lessor and his representatives would for all time to come have the right to recover the rent reserved though it may be small. They would also under the law have the right of reversion in case the line of the lessees became extinct. As under the terms of this document the proprietary interest of the lessor, had not ceased, there could possibly be no escheat to Government. The liability to pay Government revenue rested on the lessor, and he could not escape it.

Held it could not be open to any of the representatives of the lessee to deny that the transaction was anything other than a lease or to refuse to pay rent. In spite of the direction as to non-enhancement of the rent, it was clear that if at the next settlement the Government revenue were to increase the lessee would be bound under section 49 of the Agra Tenancy Act to submit to an enhancement of rent or to allow the lease to be avoided. So long as these rights are reserved to the lessor it was impossible to hold that this transaction was an out and out sale. (Lindsay and Sulaiman, J.J.) BHAIRO TEWARI v. RAMNATH RAI.

—Construction—Life estate or estate of inheritance—Patta Dawani.

A patta dawani is no doubt the same thing as a Patta Ismarrari and in order to determine the question whether it conveys a life estate or estate of inheritance, the Court must arrive as well as it can at the real intention of the parties to be collected chiefly, no doubt, from the terms of the instrument itself, but to a certain extent also from the ## —Construction—"Malik"—Gift to wife.

The words "malik" or "malkiyat" in a formal document imply an absolute estate unless there is something in the context to qualify it, and deeds in favour of females must be interpreted in the same way as any other deeds (Scott Smith, J) MT. MUHAMMADI v. KARAM BAKHSH.
72 I. C. 977.

—Construction—Meaning of words—Question of inference from words used—Distinction between.

The distinction as to how far a decision upon the contents of a document is a question of law and how far it is a question of fact may be thus stated. The expression "construction" as applied to a document, at all events as used by English Lawyers means two things; first, the meaning of the words; and secondly, their legal effect, or the effect which is to be given to them. The meaning of the words is a question of fact and the effect of the words is a question of law. (Stuart, J.) SHEIKH MUHAMMAD SHAKUR v. ABDUL GHANI.
71 I. C. 369: 1923 A. 362.

—Construction—Mortgage—No provision for payment of interest—Redemption

In a deed of mortgage there were four conditions: (1) that within three years the mortgage would be redeemed on payment of the mortgage money namely Rs 180; (2) that the mortgagor would pay interest at the rate of one rupee six annas per cent, (3) that the mortgagee would retain possession of the mortgaged property and (4) that the mortgagee would be responsible for repairs. Held, on a construction of the mortgage that the condition as to redemption on payment of the mortgage money was complete in itself, and that the condition as to payment of interest constituted a separate account and there was nothing in the deed which made it obligatory on the mortgagor to pay interest as a condition precedent to redemption. ## —Construction—Object of instrument—Statutory provisions—Relevancy of.

Where there is more than one possible interpretation of a deed it is proper and necessary to look to the statute by which the form and purposes of the instrument are prescribed to fix, upon that construction which is consistent with the statute. ## —Construction—Possession of land includes possession of superstructures also.

In a suit in ejectment of the defendant from certain land on which there were some huts. The huts were found by the lower Courts to belong to the plaintiff. There was no reference to the huts in the plaint but the decree was as follows. "The suit being decreed with costs and interests, the plaintiff will get khas possession of the disputed land on ejecting the defendant therefrom, as prayed. The defendant himself must remove all his personal properties from the disputed land within one month. In default the plaintiff will have to remove the same with the help of the Court and he will get khas possession of the said land."

Held that the decree directing khas possession by ejecting the defendant, would necessarily give the plaintiff a right to khas possession as against the defendant in respect of the huts also. (Chatterjee and Cuming, J.J.) JNANENDRA NATH MOOKERJEE v. BRAHMAPADA PRAMANICK.

—Construction—Release of a share-Father's property—Share of brother's property on his death—Estoppel.

Plaintiff at the time of partition with his brothers for a certain sum of money released his share in his father's property in favour of his brothers. On the death of a brother (one of the releasees) he sued for his share. The deed of release ran as follows : "Said releasor, (plaintiff) for himself, his heirs, executors and administrators relinquishes all his right, title and interest in and to the firm of "M. Hakimji" and all the remaining moveable and immoveable properties hereunto jointly owned and possessed by the said releasor and the said releasees (his brothers), or to the ownership or possession of which they may now or hereafter be entitled as heirs of the late Seth Mamoonji and proprietors of the said firm of M. Hakimji." Held it is clear that what the plaintiff was relinquishing was only his claims as an heir of his deceased father and as joint owner of the firm M. Hakimji. Had it been his intention to give up any future right of inheritance that might accrue to him from the death of one of the releasees this would have been expressed in the deed. Plaintiff was not estopped by the deed of release. Halsbury's Laws of England Vol. X page 461 F ; 20 Cal. 373 Dist. (Martineau and Campbell, J.J.) *SETH YUSAF ALI MAMOONJI v. According to the general rule of construction, no part of a document should as far as possible be left out as redundant. (Abdul Raouf, J.) MT. DURGO v. PREM SINGH. 74 I. C. 653.

—Construction—Sale or lease.

Where a lease deed conferred on the lessee very extensive rights including the right to sink a well or to construct a house and no right of re-entry was reserved. ## —Construction—Settlement of property on trust—Gift of absolute estate.

DEED.

A parsi lady executed a deed of settlement of which she appointed one M. and her son Rustomji the trustees, and by which she settled the immoveable properties for herself for life, and after her death on Rustomji for his life and after Rustomji's death in trust for his "sons and their male heirs in equal shares absolutely as tenants in common." The deed contained no power of revocation. There was a maintenance clause referring to the share to which an infant son or his male heirs should be entitled. The settlor first died and her son died next himself leaving three sons. Held that the three grandsons of the settlor took on the settlor's son's death the trust properties absolutely in equal shares as tenants-in-common. (Shah, A. C. J. and Marten, J.) DADABHAI FRAMJI CAMA v. COWASJI DORABJI. 47 Bom. 349 : 1923 B. 177.

—Construction—Valuation for Stamp duty—Weight due to.

The natural and obvious meaning of the words in a deed cannot be refused to be given to them, merely because it is suggested that the words have been inserted in the deed for the purpose of ascertaining and specifying the stamp duty which was to be paid. If that were the object of inserting the words in the deed, it ought to have been so stated. (Sunderson, C. J. and Richardson, J.) FANINDRA NATH ROY v. BHOLA DASSI DEBI. 38 C. L. J. 21 : 75 I. C. 402.

—Construction—Will—Postobit bond—Revocation.

The deceased, a few years before his death, executed a document containing the following terms : "Owing to my health becoming weak day by day I give this paper in writing of my free will that you will kindly accept Rs. 10,000 for the fee for the nursing which you have done for me and my family for 10 to 12 years and Rs. 10,000 as a present from me in all 20,000 to be paid after my death out of my estate." and a suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the said sum of Rs. 20,000 as being due to her under the will of the deceased, the defendants, executors, contended that the plaintiff attended only once on the deceased as a nurse for which she had been paid, that the relations between the plaintiff and the deceased were of an immoral character and that the document which was of a testamentary character had been revoked by the last will of the deceased. The court held that the document was not a postobit bond but one of a testamentary character and that the testator had by a later will effectively revoked the provision of this document and viewed as a bond, it was not enforceable, because the consideration was immoral and illegal. An action lies for the malicious publication of statements which are false in fact and injurious to another, unless they are fairly made by a person in the discharge of some public or private duty or in the conduct of his own affairs. In the latter class of cases the occasion prevents the inference of malice and a qualified privilege attaches to the statements made if fairly warranted by any reasonable occasion or exigency and honestly made or made in good faith. Three elements are necessary to make the defence of qualified privilege good i.e., the occasion must be fit, the matter must have reference to the occasion and it must be published from right motives. If a man comes to know of the commission of a crime, he owes a duty to society and the state to communicate it to the authorities and he cannot be liable if it turns out the person is not guilty. Jurisdiction.

Per Macleod, C. J.—Jurisdiction in matrimonial causes was not based on a so-called matrimonial domicile when the Indian Councils Act was passed in 1861.

The Indian Divorce Act does not confer jurisdiction of the Courts to dissolve the marriages of non domiciled parties. Relief not involving the status of the parties may be granted under the Act if the conditions of residence is satisfied. Undoubtedly a country by its Municipal Law may lay down its own tests for creating jurisdiction within its own boundaries even in cases where the status of the parties is involved. When the jurisdiction of the Court is exercised according to the rules of International Law, as in the case where the parties have their domicile within its forum is decree dissolving their marriage ought to be respected by the Tribunals of every civilized country. The Court in considering a petition for divorce will follow the principles of International Law, whatever doubts may have been felt on the question until the decision in Le Mesurier v. Le Mesurier 1895 A. C. 517. As the legislature has not directly given to the Indian Courts the power to dissolve marriages between non-domiciled parties, the District Court has no power by implication even if the argument that residence has been made the test of jurisdiction was a sound one.

Marten, J.—Jurisdiction over residence, with reference to judicial separations as opposed to decrees for dissolution of the marriage itself, is now well recognised by the English Courts as a principle of private International Law and a similar jurisdiction is exercised by the Bombay High Court or its predecessor the supreme court for 100 years. History of the Court for divorce and matrimonial causes in England discussed.

The Court has not any jurisdiction to dissolve the marriage by reason of the appearance of the parties without protest. The High Court has no jurisdiction to dissolve their marriage, notwithstanding that it was solemnized in India and that adultery was committed in India. But on the other hand the court has jurisdiction to grant the husband a decree for judicial separation and to provide for the custody of the children. This is because the word 'reside' in S. 2 of the Divorce Act should be construed as such, and not as meaning 'domiciled', and because under S. 7 the principles of the English Courts should be applied which in such cases will grant judicial separations to non-domiciled parties. Having regard to S. 7 Indian Courts give or withhold relief on the principles of jurisdiction now finally established in the English Courts and it is no objection to their so doing, that those principles as now enunciated are not the same as those enunciated in the English Court of Appeal in Niboyet v. Niboyet 4 P. D. 1. The jurisdiction to dissolve a marriage as opposed to granting a judicial separation, did not exist until it was given by the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857.

Crump, J.—The jurisdiction, whatever it may be, is conferred by the Act in express terms, and the provisions which confer that jurisdiction are not in any way subject to any rules or principles which may from time to time be laid down by English Courts. Those provisions, confer upon the Courts in India jurisdiction to give decrees for dissolution of marriage between British subjects domiciled in England who in other respects are within the conditions prescribed by the Act. A person does not cease to profess Christianity within the meaning of S. 2 of the Indian Divorce Act of 1869 merely because she has been excommunicated by the sect or the Church to which she belongs. The question of profession of Christianity is a question of her own action and not of the action of her Church.

The conversion to Christianity of one of two married Hindus does not dissolve the marriage. The convert can, under the Native Converts' Marriage Dissolution Act of 1866, obtain dissolution of the marriage by application to the Court first of all for restitution of conjugal rights and then after the lapse of a year for dissolution of the marriage if conjugal rights are refused. Ss. 2 and 7 — Persons domiciled in England—Power of Indian Courts to grant divorce.

The Courts in India are not empowered to decree dissolution of the marriage between persons not domiciled within their jurisdiction, it is no doubt true that sec 2 lays down that relief may be granted where the petitioner professes the Christian religion and resides in India at the time of presenting the petition and that, in addition, in the case of dissolution of marriage, it may grant decrees where the marriage has been solemnised in India or where the adultery complained of has been committed in India. In spite of the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Le Mesurier v. Le Mesurier (1895) A. C. 517 the courts in India have considered that they had jurisdiction to grant decrees of dissolution of marriage.

While it is true that the Courts in India are directed to "act and give relief on principles and rules, which in the opinion of the said Courts, are as nearly as may be conformable to the principles and rules on which the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England for the time being acts and gives relief," this is only to be the rules subject to the provisions contained in the Indian Divorce Act.

The provisions of Sec 2 as to residence, no doubt, apply to cases where the parties are domiciled in India, but where the parties are domiciled in England they cannot override the express provisions in Sec. 7 of the Act (Robinson, C. J., May Oung and Busley, JJ.) A. H. D. JONES v. K. JONES. 2 Bur L J. 106 : 1923 Bang. 223.

DIVORCE ACT (1869, S. 7—Procedure—Decree nisi—Petitioner to go into the witnesses box.

In all divorce cases the petitioner must come into the witness box, petitioner must be sworn, and he must prove his case because, among other things, the judge has to satisfy himself whether there is any collusion between the parties and he has further to satisfy himself as to the complete truth and honesty of the petition. Where this procedure had not been followed, the High Court set aside the decree nisi. (Mears, C. J. Walsh and Kanhaiya Lal, JJ.) HOWARD v. HOWARD. L. R. 4 A. 1 : 69 I. C. 509 : (1923) A. 43.

—S. 7—'For the time being', meaning of.

Per Crump, J. (contra Marten, J.)—There is the possibility of reading into S. 7 of the Divorce Act an intention on the part of Legislature to adopt whatever test the Court of Divorce in England might from time to time lay down upon the matter of divorce but, that is, a forced and unnatural construction. Also it would be necessary to omit the words 'Subject to the provisions contained in this Act.' Had the Legislature intended any such result, it would have been easy to say in express terms that the provisions of the Act must be read as subject to the rules and principles applied from time to time by the Matrimonial Courts in England. They have chosen to say precisely the contrary. Any such construction would introduce an element of uncertainty where certainty is essential. The doctrine of English Courts has varied from time to time upon this point since 1895 domicile alone is recognized as conferring jurisdiction.

S. 7 is a residuary section intended to provide for any matters which by inadvertence or otherwise are not expressly dealt with in the Act. It is not unusual in statutory drafting to insert provisions of this nature ex majore cautela more especially where an attempt is being made to codify in this country an unfamiliar branch of English Law. The expression 'rules and principles' points rather to the rules and principles on which the Courts deals with these matrimonial cases in requiring a certain degree of evidence and other cogulate matters (Macleod, C. J. Marten and Crump, JJ.) ALFRED WILKINSON v. WILKINSON 47 Bom. 843 : 25 Bom. L. R. 945 : 1923 Bom. 321.

—S. 7—Proceedings for divorce—Uncorroborated testimony—Charge of adultery against a known person—Necessity of impleading him as respondent.

In proceedings for divorce the evidence of the husband or wife alone ought never to be accepted without corroboration either by witness or at least by strong surrounding circumstances. Where charges of adultery are made against a known person, he ought to be made a co-respondent unless the judge should otherwise direct. (*Sir Walter Schwabe C. —S. 15—Suit for divorce—Counter claim by husband alleging adultery on the part of wife—Jurisdiction to add foreigner as co-respondent.

Speaking generally, a guilty party cannot obtain relief by way of judicial separation any more than she can obtain relief by way of divorce. Desertion to justify judicial separation must be a wilful abstention by the husband against the wish of the wife. 13 P. D. 141 ; 17 B. 624 Ref. Where a wife sues her husband for divorce on the ground of his adultery it is open to the husband in his written statement to counter-petition for a divorce on the ground of his wife's adultery. It is not necessary that the husband should take an independent proceeding. Where a husband alleges adultery on the part of the wife with a foreigner, the Court has jurisdiction to add such foreigner as a co-respondent to the proceeding. 1913 P. 75, 1910 P. 271 Ref. —Customary easement—Power to take earth for repairs of house.

A custom by which earth is taken from a piece of waste land to repair houses in a village after inundations is not unreasonable. The unity of the dominant and servient estates in the same person extinguishes the easement appurtenant to the dominant estate for no person can have an easement in land which he himself owns. But unity of title of the two estates will not extinguish an easement, unless the ownership of the two estates be co extensive, equal in validity, quality and other circumstances of right. If there has been unity of possession merely and not unity of seisin for estates in fee simple an easement which has been thereby suspended will revive on severance of the union but if there has been unity of seisin for estates in fee simple and not unity of possession merely, all easements are absolutely extinguished and will not revive, unless they are recreated on severance of the former dominant and servient estates. Where though there was an execution sale of the tenancy and a purchase by the landlord the tenant continued in occupation in the undisturbed enjoyment of the right of irrigation and the only visible result of the sale was that the rent was substantially enhanced Held, that the right of irrigation from the landlord's tank possessed by the tenant was not extinguished but momentarily suspended and revived. ———Landlord and Tenant—Acquisition of easement right—Grant—User—Right to take water.

Although a tenant cannot acquire a prescriptive right of easement in land belonging to his lessor he may claim a right of easement based on immemorial user, as there is no reason why an owner of land should not grant any privilege he pleases to his tenant. Where the enjoyment of a right to take water from the landlord's tank was continued uninterrupted for a long series of years such enjoyment should be attributed to a legal origin and the court should presume a grant of an agreement. A tenant can establish his right to irrigate his field from his landlord's tank by proof of open and continuous user from time immemorial. 29 C. 363; 38 M. L. J. 28 : 6 C. 394 : 4 C. 633; 30 C. 281 Rel.

If the user of the easement had actually commenced before the property over which it was claimed passed into the possession of the lessee, the mere act of the intervention of such tenancy should not be sufficient to defeat the right acquired by the lapse of time, unless, indeed, it is further shown that the landlord, up to the time he granted the lease was in ignorance that any such right was claimed. As regard an easement of light, there is no rule defining the measure of the dominant owner's right or requiring an angle of 45° through which the rays of the sun are to be received. To sustain an action, there must be a substantial privation of light enough to render the occupation of the house uncomfortable according to ordinary notions. (Walsh, J.) MT. CHANDAN KUNWAR v. NARAIN, 73 I. C. 531 : 1923 A. 542.

A plaintiff cannot claim damages for injury caused to the crops on his land by the shade caused by trees standing on his neighbour's land.

If cannot be said that every owner of a field has the right to have the sun's rays fall on it from every possible direction. There cannot be such a right for if it were allowed the use and enjoyment of the adjoining fields by their owners would be very largely restricted. (Kotwal, A.J.C.) *GUMAN SINGH v. licly and as of right, it may be presumed that the user had a lawful origin, although the circumstances relating to the origin of this user may not be known. It may be presumed in such a case that the origin is traceable to a lost grant. As regards easement of necessity the general rule is that there cannot be such an easement in respect of a right of way if there is an alternative route or way. But where the alternative route is extremely inconvenient, there may exist an easement of necessity in respect of a more convenient path-way. (C. C. Ghose and B. B. Ghose, JJ.) *KALI PADA BOSE v. ———Permissive user—Bar to acquisition of right.

Where in a suit for a declaration of a right of easement and for demolition of a certain building erected by defendant so as to infringe the right it was found that the user of the defendant's land by the plaintiffs for the purposes of procession as alleged by them was with the permission of the defendant, Held that no question of easement could arise, as the user of the defendant's land was permissive. ———Right by custom—Right by prescription—Distinction between.

What may suffice to establish a customary easement may be wholly insufficient to establish an easement by prescription and vice versa. The two rights are different although the result may be the same. Consequently where a claim of easement is based on a prescriptive title it is not open to the appellate Court to treat the case as one based on custom. (Broadway and Abdul Qadir, JJ.) *SITARAM v. ———Right of the public—Grant—Prescription—Dedication.

The public as such cannot acquire the ownership of immovable property or an easement on such property by prescription. But the user by the public may be evidence of a dedication. A dedication to be valid must be to the public at large and not to any section of it. (Oldfield and Ramesam, JJ.) USSAM KASIM SAIT v. SECY. OF STATE, 44 M. L. J. 638 : (1923) M. W. N. 315 : 17 L. ———Suit for—Parties,

It cannot be disputed that, as a general rule, where a person claims a right of easement on a servient tenement all the owners of the servient tenement ought to be made parties, as any decree in the absence of a necessary party declaring a right of easement would be infructuous. But there are cases which may well be taken as exception to the general rule, such as where any of the co-sharers took no part in obstructing the plaintiff's right. A right to dam a channel against the will of the owner of the adjacent land can only be a right by user or prescription and it is incumbent on the plaintiff if he claims any particular right, to prove that he is entitled to it.

The question in each case must be, what is the exact nature of the right which is shown by the evidence to have been acquired by the party? (Phillips and Devadoss, JJ.) HOTA VEERABADRAYYA v. VENKATAKRISHNA RAO.

EASEMENTS ACT (V OF 1882), S. 7—Easement—Surface water—Right to collect and use—Right to let water on lower land—Rights of servient owner

Every land-owner has a natural right to collect and retain upon his own land the surface water not flowing in a defined channel and put it to such use as he may desire. He may also allow it to flow away in the usual course of nature upon the lower lands of his neighbour and cannot be bound to prevent it from so doing. He cannot do this, however by an artificial discharge upon his neighbour's land unless he has acquired an easement which his neighbour is bound to submit to. If he should acquire such an easement the owner of the servient tenement acquires no reciprocal rights as against the owner of the dominant tenement with regard to the flow of surface water, that is, water not passing through a defined channel. The owner of the servient tenement cannot compel the owner of the dominant tenement to continue the exercise of his right even where the right has been exercised uninterruptedly for over 20 years and even if its exercise should be beneficial to the servient tenement. *Arkright v. ———Ss 7 and 13—Natural right—Right to light and air—Privacy—Easement by implication—Partition.

Every one may build upon or otherwise utilise his own land regardless of the fact that his doing so involves an interference with the light which would otherwise reach the land and building of another person. On the other hand, every man may open any number of windows looking over his neighbour's land, for the interference with a neighbour's privacy or with his prospect does not by itself, give the latter a cause of action, in the absence of other circumstances. If windows are opened, the neighbour may, by building on his own land obstruct the light which would otherwise reach them. Whether a grant of an easement arises by implication on a conveyance of land depends on the intent of the parties, which must clearly appear; in order to determine the intent, the court will take into consideration the circumstances attending the transaction, the particular situation of the parties and the state of the thing granted. This principle holds only where there is no express contract relating to the matter for, where there is a valid express agreement fairly made the law does not indulge in presumptions and the rights of the parties will be upheld according to the terms of such agreement; in such circumstances, no question arises as to grant of easement by implication.

Where the owner of an entire tract of land or of two or more adjoining parcels employ a part thereof so that one derives from the other a benefit or an advantage of a continuous and apparent nature, and sells the one in favour of which such continuous and apparent quasi-easement exists, the easement being necessary to the reasonable enjoyment of the property granted, will pass to the grantee by implication. Ewart v. Cochrane, (1861) 4 Mac. H. L. 117 Wheelden v. Burrows, 12 Ch. D. 31 ; Bayley v. O. W. Ry. & Co. 26 Ch. D. 434 ; Brown v. Alabaster, 37 Ch. D. 490. Wait v. Kelson 6 Ch. A. 166 ; Swan v. Cotton, (1916) 2 Ch. 459 Ref.

The same principle has been applied to partition of joint properties. On a severance of tenements by a partition of joint property, and in the absence of a contrary intention, expressed or necessarily implied, all such easements as are apparent continuous and necessary for enjoying any of the undivided shares when the partition was effected, pass to the co-parceners to whom such shares are respectively allotted in severalty. 14 C. 797 ; 26 C. 516 ; 8 B. ———S. 13—Right of way—Apparent and continuous easement.

A person cannot claim a right of way on the ground of convenience if he has other means of access available. An easement of necessity is an easement without which the property sold could not be used at all, and not one merely necessary for the more convenient enjoyment of the property. An easement of necessity contemplates that there must be an absolute necessity, not removeable by anything, which the dominant owner can be reasonably expected to do before the law will compel an adjacent proprietor to submit to so detrimental a right as an easement on his land imposed against his will. 15. A. 270 : 33 A 467 ; 19 B 79, 28 M. 495 referred to. (Kanhaiya Lal. J. C.) KUNJ BEHARI v. BHUTA 72 I. C. 199 : 9 O. & A. L. R. 381 : 1923 Oudh 250.

—S. 13 (b)—Easement of necessity—Existence of vents—Continuous and non-continuous—Distinction.

The existence of vents through which adjoining lands were being irrigated is evidence of an apparent, continuous and necessary easement which passes to the transferee under S. 13 (b) of the Easements Act.

An act done for the proper enjoyment of an easement such as closing the vents after irrigation or in the course of the enjoyment of an easement which is continuous would not make the easement a non-continuous easement. (Devadoss, and Coleridge, JJ.) MORLA GANGULU v. THATA JAGANNATTAM. 45 M. L. J. 724

—S. 13 (e) and (f)—Scope of—Partition—Right to easements.

There is a distinction between the cases falling under S. 13 cl. (e) and cl. (f) of the Easements Act. Under the former the plaintiff has to prove that the easement claimed was necessary for the enjoyment of the property allotted to him by partition and under the latter he has to prove four things (1) that the easement was apparent (2) that it was continuous (3) that it was necessary for enjoying his share after partition as it was enjoyed at the time when the partition took effect and (4) that no intention inconsistent with the easement claimed was expressed or necessarily implied in the partition. No right of easement after partition arises on the ground that the easement is necessary for enjoying a share as it was enjoyed immediately before partition. (Iskroorth, A. J. C.) BRU MOHAN LAL v. CHANDRIKA SINGH. 70 I. C. 930 : 1923 Oudh 57.

—S. 15—Right by prescription—Irrigation—Interruption.

The enjoyment necessary to qualify for a right of easement is something different from actual user. In order to establish a right to an easement, the enjoyment of it must continue for twenty years ; but in the case of discontinuous easements, this does not mean that the actual user is to continue for the whole period of twenty years. On the contrary, there may be days and weeks and months, during which the right may not be exercised at all, and yet during all those days and weeks, and months, the person claiming the right may have been in full enjoyment of it when necessary ; 30 C 1077 foll.

Where the water of the plaintiffs' well was always used for irrigating the defendant's lands and there was a user by the defendant whenever it was necessary for a period of more than twenty years, the right to irrigate from the well would be deemed to have been substantially enjoyed for

—S. 15 (5)—Meaning of.

Under S. 15 (5) plaintiff has to show a period of 20 years continuing up to some point within 2 years before the institution of the suit. The 5th paragraph of S. 15 of the Easements Act seems to render it impossible to acquire statutory prescriptive title to an easement, unless and until the claim thereto has been contested in a suit. (Simpson, A. J. C.) BASDEO SINGH v. BHAGWAT, PRASAD. 72 I. C. 909 : 1923 Oudh 29.

—S. 18—Customary easement—Right of way—Zemindar's right to close.

A customary easement is not limited to easements of a kind which could not be recognised at all apart from official customs. Any kind of easement recognised by the custom of a province will fall within the term. Thus the Zemindars in U. P. cannot arbitrarily close a right of way used by occupancy tenants for more than 30 years (Davids, J.) KARAN SINGH v. DAL CHAND. 74 I. C. 703 (2).

—S. 22—Extension of easement right—If allowed.

Under S. 22 of the Easements Act the dominant owner must exercise his right in the mode which is least onerous to the servient tenement and cannot impose any additional burden on it.

Where the easement right is only to use a roof as an open space, the holder cannot build over that portion. (Abdul Qadir, J.) HANS RAJ v. MALAWA MAL. 69 I. C. 406.

As a result of this defect there had been a leakage of energy, whether by theft of the current or otherwise. Held that such a state of things must certainly be deemed to be likely to affect injuriously the use of energy by the licensee or by other persons, and accordingly, the Electric Supply Company were entitled, upon discovering this condition of things to discontinue the electric supply. EQUITY—Grantor derogating—Applicability to B. T. Act.

The equitable principle that a person cannot derogate from his own grant does not apply to the case of a surrender by a raiwat after he has sold a portion of the non-transferable holding to another. The B. T. Act governing the case restricts powers of surrender only to certain specified instances. The equities are all in favour of the

ESTOPPEL—Acquiescence—Planting of trees—Ejectment

A grove holder after cutting the trees in the grove was allowed to remain in possession on payment of rent. He planted fresh trees and for 3 or 4 years, the Zemindar did nothing to prevent it. Held, he was estopped by his inaction from ejecting the grove holder. (Premantle, S. M.) RAM SINGH v. HANNU

—Conduct—Admission of adoption—in documents, Effect

Where a person executed a registered document declaring he had adopted another, and in mutation proceedings described himself as the guardian of such adopted son and even entered into a compromise wherein for valuable consideration he gave up all intention of repudiating such adoption, he would be estopped from alleging there was no adoption. Where the tenants knew perfectly well what their rights were and they were not deceived or encouraged in any way, the mere silence of the landlord or his inaction does not create an estoppel against him. ———Mortgagor and mortgagee—Mortgage of endowed property—Mortgagor if estopped from denying title.

Where the mortgage deed clearly purports to be executed by the mortgagor as the proprietor of the property in his own interest, he is estopped from denying the interest which he represented as his own proprietary right in the deed. He cannot set up against the mortgagee the paramount title of a third party even though the latter might eventually prove a right to recover the property. If the Hindu public or anybody else is interested as proprietor of the mortgaged property or has a paramount title adverse to that of the mortgagor, the decision in the mortgage suit will not be binding upon such a person and it is competent to such person to take proper steps at the proper time to protect his interests.

The mortgagor's plea that the mortgaged property is held in trust for the Hindu public is clearly outside the scope of the mortgage suit, so far as it asserts a third person's title. (Dawson Miller, C. J. and Foster, J.) BABU BRIJ RATAN DAS v. RAGHUNANDAN GIR.

Where a witness states that he could see and did see, in apparently very short time, that a certain quantity of land had not been cleared, the statement can be disbelieved as being improbable only if cross examination is directed to the impracticability of forming a judgment by mere inspection even with the aid of glasses, as to the proportion cleared. ## EVIDENCE.

—Competence of witness—Objection—When to be raised.

The proper time to object to the competence of a witness is when he is tendered for examination. But this does not mean objection cannot be raised during the course of the defence argument. ## —Conjectures.

The mere fact that the promissory note is stamped with a King Edward stamp does not prove that the note was executed in 1911 and not in 1915, in the absence of any evidence that there were no King Edward stamps in existence in 1915 (Moti Sagur, J.) MT. CHANDU v. SIRI RAM. 1923 Lah. 607

—Credibility—Plaintiff contradicted by his own witnesses.

Where plaintiff's evidence as to a transaction is contradicted by his own witness—a scribe who was put forward as having written the instrument—a decree cannot be passed on his evidence (Dalal, J. C.) DAYAL v. BHIMMA. 9 O. & A. L. R. 1045.

—Credibility—Trial judge's opinion of witness when open to criticism in appeal.

Where the trial judge, who has seen and heard the witnesses come to the conclusion that they are credible and are uttering the truth, it requires circumstances of exceptional character to justify a court of appeal in coming to a different conclusion. (Lord Parmoor) MA THAN THAN v. MA PWA THIT. 33 M. L. T. 361 (P. C.) : 2 Bur. L. J. 260 : 1923 P. C. 156 (P. C.)

The accused and his father were placed together on trial but after the trial proceeded to sometime, it was decided to hold two separate trials and the judge then began the trial of the accused and exhibited the evidence already given at the joint trial. Then that judge ceased to hold office and his successors decided to hold trial de novo but exhibited the depositions of witnesses in the previous trial without examining them de novo. Held that in doing so there was an irregularity in the procedure which would vitiate the proceedings and that the consent of the accused would not cure such irregularity. 12 C. W. N. 140 foll. In such a case the appellate court has not plenary discretion to decide whether the accused has been prejudiced by the irregularity. 39 M. 449 Ref. (Oldfield and Ramesam, J.) *KOTTAMMAL K. ## —Document—Not acted upon—Admissibility

A document is obviously inadmissible, if it is not given effect to and the object for which it was executed, namely, the proposed compromise in a suit, fell through, as then the document has not the force of a decree (Jwala Prasad and Adami, JJ.) SITA RAM TEWARI v. GAYA PRASAD. 1923 P. 37.

—Finger prints—Value of—Duty of Court.

There is nothing in the so-called science of finger prints or the qualification of an expert in it which prevents the court from applying its own eyes and mind to the evidence and verifying the results submitted to it by experts. The argument in finger print cases rests on a simple deduction from a number of observations of the similarities and differences between the finger prints in question. 27 I. C. 900 Ref. ## —English and vernacular—Record—Depositions—Weight.

In cases where evidence is given by a witness in his own language, the vernacular record is always treated as more reliable and entitled to greater weight but this maxim could not always be safely applied in cases where a Magistrate who is taking down the evidence simultaneously in English understands the language as well as his reader. A Kabuliati executed by the plaintiff's tenure holder in favour of superior landlord was used as evidence in the case against the defendants. Held whatever might be the effect of the kabuliati as regards the relation of the plaintiffs to their own landlord it cannot have the effect of affecting the defendants' state in any way which existed before the date of the Kabuliati. ———Reliability of witness.

Prima facie lambardars are reliable witnesses, where the only ground which the lower Court has given for disbelieving them was that they were Brahmins, and that the deceased was a woman and that the witnesses did not consider the death of a mere woman of any importance compared with the lives of some Brahmins who were accused of her murder. Held the mere fact that they were Brahmins was not sufficient reason for rejecting the evidence of witnesses who are prima facie reliable. (Scott Smith and Molisagar, JJ.) SHEO RAM v. Thak Maps are good evidence of possession at the time they were made, but they are no evidence of title acquired by prescription or adverse possession. EVIDENCE ACT (I OF 1872), Ss. 9, 11, 21—Scope of—If controlled by the Cr. P. Code.

Ss. 9 and 11 read along with S. 21 of the Evidence Act amply justify a court in admitting into evidence all previous statements made by the accused which have a bearing on the question of his guilt and whether the previous statement is made to a police officer or to an officer or to a third party is immaterial if the statement is relevant to the fact in issue. These sections are not controlled by the Cr. P. Code. (Mullick and Thornhill, JJ.) MADAN GURU v. EMPEROR. 4 Pat. L. T. 381 : 73 I. C. 963. 24 Cr. L. J. 723.

—S. 10—Forgery—Letter written by a third party to a stranger—Admissibility against accused—Proof of conspiracy.

The accused was tried on a charge of forgery of a will and the prosecution tendered in evidence a letter purporting to be written by a person who had no hand in the forgery to his brother. The writer of the letter was not examined but the letter was admitted in evidence. Held that the letter was not admissible in evidence in the absence of proof that its writer was a party to a conspiracy to forge the will. (Scott, C. J. and Shah, J.) EMPEROR v. —Ss. 11, 13, and 32 (2)—Deed—Recitals as to boundaries—Admissibility of—Persons parties to deed living.

Documents between strangers containing recitals as to the boundaries and throwing light on the ownership of the property in dispute are not admissible under S. 11 or 13 but are admissible under S. 32 (2) of that Act. 5 C. Where a document has been admitted in evidence as evidence of a transaction the parties are often apt to refer to the recitals therein as relevant evidence, but the recitals are not evidence especially if they are mere assertions by a person who is alive and who might have been brought before the court as a witness. ## EVIDENCE ACT (I OF 1872), S. 14.

—Ss. 14 and 15—Murder—Evidence of other acts.

In a case of murder by administering sweetmeats, the fact that the accused offered sweetmeats to boys and thus poisoned one of them is not evidence under S. 14 Evidence Act, but it would be relevant under S. 15 to show that the administration was intentional and not accidental. Batten, J. C. and Halifax, A. J. C. KASHIRAM v. EMPEROR. 6 N. L. J. 144 : 73 I. C. 262 : 24 Cr. L. J. 566 : 1923 Nag. 248.

—Ss. 14, 25 and 54—Offences under Ss. 400 and 401. Penal Code—Evidence of previous offences—Self exculpatory statements—Admissibility of

In the case of a person accused under S. 400 I. P. C. a previous conviction of dacoity is admissible under S. 14 of the Evidence Act. A previous conviction of theft or a order to give security on the ground of being an habitual thief, is admissible against him in a case where he is charged under S. 401, I. P. C. i. e., belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery. In these two cases such evidence clearly falls under S. 14 of the Evidence Act as showing a disposition on the part of accused towards the particular conduct alleged against him in the charge, namely, a habit of committing dacoity and theft. But it is in order to establish a habit of committing dacoity the prosecution rely on evidence that the accused had previously committed thefts, they no doubt produce evidence which may show a disposition towards conduct of a similar description to that in question, but not of the exact description in issue. It is little if anything, more than evidence of bad character which is excluded by S. 54 of the Act. In a case where the accused are tried for being members of a gang of dacoits and simple theft or bad livelihood in which the order for giving security is based on evidence merely that the accused habitually commits theft (as opposed to dacoity and possibly robbery) it is not evidence indicating an intention to commit the particular crime of which the accused is charged. It at the most merely indicates a disposition to commit crimes of a similar class. A statement of a self-exculpatory kind, which, if true, is in favour of the accused, is admissible, in spite of the fact that, if it is shown to be false, it raises an inference of guilt; and distinction must be made between such statements and statements which, although intended to be made in self exculpation and not as a confession, nevertheless contain an admission of an incriminating circumstance on which the prosecution relies. The mere fact that the accused in making the statements may have intended them to be self exculpatory is insufficient. The real test is what is its effect. 19 Bom. L. R. 363 : 34 Cal. 46 followed. and armed at a spot was accidental and innocent, it is open to the prosecution to rebut this theory, and to produce evidence that in the same locality raids have taken place in which one of the gang had been concerned. In the case of actual dacoity the prosecution is bound to prove the accused's commission of all the acts which constitute the offence. S. 15 of the Evidence Act admits the production of any evidence which would determine the construction to be placed upon acts which in themselves might or might not be the preparation for dacoity and evidence that one or more members of the gang had been concerned in previous and similar offences committed at the same place is admissible in evidence for the purpose. —S. 24—"Appears"—Meaning of.

It is not possible for a Court to say that the making of the confession "appears" to it to have been caused by any inducement, threat, or promise except upon evidence which is before the Court. The inference may be suggested by the confession itself, or by the evidence of the prosecution, or by the evidence adduced by the accused person, or by surrounding circumstances which the Court is always bound to take into consideration: but the conclusion cannot be reached on surmise or conjecture. —Ss. 24 and 30—Confession—Co-accused—Inducement of pardon—Admissibility against Co-accused.

In three cases, each of them involving a large number of alleged dacoities, the accused were tried together for participation in three separate dacoities, committed at different times, and at different places, but round about the same season and round about the same neighbourhood. One of the accused was informed by the magistrate that if he made a voluntary confession which was found to be full and true, his prayer for being made an approver would receive due consideration and eventually he made an elaborate statement amounting to a confession under S. 164 Cr. P. Code. He was subsequently tried and convicted and his confession was used not only against himself but against the other accused. Held that the confession was inadmissible under S. 24 of the Evidence Act and as it formed the main reason for the conviction of the other accused, their conviction could not stand. —Ss. 24 and 28—Confession—Persons in authority—Panchayat—Improper inducement—Confession to Magistrate—Inadmissible.

There is no definition in the Evidence Act of a person in authority. These words have been construed in England and the test which has been applied is this: had the persons authority to interfere in the matter. The mere fact that the accused thought that the persons whom he addressed were persons in authority would not be sufficient to justify the Court in holding that they were persons in authority within the meaning of S. 24 of the Act.

EVIDENCE ACT (I OF 1872), S. 21.

A collecting panchayat and an assistant panchayat who have taken part in holding the enquiry into the circumstances under which the offences has been committed constitute "persons in authority" within the meaning of S. 24 of the Evidence Act. Where in answer to a question to the accused whether he would be saved from the consequence of his act if he confessed the assistant panchayat gave him an assurance that he would be let off if he disclose everything and the confession by the accused was made as a result of such assurance the confession is inadmissible in evidence. The accused in this case made a confession to the assistant panchayat before his arrest, on first January 1922. The accused was thereupon kept in custody till the next day when the Police formally arrested him and sent him before a Magistrate. The Magistrate recorded his confession on the 4th of January. Held that the improper influence of the assistant panchayat continued up to the time when the confession was made and it was consequently inadmissible in evidence. —S. 24—Confession to Police—Admission—False defence.

Held the fact that the accused did not claim a piece of cloth as his own before the Police but admitted at that time that it belonged to the deceased might have been due to this that the defence is not always stated during the Police enquiry and any statement made to the Police to the effect that an article produced by suspected men really belonged to the deceased would amount not to a confession but to an admission. —S. 25—Confession to police can be used to contradict judicial confession.

All that S. 25 lays down is that a confession to the police shall not be used as against a person making it. It does not lay down that such a confession shall be inadmissible for all purposes. The confession to the police may be used for the purpose or arriving at a conclusion as to whether a subsequent judicial confession should be believed or not. (Scott-Smith and Zafar Ali, JJ.) GULAB v. EMPEROR.

75 I. C. 693 : 1923 Lah. 315.

—S. 24—Confession—Retracted—Confession—Value of, as evidence.

It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that a confession made by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence. The weight to be given to such a confession must depend on the circumstances under which the confession was originally given and the circumstances under which it was retracted including the reasons given by the prisoner for its retraction. It is unsafe for a court to rely on and act on a confession which has been retracted unless after a consideration of the whole of the evidence in the case the court is in a position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, that is to say, usually unless the confession is corroborated by credible independent evidence. ## —S. 24—Confession—What is—Accused on trial—Evidence of identification.

A confession made voluntarily in the sense that it was made spontaneously and without any inducement is admissible in evidence under S. 24 of the Evidence Act. ## —S. 24, 30—Retracted confession—Weight of

It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by an accused cannot be accepted as evidence of guilt without independent corroborative evidence. In every case the credibility of a confession is a matter to be decided by the Court in the circumstances of each particular case.

A confession can be used against co-accused, but by itself it is not sufficient evidence for a conviction. (Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.) MANNA LAL v. EMPEROR.

—Ss. 25 and 26—Police Officer—Frontier Constabulary—Confession.

For the purpose of Ss. 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act a member of the Frontier Constabulary is a police officer and confession made to him while the accused was in his custody and not in the presence of a Magistrate is inadmissible. The term Police officer in this respect must be construed not in any strict technical sense but according to its most comprehensive and popular meaning. The mere fact that the powers of the police officers have not been actually conferred on certain members of the frontier constabulary does not make them any the less police officers. (*Pipon, J. ## —S. 27—Information by accused—Discovery—Arms Act, S. 20.

Petitioner was neither accused nor in custody when he gave information which led to the discovery of a rifle. One of the prosecution witnesses deposed that the petitioner said where the rifle had been buried the other deposed that he said "I buried it."

—S. 30—Confession—Co-accused—Admissibility of statement.

In a criminal trial it is the duty of the prosecution to prove all relevant facts essential to establish the guilt of an accused person. A statement made under S. 364, Cr. P. C. by a thief in his own defence is not admissible against another person charged with being the receiver of stolen property. The expression "proving a confession" is inapplicable to the questions and answers under S. 364, Cr. P. Code. (Walsh, J.) MAHADEO PRASAD v. EMPEROR.

maker of the confession is speaking the truth. All that is required is that the confession shall substantially implicate its maker in regard to the crime with which he and his co-accused are charged. —S. 32—Certificate of guardianship—Age of minor—Dispute as to—Recital as to date of birth.

A certificate of guardianship is neither a book nor a register nor a record kept by an officer in accordance with any law but is a certificate as it professes to be, of which there is only one record and which is not a public record or register of any kind but is a document issued to a particular person, giving to that particular person and only to him, a kind of particular authority. On these grounds the certificate could not be regarded as evidence of minority under S. 35 of the Evidence Act. 17 C. 849; 18 A. 478 referred to. Orders for the appointment and discharge of a guardian could not be received in evidence to prove the date of the birth of the defendant from the recitals contained therein. —S. 33—Conditions before admitting evidence

Per May Oung, J. The power given by S. 33, Evidence Act, requires to be exercised with great care and the Court must insist on strict proof before holding that the requisite conditions have been satisfied. The Court must also in the judgment or preferably in a separate order, record the reasons for doing so.

Per Lentaigne, J.—It is a far preferable and safer precaution that the Court should record its reasons for holding that the necessary conditions of S. 33 have been complied with, prior to admitting such deposition into evidence. The section pre-supposes a consideration of the grounds prior to the admission of the evidence and if the reasons too are recorded prior to the admission, the order would constitute a more convincing proof of the considered adequacy of the grounds than a passage in the judgment subsequently written which may easily assume the appearance of a subsequent statement of excuses for a previous ill-considered action. —S. 36—Entry in—Thakbast map—Presumption of correctness.

Entries in a thakbast map are not sufficient to enable a court of fact to hold that disputed lands were really included in an estate at the time of the Permanent Settlement. They may be good evidence as to what the boundary of a particular plot was at the time of the permanent Settlement.

No general rule can be laid down as to the weight to be assigned to a survey map as a piece of evidence. It is good evidence of possession according to the boundary demarcated thereon and may be taken to have been admitted by those concerned and in each case it must be decided upon the circumstances if it raises a reasonable presumption of title. Revenue survey maps are not conclusive and may be shown to be wrong. (Jwala Prasad and Ross, JJ.) RAMNANDAN SAHAY v. JAIGOVIND PANDEY. 2 Pat. 839.

S. 59—Mortgage—Attestation—Proof of—Attesting witnesses—Examination—Presumption.

In the absence or death of witnesses prima facie the presumption is that the testator signed in the joint presence of the two persons and that they subscribed in his presence.

Where there was the affirmative testimony of one attesting witness that he was present, saw the execution and became an attesting witness, the testimony of another witness that at the request of the mortgagor, he became an attesting witness, and the further fact that, on the same day, when the document was later on presented for registration, this second witness identified the executant, who in his presence, admitted execution before the registering officer, and at that time the signature of these witnesses appeared as those of attesting witnesses on the face of the document presented for registration Held in these circumstances, the Court legitimately drew the inference that the requirements of the law were fulfilled. S. 63 (5)—Secondary evidence—Oral evidence of contents of document.

Under S. 63 Sub-S. (5) of the Evidence Act only a witness who has seen the document and who could have read the document in its original state is entitled to give oral evidence of it. (Daniels, J.) RAMJI DAS v. MIHIN LAL. 71 I. C. 654

S. 63 (5)—"Seen"—Meaning of—Illiterate witness.

As regards the letting in of secondary evidence the word "seen" in S. 63 (5) includes also "read over" in the case of a witness who is illiterate and as such cannot himself read it. If it is read over to him it will satisfy the requirements of the section. (Walsh, J.) PUDAI SINGH v. BRIJ MANGAL. 73 I. C. 654 : 1923 A. 612.

S. 65—Loss of document—Secondary evidence.

If it is found that a document has been lost secondary evidence may be given and whether proof is sufficient in a case is a question of fact. (Burn, J. M.) BIBI SUGHRA BEGAM v. ANGAD GIR. L. R. 4 A. 201 (Rev.).

S. 65—Oral evidence—Entry in Settlement—Original or certified copy.

An entry in a public document such as a settlement record can be proved only by the original or by a certified copy. A finding on a statement which is not admissible to prove the entries can be contested in second appeal. (Martineau, J.) RAM v. MALIK GHANSHAM DAS. 71 I. C. 825 : 1923 Lah. 150 (1).

S. 65—Oral evidence of persons who heard, judgment pronounced—Admissibility.

Statements of persons who merely heard judgment pronounced are not admissible in evidence. What is required is an oral account of the contents of the judgment or decree by some one who had read the one or the other. (Maccoll, A. J. C.) MAUNG CHIT v. MAUNG THA KU. 1923 Rang. 113.

Ss. 65 and 74—Public documents—Canal parchas—Evidentiary value of.

Canal parchas issued to tenants giving the name of the tenant in connection with his holding come under the definition of public document and can be proved by production in original. They are of course not conclusive evidence of the facts which they record nor is there necessarily a presumption that they are correct. (Burn, J. M.) CHATTARPAL v. LACHMI DHAR. L. ## S. 65—Secondary evidence—When admissible—Discretion of trial Court.

Secondary evidence of a document may be given when the party offering that evidence cannot, for any reason not arising from his own default or neglect produce the original in reasonable time. The question of allowing secondary evidence depends upon the discretion of the Court and where it has been decided by the Judge of First Instance his conclusion should not be over-ruled except in a clear case of miscarriage of justice—Production of secondary —Ss. 68 and 70—Mortgage—Execution—Attestation—Proof—Admission of execution—Denial of proper attestation—Procedure.

Where a mortgagor admits having signed the mortgage sought to be enforced but couples it with a denial of the presence of the attestor at the time of signing the mortgage must prove the execution of the mortgage by calling at least one attesting witness to prove the attestation. The admission, qualified as it was, did not entitle the mortgagee to the benefit of S. 70 of the Evidence Act.

No admission of execution is effectual under S. 70 of the Evidence Act unless it amounts to an acknowledgment of the formal validity of the instrument. The execution of a document means something more than the mere signing by the party. It includes delivery and signing in the presence of witnesses where witnesses are necessary. Where the admission of execution is unqualified it may well be an admission of due execution or a waiver of proof of due execution within the meaning of S. 70 of the Evidence Act. (Richardson and Suhrawardy, JJ.) ARJUN CHANDRA BHADRA v. KAILAS CHANDRA DAS. 27 C. W. N. 263 : 70 I. C. 532 : 1923 Cal. 149 (2).

The production of one attesting witness satisfies the requirements of S. 68 of the Evidence Act, and from a mere failure to do more than is required of the mortgagee and to produce both the witnesses even if he knows where the other is, it cannot be inferred that the mortgagee is intentionally keeping back the other and that therefore his evidence would damage the plaintiffs case. (Batten J. C. and Hallifax, A. J. C.) LACHMINARAYAN v. MOULVI ZAHIRUL SAID ALVI. 1923 Nag. 322.

—S. 68—Proof of execution.

Where there is no proof of execution of a will the identification of the handwriting of the attestors does not prove execution by the testator. (Broadway and Campbell, JJ.) KAHAN CHAND v. M. JAYARAM. 1923 Lah. 174.

—S. 70—Admission of mortgage—Proof of attestation—Legal representatives.

Section 70 provides that the admission of a party to an attested document, of its execution, by himself, shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested. The section speaks of an admission by a party to an attested document of its execution by himself; that is, of its execution by the party concerned. An admission by the representative of a party to an attested document of its execution by the party cannot be treated as an admission of the party to an attested document of its execution by himself. Where a person admitted execution of the mortgage but specifically denied that the bond had been duly attested as required by law, in such circumstances it is incumbent upon the party who relies upon the mortgage instrument, to establish that the document was attested as required by law. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) BENGY BHUSHAN RAY v. DHIRENDRA NATH DEV. 38 C. L. J. 114 : 74 I. C. 178.

—S. 70—Document required by law to be attested—Admission of execution—Proof of attestation.

Where a party to a document has admitted execution, it is sufficient proof, even though it be a document required by law to be attested. If the admission of the executant has not the effect of dispensing with proof of attestation, there is no necessity for the enactment of S. 70 at all, as recourse may be had to the general provisions of the Act relating to admissions, if the admission of execution is to be used only in the sense of an admission of signing only. The executant's admission may be made antecedent to the institution of legal proceedings. (Duckworth, J.) AUNG RHI v. MA AUNG KRWA PRU. 1 Rang. 557.

—Ss. 70 and 69—Mortgage—Attestation—Proof of—Admission in pleadings—Execution if includes attestation.

A mortgage could not be held to be invalid for absence of proof of attestation where there is nothing in the pleadings to show that the plaintiff was put to the proof of attestation 44 B. 405 Ref. The admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested.

Per Crump, J.—The word "execution" in S. 70 of the Evidence Act means that the party by affixing his signature or mark has signified his assent to the contents of the document, and if a party admits that he has done this, he admits execution. The admission of execution cannot be taken to mean an admission not only of the signature or mark in token of assent by him, but also that all the legal formalities connected with the document have been complied with. There is no reason for holding that where a party admits execution within the meaning of S. 70 he must necessarily be taken to admit that the document has been attested as required by S. 59 of the T. P. Act. (Shah, A. C. J. and Crump, J.) JAGANATH NARSINGDAS v. RAVI TULSIRAM. 47 Bom. 137 : 1923 Bom. 89.

If the attestors of a document are dead or prove hostile S. 71 requires evidence to prove the execution of the document, it is not necessary to prove execution in the presence of attesting witnesses. (Ryves and Daniels, JJ.) PALESHWARI PRASAD v. SHANKAR DAYAL. 74 I. C. 969.

—S. 73—Finger impression—Power of Court to direct accused to give—Admissibility.

A court has power to direct an accused person to make a finger impression and the same is admissible in evidence. So also is the evidence of an expert concerning the finger impression. (Young, O. C. J. Heald and May Oung, JJ.) EMPEROR v. NGA TUN HLAING. 2 Bur. L. J. 270.

—S. 79—Certificate of registration—Presumption of genuineness.

The registering officer's evidence is not necessary to prove the certificate of registration the genuineness of which is to be presumed under S. 79 of Evidence Act. (Martineau, J.) MUHAMMAD HASSAN v. SOHARA. 71 I. C. 805.

—S. 90—Document more than thirty years old—Execution by a person professing to be agent of another proof of authority—Presumption.

Where a document more than thirty years old purports to be signed by A as agent of B, all that S. 90 of the Evidence Act does is to raise a presumption that the document was signed by A. The fact that A had authority to sign the document as agent of B could not be presumed under the terms of the section. The authority must be proved by the person relying upon it. (*Walmsley and B. B. —S. 90—Execution suspicious—Deliberate delay.

A will purported to be executed in 1887 was brought to light for the first time in 1907 when it was produced in a Court, of Law In 1910 an application for probate in respect of it was made but it was ultimately withdrawn. At that time only one of the attesting witnesses was said to have been alive. Yet no further attempt was made to bring the will into Court till some ten years later when even that witness was dead. There was no reasonable explanation about the delay after 1910 in making the application for probate. There was no evidence as to the custody of the will before 1907, held that the applicant cannot get the benefit of S. 90, Evidence Act. (Prideaux and Kotwal, A. J. C.) CHANNULAL v. MT. PUNA 75 I. —S. 90—Kajja receipt—40 years old.

From Kajja receipts, the Court is entitled to presume that the person named therein as purchaser had obtained possession through the Court. When that document was over 40 years old, although it is possible that physical possession of the land may not have been given to the purchaser, there is no reason why the Court should presume that no possession was given. ## S. 90—Presumption under—Executant illiterate—Registration—Effect.

In the case of a document more than 30 years old executed by an illiterate person but registered, there is from these two circumstances a presumption of its being genuine. (Dalal, J. C.) BHIM SHANKAR DATT v. MANI RAM.

S. 90—Presumption—Extent of.

The presumption that arises under S 90 of the Evidence Act only extends to the genuineness of old documents coming from proper custody, it does not further go to the extent of holding that the documents were in fact executed by persons possessed of the requisite authority. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) TARAKESWAR PAL v. SRISH CHANDRA GHOSH MANDAL.

27 C. W. N. 964.

S. 90—Presumption—Scribe signing for the executants.

Although in the case of sale deeds more than 50 years old the presumption of law was that they were executed by the persons who purported to execute them, there was no presumption that the scribe who signed these documents for the executants had authority from the executants to do it. 15 A. ## S. 91—Deposition—Not read out or explained to witness—Admissibility.

Even if S. 91 of the Evidence Act be construed so as to apply to the deposition of a witness, it merely excludes oral evidence of its contents and does not make the document itself inadmissible nor prevent its being otherwise proved. 45 C. 325 referred 42 M. 561 dissented. ## S. 91—Lease deed—Admission of other evidence to prove tenancy.

Where a tenant as a defence to a suit in ejectment by the landlord sets up a permanent tenancy but does not produce the settlement and bandobast papers, the onus is on the tenant to prove the permanent character of the lease and in view of S. 91 of the Evidence Act, no evidence other than the Settlement papers was admissible to prove the character and terms of the lease. ## EVIDENCE ACT (I OF 1872), S. 91.

S. 91—Oral evidence.

The rule with regard to writings is that oral proof cannot be substituted for the written evidence of a contract which the parties have put into writing. And the reason is that the writing is tacitly considered by the parties themselves as the only repository and the appropriate evidence of their agreement. (Lord Carson) SUBRAMANIAN v. M. L. R. M. LUTCHMAN.

S. 91—Partition—Absence of registration—Oral evidence—Part performance—Effect.

Where a document of partition is unregistered, it is inadmissible in evidence, nor can oral evidence be let in to prove the partition. But if the arrangement has been acted upon and there is part performance by the party seeking relief and he could maintain a suit for specific performance, proof of the arrangement can be let in. (Das and Macpherson, JJ.) NAND LAL MAHTON v. DHANUKDHARI MAHTON.

S. 91—Partition—Unregistered deed—Oral evidence—Scope of section.

A partition can be effected orally, but if the parties put it into writing but do not register it even though the properties are worth more than Rs 100, it is wholly inoperative. S. 91 of the Evidence Act precludes oral evidence being given in such a case. It is true that relationship such as partnership, landlord and tenant, etc. may be proved apart from documents embodying such relationship, but not so the facts and terms of a partition deed. ## S. 91—Pre-existing debt—Promissory note—Suit on original consideration.

If a creditor has a cause of action for the recovery of money for which his debtor has executed a promissory note, separate from and independent of the note he can recover upon such cause in case the note for any reason as for want of being properly stamped cannot be put in evidence 34 A. 158 foll. —S. 92—Acknowledgment in writing but unstamped—Parol evidence.

Parol evidence is admissible to prove a debt, acknowledged in writing by the debtors, when such acknowledgment being unstamped is inadmissible in evidence. (Le Rossignol, J.) TIKHAN RAM v. LAL, 74 I. C. 939 (1) : 1923 Lah. 301 (1)

—S. 92—Agreement complete in itself.

A contract for sale of land was entered into by means of a writing appearing in the books of one of the parties. It was signed by both parties and witnessed. The defendant said that the agreement appearing in the book did not contain the whole of the agreement arrived at between the parties but there was an oral agreement that if any body else per chance offered more than Rs. 500 to the 1st defendant above the agreed amount before the expiry of the period in the agreement, the agreement with the plaintiff was to be treated as null and void. Held the evidence about the oral agreement was not admissible. It may very well be that a writing may be an imperfect agreement of which a Court cannot decree specific performance, but if on the face of it, it contains all the terms which would entitle it to be considered as a perfect agreement which could be enforced, then undoubtedly no parol evidence could be adduced so as to alter or add to its terms unless they came within one of the provisos of section 92. —S. 92—Recitals in documents—Oral evidence to contradict—Admissibility.

Where there is a duly signed receipt for the payment of rent oral evidence could not be admitted in supersession of the recitals in the receipts. But if the case is that false entries were made in the receipts there is a question of fraud and oral evidence is admissible under S. 92 proviso (1) of the Evidence Act. —S. 92—Sale deed—Consideration—Variation of terms.

Though want of consideration or failure of consideration or difference in the kind of consideration may be proved evidence to vary the amount of consideration in a registered sale deed is inadmissible. If such a course were permissible the protection intended by the Legislature to be afforded by the adoption of the rule embodied in S. 92 of the Evidence Act would be completely nullified. —S. 92—Suit for pre-emption—Vendee if can prove document was not a sale.

In a suit for pre-emption on the ground the defendant had taken a deed of sale from the owner the vendee can adduce oral evidence to show the document was not a sale. KHUSHI RAM. 21 A. L. J. 932.

—S. 92 proviso (2)—Scope of.

Where the plaintiff's evidence proved that the written agreement about supply of consignments by defendant was incomplete and that there was a supplementary oral agreement.

Held, it would not be inconsistent with the terms of the document that there should have been an agreement that the consignments should be sent when the plaintiff ordered or requested that they should be sent and that the defendant was not bound to despatch consignments without definite orders. ## EVIDENCE ACT (I OF 1872), S. 92

—S. 92—Proviso (3)—Oral agreement—Condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation.

An attempt to show that the agreement reduced to writing is not what it purported to be but something different is opposed to S. 92 (3) of the Evidence Act but oral evidence of an agreement constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of an obligation under the instrument could be proved. (Batten, J. C.) TATIA v. SAWANIA. 71 I. C. 477 : 6 N. L. J. 21 : 1923 Nag. 135.

In a suit on a promissory note the defence was that the promissory note in the suit was passed to secure the plaintiff-mortgagees against any claim that might be made by their prior mortgagees who had been paid off and from whom the defendant has not obtained a reconveyance. Held that this alleged agreement amounted to a suspension of the obligation attaching under the note until the necessity for enforcing the indemnity arises. It was not an agreement to postpone payment of an existing liability but one by which the note is to have no legal effect until the eventuality to guard against which it was passed arises. Under the circumstances the alleged agreement may be proved under proviso (3) to S. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act. (Shah, A. C. J. and Kemp, J.) AHMED SAHEB BAPU v. UBHAIYA HARS. 25 Bom. L. Where the parties enter into a contract, they can substitute another in its place and the substituted contract is the one to be looked to, not the one which was first entered into. When an instrument appears on its face to be free from ambiguity, but upon the endeavour being made to apply it to the persons or things indicated, it transpires that the words are equally applicable to two or more persons or to two or more things, this is called a latent ambiguity. In such a case extrinsic evidence is admissible to resolve it. The principle that when an instrument contains an ambiguity, evidence of user under it may be given in order to show the sense in which the parties employed the language used applies to a modern as well as an ancient instrument. "Undersigned promise to pay to A the sum of Rs 1,000 payable during the period of one year without interest." Held that the burden of proof was on the executee to prove consideration, where executant admitted only execution while the other members of the family of the executant denied both execution and consideration. 100 P. R. 1915 Dist. (Abdul Raoof, and Moti Sagar, JJ.) RAGHU NANDAN v. BUDHU MAL. 1923 Lah. 346.

—S. 105—Exception—Prosecution for an offence—Burden of proof.

The incidence of the burden of proof means that the person on whom it lies must prove that fact. But the meaning of the expression "proved" as defined in S. 3 of the Evidence Act, is in no way affected by the incidence of the burden of proof. When evidence has been given by the defence to support the defence of an exception, the burden of proof is discharged if the evidence is believed and the jury have their ordinary duty of deciding a question of fact on the evidence before them. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) MAHOMED YUNUS v. EMPEROR. 50 Cal. 318 : 1923 Cal. 517.

—S. 105—Exemptions—Presumption—Burden of proof.

The law requires that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of the general exceptions in the Penal Code to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused. But this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record whether produced by the prosecution or the defence, that the general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to the satisfaction of the Court that the accused comes within the exception. (Walsh and Ryves, JJ.) MT. ANANDI v. EMPEROR. 45 A. 329 : 74 I. C. 689 : 24 Cr. L. J. 225 : 1923 A. 327 (2).

—Ss. 107 and 108—Construction—Presumption under.

Ss. 107 and 108 only relate to the date when the suit was brought, that is to say, as to whether a man is alive or dead as the case may be at the date of the suit, and not at some particular period anterior to the suit. The decisions also establish that there is no presumption as to whether a particular person was dead at any time within the period in the question. (Marten and Fawcett, JJ.) RAMACHANDRA SADASHIV v. KESHO DHONPU. 1923 Bom. 208.

—S. 108—Fact of death—Presumption as to.

What the court may presume under S. 108 of the Evidence Act is confined to the factum of death. It cannot presume that because a person has not been heard of, he died at any particular moment or in any particular way, or from any particular cause 34 A. 36 Ref. ## —S. 108—Presumption as to death—Suit by Hindu claiming as heir of a deceased person—Father of plaintiff unheard for 10 years before suit—Hindu Law rule—Applicability of.

In a suit by plaintiffs for the recovery of the properties of one T, as the persons entitled to them as his heirs or nearest reversioners, they alleged that their father K. had not been heard of for nearly 10 years before suit and that they were thus the nearest reversioners. Held that the rule of Hindu Law that at least 12 years should elapse before a man unheard of should be treated as dead was inapplicable to the case but that the 7 years' rule under S. 108 of the Evidence Act applied and that as he had not been heard of for 10 years before suit he must be presumed to have died on the date of suit. The rule of Hindu Law referred to is only a rule of evidence and is not applicable after the passing of the Evidence Act. (Krishnan and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ.) PONDURI ADEYYA v. JALADI BUREYYA.

—S. 108—Presumption of death—Person not heard of for seven years.

S. 108 of the Evidence Act has no reference whatever to the date of death of a person who has not been heard of for 7 years. The date of death must be proved by the party who is interested in establishing that a person died on or before a particular date. (Shah, A. J. C. and Crump, J.) *GOPAL BHIMJI AVTE v. ## —S. 110—Converse if true

The presumption that plaintiff having the title also has possession can properly be made, in the case of jungle or waste land where there is no proof or very little proof of acts of ownership having been exercised on either side, or where the evidence as to such act or such ownership is very nearly equal. Though S. 110 of the Evidence Act recognises a presumption that the person in possession also has a good title there is no corresponding section saying that the person with the title should be presumed to be in possession. This presumption is one that can only come under S. 114 of the Evidence Act which allows the court to presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened regard being had to the common course of natural events &c., (Marten and Fawcett, JJ.) KASHI NATH v. GANESH. 1923 Bom. 361.

—S. 110—Possession—Title—Evidence evenly balanced.

Where there is strong evidence of possession on the part of A opposed by evidence apparently strong also on the part of his opponent B, in estimating the weight due to the evidence on both sides, the presumption may well be regarded that possession went with title. —S. 114—Presumption—Continuance of existing state of things.

Proof of the existence at a particular time of a fact of a continuous nature gives rise to a rebuttable presumption within local limits that it existed at a subsequent time or has previously existed. The limits of time within which the inference of continuance possesses sufficient probative force to be relevant must obviously vary with each case—always strongest in the beginning the inference steadily diminishes in force with the lapse of time at a rate proportionate to the quality of permanence belonging to the fact in question, until it ceases or perhaps is supplanted by a directly opposite inference. To put the matter shortly, it will be inferred that a given set of facts or set of facts whose existence at a particular time is once established in evidence, continues to exist as long as such facts usually exist. The inference of continuance, whether backwards or forwards, whether upwards or downwards, is an inference of fact and may therefore be rebutted. —S. 114—Presumption from non-production of document—Old document—Probability of loss.

Where a document is a very old one the possibility of its having been lost and being no longer in existence is naturally much brighter than in the case of a document of recent date. Consequently the presumption arising from the non-production of the document is not quite a strong one in the case of an old document as in the case of a recent one. (Daniels, J.) RAMJI DAS v. —S. 114—Presumption as to ordinary course of business.

Where sums are paid before the presiding officer of the Court at the time when a receipt was given for them, the presumption under S. 114 of the Indian Evidence Act is that the ordinary course of business was followed in the case in question. The mere statement by appellant's Counsel that these sums are not always paid at the time when the receipts are given was sufficient to throw the onus on the prosecution of proving that the plea was wrong. ## —S. 114 (b)—Corroboration

The accused was charged with dacoity. The approver himself at first stated most definitely that he did not recognise the accused as being one of the party concerned in the dacoity. He subsequently retracted from this statement and declared that he did recognize him; but that was only after he had been pressed by the prosecution. Held the statement first made should be accepted.

Where the only corroboration was the recovery of certain articles, alleged to be some of the articles stolen and subsequently produced from the house of the accused, his house was searched in his absence and he was given no opportunity of checking the results of the search or giving any explanation as to how the articles came into that house, and there was no evidence as to where the respective ornaments were found, nor was any thing said as to who produced them: Held that there was no sufficient corroboration. Where plaintiffs allowed one S. to join with them in a suit against another person and to obtain a decree as the son of a particular man without objecting that he was the son of the man and had no right to sue, they should be estopped from disputing his property in a suit by them for possession against paternity. ## —S. 115—Equitable estoppel—Implied consent.

In a suit for demolition of certain constructions erected on the plaintiff's land, it was found that the plaintiffs tried to prevent the defendants from erecting them, and that the defendants had no reasonable belief that they were the owners of the disputed land on which the constructions were made. Held, that it is impossible to bring the case within the principle of equitable estoppel laid down in 21 All. 490 (P. C.) (Daniels, J.) MAOLA v. BAHORU. 1923 A. 567.

—S. 115—Estoppel—Building on land—Silence—Duty to speak—Negligent omission.

The acquiescence or estoppel which will deprive a man of legal rights must amount to fraud. A man is not to be deprived of his legal rights unless he has acted in such a way as would make it fraudulent for him to set up those rights. The element or the requisites necessary to constitute fraud of that description are these:—In the first place, the plaintiff must have made a mistake as to his legal rights. Secondly the plaintiff must have expended some money or must have done some act (not necessarily upon the defendant's land) on the faith of the mistaken belief. Thirdly the defendant, the possessor of the legal right, must know of the existence of his own right which is inconsistent with the right claimed by the plaintiff. If he does not know of it he is in the same position as the plaintiff and the doctrine of acquiescence is founded upon conduct with a knowledge of your legal rights. Fourthly, the defendant, the possessor of the legal right must know of the plaintiff's mistaken belief of his rights. If he does not, there is nothing which it calls upon him to assert his own rights. Lastly, the defendant, the possessor of the legal right, must have encouraged the plaintiff in his expenditure of money or in the other acts which he has done either directly or by abstaining from asserting his legal right. Where all these elements exist, there is fraud of such a nature as will entitle the Court to restrain the possessor of the legal right from exercising it but nothing short of this will do. Where the defendants as in the present case were under no mistake about their rights, they were perfectly aware that the land belonged to the plaintiff and they wrote a letter to the plaintiff asking for permission to construct an over bridge, there is no room for any estoppel. —Ss. 115 and 91 to 94—Estoppel—Scope of the sections.

Section 115 of the Evidence Act may no doubt override sections 91 to 94 because the law of estoppel is one which must prevail against a rule of procedure only. If a person has by his act permitted the other party to believe that the agreement was other than that embodied in the document and has caused him to act upon that belief he cannot fall back upon the provisions of section 92 and thereby escape from the consequences of his own actions. But this is a different thing from holding that when such conduct does not amount to an estoppel it may be proved in evidence or in order to show that the intention of the parties was something other than that expressed by them in the written document. If the written document is perfectly clear in its terms and applies to existing facts, evidence to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts is distinctly excluded by section 94 of the Evidence Act. (Pipon. J. C.) DHANNA RAM v. CHHABIL DAS. 72 I. C. 931.

—S. 115—Facts known to parties—Effect—Act upon such belief—Meaning of.

Where all the facts are within the knowledge of both parties there is no scope for the doctrine of estoppel. The language of the section extends to the encouragement of an erroneous belief as in Ramsden v Dyson.

—S. 115 — Land—User of — Conversion—Equitable estoppel.

The defendants, having been granted a user of certain lands for certain purposes, used it for purposes other than the purpose for which it had been granted, by digging a baoli which was used by the public. Held there was no question of the owner standing by watching the construction of the baoli being made by a person who was under a mistaken belief that the land was his own property, in order to gain an advantage. The defendants could not have believed that the land was their own property and there was nothing to show that the plaintiffs had any sinister motive in abstaining at the time from protest. (Stuart, J.) MAULVI MAHOMED v. MAHABIR DAS. 70 I. C. 886 (1) : 1923 A. 11 (1).

A minor is not estopped from setting up his minority. As judicially interpreted the Contract Act makes Contract entered into by a minor void and the court should not be compelled to pronounce them valid by the provisions contained in the Evidence Act. It is not apparently the case that the word 'person' in the section does not include a minor or certified lunatic other person under a disability to contract owing to imbecility of judgment. But it might be held that such a person could not be held to have intentionally caused anything. When the law of the contract declared that an infant would not be liable upon a contract or in the statute of fraud in connection with a contract, he cannot be made liable upon the same contract, by means of an estoppel; in other words there can be no doubt about the general law that the principal of estoppel which is provision of adjective law cannot be invoked to defeat the plain provision of a statute.

Per Raimond, A. J. C.—There is no distinction in principle between a minor plaintiff and minor defendant and if in the case of a contract entered into by a minor the principle of estoppel is to be applied to him whether he is the plaintiff or defendant it would be tantamount to binding him by an agreement which the legislature has declared to be void and hence unenforceable. (Kennedy, J. C., Raimond and Kemp, A. J. C.) MT. HURI v. ROSHAN KHUDABUX. 1923 Sind 5 : 16 S. L. R. 112 : 71 I. C. 161.

—Ss 115 and 116—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Estoppel—Denial of title.

Even where the mortgagors are trustees acting in a public capacity and not for their own benefit they are estopped from denying their title and cannot set up as a defence against the mortgagee that the property so mortgaged is trust property which the mortgagors had no right to mortgage. —S. 115—Representation—Recognition of occupancy tenancy—Misdescription of tenant's status.

The mere fact that a tenant's status is incorrectly described in rent receipts issued by the Zemindar does not estop him from denying the tenant's status. An occupancy tenant against whom there was a decree for rent died and the Zemindar applied for execution against the daughter's son of the tenant who was an infant at the time and the agent of the Zemindar stated that if half the arrears were paid, the daughter's son would not be ejected. Held, that the statement did not estop the Zemindar from asserting that he had no occupancy rights. (Burn, J. M.) PARTAB SINGH v. RAJA DURGA NARAIN SINGH. L. R. 4 A. 8 (Rev.).

A plea unnecessarily raised by a party and decided by the Court also equally unnecessarily does not estop the party from putting the same in a later suit. (Campbell, J.) SOHAN SINGH v. JAWALA SINGH. 73 I. C. 854 : 1923 Lah. 248.

—S. 116—At the beginning of the tenancy

The words in S. 116 "at the beginning of the tenancy" only apply to cases in which tenants are put into possession of tenancy by the person to whom they have attorned and not to cases in which the tenants have previously been in possession. Where there was no proof of any rent ever having been paid or that the defendant was inducted as a tenant by the plaintiff and the parties were brothers and admittedly the house was once joint property. Held in these circumstances the defendant was not estopped from denying that he was the plaintiffs tenant. (Campbell, J.) RISHI KESH v. MELA RAM. 73 I. C. 450 : 1923 Lah. 483.

—S. 116—Landlord and tenant—Estoppel—Denial of title—Admission through mistake or ignorance.

Though, under section 116 of the Evidence Act no tenant can deny his landlord's title existing at the commencement of the lease, the rule only applies where the tenant has been let into possession by such landlord. If through ignorance or mistake a tenant has executed a rent-note and has not been put in possession by the lessor it seems that he can dispute the lessor's title. (Prideaux, A. J. C.) MR. —S. 116—Landlord and tenant—Kabuliyat—Possession taken under—Denial of title of Landlord—Estoppel.

Where the defendant has executed a Kabuliyat in favour of the plaintiff and obtained possession of certain lands as tenant on the strength of that document, he is estopped from denying the title or possession of his grantor in a suit for rent and from setting up that the plaintiff is merely a benamidar for some other person. —S. 118—Examination of witness of tender years—Procedure.

It is of very great importance that when the evidence of a child of tender years is adduced, the Judicial Officer should, for the sake of precaution, ascertain as a preliminary measure, by means of a few simple questions, whether the intelligence of the child is such that (whether sworn or not) it is capable of giving testimony which is patent of credit; and it is desirable that something should, at the commencement of the record of the evidence of the witness of this character be entered to show that such a test has been in fact made. It may turn out in the course of the examination at the trial that the test has been a fallacious one and that the evidence which the child gives is not intelligible and in such a case, it is always open to the Judicial Officer to say that he cannot accept the evidence which the child is giving. On the other hand there is no obligation imposed by law upon a judge definitely to make on the record any endorsement of his own as to a child's capacity, and when he has clearly relied upon the evidence given, it is idle to suggest that he could have been other than thoroughly satisfied as to the capacity of the child to give intelligible testimony. (Bucknill, J.) PANCHU CHOUDHRY v. EMPEROR

A person who is tried for an offence under S. 3 of the Gambling Act has every right to cite as his witness another person who is a co-accused with him for an offence under S. 4 in a separate trial—The co-accused's position is sufficiently protected by S. 132 Evidence Act. —S. 133—Accomplice—Testimony—Corroboration—Practice.

Under S. 133, Evidence Act, the evidence of an accomplice by itself is enough for a conviction, but it is a rule of practice founded on experience that in every case where an accomplice has given evidence, the court must raise a presumption that he is unworthy of credit unless corroborated in material particulars. Failure to raise this presumption is an error of law, but in each case the weight to be attached must depend on the particular circumstances. (Mullick and Thornhill, JJ.) MADAN GURU v. EMPEROR

—S. 133—Approver—Corroboration

The evidence of an approver, if believed, is sufficient foundation whereon to repose a conviction, but in practice, the Court ex majori cautela insists upon corroboration of the approver's statements in material particulars. (Le Rossignol, J.) TOTA SINGH v. EMPEROR.

69 I. C. 462 : 23 Cr. L. J. 734.

—S. 133—Corroboration of accomplice—Extent of

Where the only evidence against an accused person is that he has produced stolen property out of a place which is not in his own possession, that evidence is not sufficient to support a conviction for theft or for receiving stolen property. But the production of the property is clearly evidence against the person producing it and is material corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice who has deposed that that person joined him in committing a dacoity or a burglary or a theft. The discovery of stolen property out of a house jointly occupied by himself and his uncle, is corroboration of the approver's story against the accused. Such production might not be sufficient evidence of itself to support a conviction for being dishonestly in possession of stolen property but it certainly is evidence against the persons producing it. The value of the evidence is another matter. (Scott Smith, J.) KHUSHAL SINGH v. EMPEROR.

S. 133—Corroboration by an approver—Legal.

There is nothing in S. 133 to suggest that the statement of one approver cannot be regarded as corroborating that made by another approver. No doubt if it could be shown that the approvers had ample opportunity of consultation, this corroborative value would be greatly diminished (Lumsden, J.) EMPEROR v. DARYA SINGH.

S. 133—Corroboration not possible—Value of evidence.

The uncorroborated evidence of testimony cannot safely be the basis of a conviction. If in the nature of things corroboration is not possible in a particular case, then the accomplice's statement must be treated as unworthy of credit. His demeanour in the witness box cannot be a substitute for corroboration. (Wazir Husan, A. J. C.) MANNA LAL v. EMPEROR.

S. 133—Evidence of approver—Corroboration—Criminal P. C. Ss. 395 and 396.

The approver referred to a story by one A who invited him along with appellants to join in the dacoity; the incident of the story told by the approver turned out to be true on police inquiry. Appellants were seen with the approver at Sukbo and arrested in his company at Mandra. The possession of the three tickets all from Chakala to Mandra and bearing consecutive numbers was strong corroboration of the approver's story as to the appellants having accompanied him to the scene of the occurrence.

Held, the guilt of the appellants had been established beyond reasonable doubt by the evidence of the approver which had been amply corroborated as against them. (Broadway and Martineau, JJ.) HAKIM v. EMPEROR.

EVIDENCE ACT (I OF 1872), S. 154.

In ordinary cases the question of onus is not of great importance in appeal where both parties have produced the whole of their evidence upon an issue. But where witnesses have been disbelieved on inadmissible evidence, e. g., certified copies of judgments put in without examining the witness under S. 136, the effect is that the decision is vitiated. (Campbell, J.) SOHAN SINGH v. SANTA SINGH.

S. 138—Scope of.

It is certainly implied by S. 138 of the Evidence Act that a party must have had an opportunity to cross-examine and does not mean that merely a right to cross-examine a witness without an opportunity being offered for cross-examination is sufficient compliance with the requirements of the law. (Jwala Prasad and Coutts, JJ.) MOTI SINGH v. DHANUKDHARI SINGH.

Ss. 146 and 148 to 152—Scandalous question—Relevancy.

During the examination of one of the defendants by plaintiff a question was put whether she was made pregnant by a certain person. The question was objected to but the plaintiff contended that it was relevant, his case being that the witness did not inherit the property by reason of her unchastity during the lifetime of her husband. If the plaintiff's case was that she did not inherit the property of her husband by reason of her unchastity during his lifetime, then the question would be relevant. If however, it was asked for impeaching her credit as a witness, the Court will have to consider the provisions of S. 146 and 148 to 152 of the Evidence Act. (Chatterjee and Pearson, JJ.) SUBALA DAS v. INDRA KUMAR HAZZRA.

S. 154—Hostile witness—Cross-examination—Admissibility of evidence.

It is not open to the prosecution in a criminal trial to cross-examine their own witness unless the Court declares him to be a hostile witness, unless this is done the answer to questions would not be admissible in evidence and the Court should not allow such questions. The effect of S. 288 Cr. P. Code is to place the deposition of a witness before the committing Magistrate exactly on the same footing as the deposition in the Sessions Court. It is "testimony" within the meaning of S. 157 of the Evidence Act and statements made by the witness before the investigating officer are admissible for the purpose of corroborating such "testimony". It is in the discretion of the Sessions Judge to believe and act upon the statements before the committing Magistrate in preference to contradictory statements made before himself on the ground that the former are corroborated by the statements made before the investigating officer. —S. 163—Production of documents by a party—Inspection by plaintiff—Admission of documents and evidence.

In a pending trial the defendant produced certain account books and gave inspection of the same to the plaintiff on his request. The plaintiff however did not admit the genuineness of those accounts. The Court admitted the documents in evidence without proof and asked the plaintiff to adduce rebutting evidence if any, held that the procedure of the lower Court was not justified by S. 163 of the Evidence Act. S. 163 does not render proof of the document to be executed unnecessary or alter the normal incidence of that burden. Quaere. Whether S. 163 of the Evidence Act is applicable to accounts produced under the procedure for discovery or only to accounts produced after the trial has begun. EXCESS PROFITS DUTY ACT (X OF 1919), S. 18—Proceedings for the recovery of duty—Limitation Rules framed under the Act,—Rule 24.

Rule 24 (1) describes how the Excess Profits duty is to be recovered when default has been made in payment. This is the only rule dealing with mode of recovery, and the subject of the rule is entered as "mode and time of recovery." Also Rules 23 and 24 of the rules made by the Govt. under S. 18 (1) and (2) of the Excess Profits Duty Act are classed under the heading "recovery of duty." whilst rule 13, which is the rule providing for a notice of demand being served on the person assessed, is put under the heading "demand." From this it is evident that the demand made on the assessee is treated in the rules as something quite distinct from the recovery of the duty, the proceedings for which begin when default has been made. The same distinction is made in the Income Tax Acts, VII of 1918 and XI of 1922, where the notice of demand is provided for in a chapter the subject of which is "Deductions and Assessment," whilst there is a separate chapter dealing with the subject of the recovery of the tax.

The words in sub-rule (3) of the rule 24 "proceedings for the recovery of any sums" mean the proceedings taken under sub-rule (1) of that rule after default has been made in the payment. (Martineau, J.) GIAN SINGH BAHADUR SINGH v. EMPEROR. 4 Lah. 165 : 73 I. C. 106 : 1924 Lah. 54.

Both under the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 and the previous C. P. Codes the legality of the concurrent execution has been recognised though in practice it is not generally carried out. —Right to apply—Beneficial owner of decree.

Where the beneficial owner of a decree applies to be made a party to a pending execution application presented by the nominal decree-holder, on the ground that his rights were not properly safeguarded, the Court is bound to implead him as a party. 26 C. 250 ; 44 M. 919 Ref. (Krishnan, J.) RUKMANIAMMAL v. RAMACHANDRA THON DAMAN SAHIB. 44 M. L. J. 122 : 17 L. W. 87 : 72 I. C. 874 : (1923) Mad. 317 (1).

—When ceases—Confirmation of sale

Though the decree-holder-purchaser is unable to obtain possession that would not entitle him to take out further execution for that portion of his purchase money which is represented by the property purchased by him. Execution comes to an end with the sale of the property and whether or not the auction purchaser obtains possession of the property sold is wholly immaterial for the purpose of the decree and it does not in any way affect it. (Das and Adami, JJ.) TRILOKE NATH JHA v. BANSMAN JHA. 1 Pat. L. R. 6 : 2 Pat. 249 : 72 I. C. 938 : 1923 P. 22.

—Order in—Notice to parties—Necessity for.

No order to the prejudice of a party can be passed without giving him an opportunity of being heard. (Jwala Prasad and Bucknill, JJ.) GOUR CHANDRA ROY v. JANARDHAN PRASAD THAKUR. 4 Pat. L. T. 204 : 1923 P. 180.

EXECUTION SALE—Adjournment—Damages if can be awarded—Order if executable.

On the application of the judgment debtors an execution sale was adjourned on terms and the order further provided that if any further adjournment was asked for the party would have to pay damages : Held the order was illegal as it awarded damages for an event which may or may not happen ; (2) that even if it was a valid order it was not by itself an executable order ; (3) even if executable, an application for execution made more than three years after the next adjournment was asked for would be barred. (Das and Kul-wani Sahay, JJ.) MAULVI JAMIL AHMAD v. BABU KESHO DAS. (1923) Pat. 202 : 72 I. C. 1035 : 1923 P. 407.

EXECUTION SALE.

—Bona fide purchasers—Protection to.

Courts will as far as possible protect innocent purchasers from the consequences of irregularities and defects of procedure at such sale for the reason that strangers are to prescribe that proceedings are regular ; but such help cannot be extended to the overlooking of patent want of inherent jurisdiction on the part of the executing Court (Spencer and Devadoss, JJ.) MAHARAJA OF JEYPORE v. RAJA LAKSHMINARASIMMA GARU. 18 L. W. 747.

—Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act—Objection to sale—Sale held and confirmed—Effect of

In execution, an objection was raised that under the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act properties could not be sold but this was dismissed for default and the sale took place and was confirmed. In appeal the order of dismissal was set aside and the matter remanded Held the effect was to revise the objection and if the same is upheld, the sale and confirmation would fall to the ground as being in contravention of the Act. (Sulaiman, J.) SATDHAR v. RAM CHANDRA. L. R. 4 All. 607 : 21 A. L. J. 917.

—Completion of—Bids—Knocking down of property—Acceptance of bid by Nazir—Resale of property—Order for—Propriety of.

An execution sale was held by a Court Nazir who accepted a bid and the deposit of 25 p. c. of the purchase money After the property had been knocked down another bidder applied to the court which ordered a resale. Held that the sale was not concluded when the property was knocked down and the deposit made and the court had a discretion to order a resale. (Newbould, J.) FAZIL MEAH v. PROSARNA KUMAR. 1923 Cal. 316 (1).

—Jurisdiction of court—Agency court if can sell property outside.

A court has no jurisdiction in execution of a decree to sell property over which it had no territorial jurisdiction at the time it passed the order of sale. Thus an Agency Court has no right to sell the right to collect kattubadi in villages situated beyond its territorial jurisdiction (Spencer and Devadoss, JJ.) MAHARAJA OF JEYPORE v. RAJA LAKSHMINARASIMMA GARU. 18 L. W. 747.

—Legality of—Major debt treated as minor—Knowledge of proceedings—Estoppel. See (1922) DIG. COL. 601. RADHAKRISHNASWAMI NAIDU v. ANNAMALAI CHETTIAR. 70 I. C. 365.

—Mortgage decree—Interest of purchaser.

The interest of a purchaser at a sale held in execution of a mortgage decree is certainly more than merely the interest of the judgment-debtor. (Ayling and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ.) TANJORE PALACE ESTATE BY ITS RECEIVER SUNDARAM IYER v. THIYAGARAJA PILLAI. (1923) Mad. 160 (2).

—Objection to—When to be taken.

The objection if any, should have been taken before the Court proceeded to sell the property

EXECUTION SALE.

The property having been sold the execution case was at an end; and it cannot now be urged that the objection to the sale is a question that arises in execution. (Das and Kulkarni Sahai, JJ.)

73 I. C. 451 1923 P. 355.

———Rights of purchaser—Property purchased subject to encumbrance—Effect of.

Where a purchaser at an execution sale buys the property subject to an encumbrance, he must be deemed to accept the burden of the encumbrance and cannot thereafter escape from it merely because his purchase has not been profitable. 31 M. 439 : 40 B. 646 ; referred to (Hallifax, A. J. C.) PANDURANG v. NARAYAN.

6 N. L. J. 78.

———Sale subject to incumbrances—Rights of purchaser.

On the sale of the property subject to encumbrances the vendor gets the price of his interest, whatever it may be whether the price settled by private bargain or determined by public competition together with an indemnity against the encumbrances affecting the land. The contract of indemnity may be express or implied. If the purchaser covenants with the vendor to pay the encumbrances it is still nothing more than a contract of indemnity. The purchaser takes the property subject to the burden attached to it. If the encumbrances turn out to be invalid, the vendor has nothing to complain of. He has got what he bargained for. His indemnity is complete. He cannot pick up the burthen of which the land is relieved and seize it as his own property. The notion that after the completion of the sale, the purchaser is in some way a trustee for the vendor of the amount by which the existence or supposed existence of encumbrances had led to a diminution of the price and liable therefore, to account to the vendor for anything that remains of that amount after the encumbrances are satisfied or disposed of, is without foundation. After the purchase is completed the judgment debtor has no claim to participate in any benefit which the purchaser may derive from his purchase by reason of the incumbrance being less onerous than it was stated to be (Kotwal and Prideaux, A.J.C.) MITSUI BUSAN KAISHA LTD. v. PADAMRAJ KULCHAND.

EXECUTION SALE

———Setting aside—Fraud—Plea of purchaser without notice—When a bar to application See C. P. Code, S. 47. 37 C. L. J. 145.

———Setting aside—Power of Court—Inherent power—Abuse of the process of Court—Suppression of facts—Leave to bid—Matters to be considered in granting leave.

The Court has inherent power to refuse to confirm an execution sale if it is satisfied that it was misled either in giving leave to bid or in fixing the real price. The Court will not however exercise the inherent power unless it has had all the facts fully before it and is satisfied that it has been misled. In order to show that the Court has been misled, it is necessary to show either actual misstatements to the Court or non-disclosure to the Court of relevant facts unknown to the Court and which there was a duty to bring before the Court. 23 Mad. 217 followed. On an application for leave to bid the main question for the Court to consider is whether it is to the advantage of every one concerned in order to obtain the highest price that the plaintiff should be allowed to bid or not. In this case their Lordships set aside an execution sale by reason of the deliberate suppression by the decree holder in his affidavit before the Registrar on the Original Side of the facts that the properties were put up to auction before and that the Court had fixed a very much higher reserve price and that a bid for a much larger amount was not accepted.

Per Wallace, J.—Order 21, R 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not oust the inherent power of a Court to interfere to cancel the sale even though no party has applied for cancellation when the Court discovers in the course of the proceedings, that the decree-holder auction-purchaser deliberately misled it and profited thereby to the disadvantage of the judgment-debtor or the judgment debtor's creditors. (Schwabe, C. J. and Wallace, J.) RAGHAVACHARIAR v. MURUGESA MUDALI. 46 Mad. 583 : 44 M. L. J. 680 : (1923) M. W. N. 323 : 32 M. L. T. (H. C.) 285 : 17 L. W. 750 : 72 I. C. 545 : 1923 Mad. 635.

———Validity—Nullity and irregularity—Distinction—Test.

It cannot be maintained on principle that because a sale has been held in contravention of a statutory provision, it must necessarily be null and void. An irregularity is a deviation from a rule of law which does not take away the foundation or authority for the proceeding ; whereas a nullity is a proceeding that is taken without any foundation or is so essentially defective as to be of no avail or effect. One test is to see if the party can waive the objection. If he can, it amounts to an irregularity, if not, a nullity. A provision based on grounds of public policy cannot be waived; but it is for the benefit of the individual he can. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) RAJANI KANTA GHOSE v. SHEIKH RAHAMAN GAZI, 27 C. W. N. 765 : 37 C. L. J. 447 —Validity—Purchaser's rights—Property sold clearly identified but inaccurately described in documents relating to sale—Effect.

EXECUTION SALE.

A mortgage deed described the land comprised in it as "Nanja 55"; and the land was so described in the decree passed in a suit upon the mortgage, the notice of sale in execution of that decree and in the certificate of sale. The land was in fact punja and not nanja; but there was no other No. 55 in that village. Held that the word "Nanja" in the mortgage deed, in the decree and in the documents relating to the execution sale was merely an inaccurate description of the property described as No. 55 and thus identified, and that the execution sale was valid and conveyed a good title to the purchaser, (Schwabe, C. J. and Wallace, J.) VENKATARAMA AIYAR v. ELUMALAI NAICKER, 44 M. L. J. 357 : 17 L. W. 402 : (1923) M. W. N. 217 : 32 M. L. T. (H. C.) 246 : 72 I. C. 464 : 1923 Mad. 442 (2).

For purposes of limitation, the suit must be treated as one for conversion in which case Art. 48 would apply or for money had and received for plff's. use in which case Art. 62 would apply, but not Arts. 120 or 133. EX-PROPRIETARY RIGHTS—Loss of—Mortgage of proprietary rights.

Where the proprietary rights are mortgaged the ex-proprietary rights are lost if not claimed within one year of the mortgage, and Act IV of 1921 does not keep them alive. (Fremantle, S. M.) ABDUL MAJID KHAN v. SUNDAR LAL, L. R. 4 A. 316 (Rev.) : 9 O. & A. L. R. 881.

FAMILY ARRANGEMENT—Binding nature of—Principles applicable to

A fair compromise of family disputes will be upheld by a Court though resting on grounds which as between strangers may not be satisfactory. The rights compromised should be of such a nature that they could at least have formed the subject matter of a claim, though a doubtful one when entered into by a limited owner, in order to bind reversioners, it must be a fair and honest one representing the estate and for its protection.

FAMILY SETTLEMENT.

The principle applies not only for preserving the peace but also for preserving the property. In the absence of proof of mistake, inequality of position, undue influence, fraud etc. a family arrangement made in settlement of a disputed or doubtful claim is valid and binding and cannot be set aside merely on the basis that one party got more or less than that he would have legally got.

When minors are sought to be bound, it must be shown it was for their benefit. (Bucknill and Ross, JJ.) RAM BAHADUR SEN v. GANESH BHAGAT. 2 Pat. 554 : 73 I. C. 542 : 1924 P. 49.

FAMILY SETTLEMENT—Award—Whether enforceable as a family settlement.

A family settlement implies a mutual settlement by certain contending parties belonging to the same family of some disputed claims and rights and an award of arbitrators is not a settlement of that character. It is the decision of a tribunal constituted by the contending parties for the settlement of their disputes and in so far as it is a valid and lawful award, it is binding on the parties to the arbitration proceedings and their successors. Whether such an award is binding on persons whose interests are analogous to those of the parties to the arbitration proceedings is a matter which is not capable of an inflexible answer. In each case it has to be determined whether the person who agreed to the reference to arbitration was seeking to assert a right common to himself and others and had acted fairly in representing those whose interest he had undertaken to protect. (Kan Zaiya Lal and Dalal, A. J. C.) CHAUDHRAIN ZARIF UN-NISSA v. CHAUDHRI SHAFIQUZ ZAMAN. 26 O. C. 133 : 75 I. C. 636 : 1923 Oudh 185.

Setting aside.

A bona fide settlement of a family dispute which has been fairly arrived at and acted upon cannot be set aside by a minor party unless vitiating circumstances are alleged and proved. (Daniels, J.) RADHA KRISHAN SHUKUL v. NOKH LAL SHUKUL. 21 A. L. J. 488 : L. R. 4 A. 481 : 74 I. C. 964 : 1923 A. 566.

FATAL ACCIDENTS ACT (ACT XIII OF 1855), S. 1—Damages—Quantum—Basis of assessment.

In a claim for damages under the Fatal Accidents Act the reasonable expectation of pecuniary advantage by the relatives remaining alive may be taken into account by a Jury and damages assessed as the probable pecuniary loss thereby occasioned.

The fact that the deceased in some way provoked the quarrel as a result of which he died, is immaterial so far as regards the claim for damages under S. 1 of the Act. (Abdul Raouf and Abdul Quadir, JJ.) PIARA RAM v. BEHARI RAM. 69 I. C. 354.

FRAUD—Collusion—Nature of—Proof necessary.

Charges of fraud and collusion must, be proved by those who make them by established facts or inferences legitimately drawn from those facts taken together as a whole. Suspicious and surmises and conjecture are not permissible substitutes for those facts or those inferences, but that by no means requires that every puzzling artifice or contrivance resorted to by one accused of fraud must necessarily be completely be unravelled and cleared up and made plain before a verdict can be properly found against him. FRONTIER CRIMES REGULATION (III OF 1901) Ss. 8 and 60—Pendency of suit—Proceedings under S. 8.

A decree passed under section 8 of Regn. III of 1901 whether passed wrongly, or rightly is an actually subsisting decree and, under section 60 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation, it cannot be called in question or set aside by any Civil Court.

The decree certainly cannot be set aside by a Civil Court. Even if the finding of the Civil Court conflicts with that decree, the decree could not be finally extinguished unless and until the Chief Commissioner had set it aside in the exercise of the powers of the revision. This however, is not the same thing as holding that the civil court cannot proceed at all with a suit which is before it, simply because some illegal proceedings under S. 10 has been taken after the suit. What the Civil Court is entitled to do is not to call in question the proceedings or the validity of the decree, but simply to ignore them. It is perfectly clear, that S. 8 cannot, in any circumstances legally come into operation at all when a civil suit is already pending. The civil court has entertained the suit with jurisdiction, so far as this question is concerned, to entertain it, and no illegal proceedings by any outside authority in contravention of the provisions of law could possibly effect its jurisdiction to continue the hearing of the case.

An illegal proceeding under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, cannot, in any circumstances, oust the jurisdiction of a civil court to continue the trial of a civil suit which has been legally instituted before it prior to any proceedings under section 8 Frontier Crimes Regulation, (*Pipon, J. ## GOVT. OF INDIA ACT, S. 107.

—S. 107—Powers of superintendence—High court—Grounds for interference.

Though the powers conferred on the High court under S. 107 of the Govt. of India Act are extensive enough to authorise the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, to send for the record of such a proceeding in a Subordinate Court, namely the record of an enquiry conducted by a District Judge with a view to drawing up a list of persons proved to be touts, and to examine such record and thereafter issue such orders or instructions to the District Judge as might appear to be proper, the High Court would not interfere in the exercise of its powers of superintendence, where the sole ground upon which interference was asked for was that the decision of the District Judge was against the weight of the evidence. ## —S. 107—Proceedings under S. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code—Abuse of the process of Court—Revision—Interference.

Where proceedings are taken under S. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which amount to an abuse of the process of Court and the object of which is to harass or annoy a successful party in prior possession proceedings, the High Court will interfere under S. 107 of the Govt. of India Act. ## —S. 107—Rat cable distribution—Order defective—Interference.

Where an order under S. 73 C.P.C. is hopelessly inadequate and does not refer to the claims of parties, arguments advanced and reasons for the conclusions arrived at, the High Court can interfere under S. 107 G. I. Act. (Mullick and Bucknill, JJ.) BABU BISHUN MOHON SAHAY v. NARAYAN PRASAD ASTHANA.

—S. 107—Rent Controller—If a court—Superintendence—Powers of—Calcutta Rent Act III of 1920.

The Court of the Rent Controller appointed under the Calcutta Rent Act is a court of civil jurisdiction subject to the powers of superintendence conferred by the High Court under S. 107 of the Govt. of India Act and the High Court can interfere in revision with its decision. ## —S. 107—Stay of criminal proceeding—Pending civil suit—Power of High Court.

The High Court is under S. 107 of the Government of India Act invested with powers of superintendence over all subordinate courts in the Presidency and this power includes a power to stay criminal proceedings in a Magistrate's Court till the decision of a Civil suit between the parties. Where however the decision of the Civil suit would not conclusively determine the question of possession of the property which was the only material point for the decision of the Criminal Court, the High Court refused to stay ## —Construction—Authority to give—Burden of proof—Putra poutradi Krame Meaning of.

Rent free grants was made 70 years back to excavate tanks and to hold them putra poutradi Krame. In a suit to recover possession by the heirs of the grantor, the burden of proof is initially on the grantees' heirs to show the grantor authority to make but where the grant has been in operation for a long term, and the grantor or his heirs have never taken any steps in ejectment, the burden is shifted on the plaintiff to prove how they came to acquiesce in it. The court can in such a case draw the inference that the grantor had authority to do it. The use of the words "putra poutradi Krame" made it perpetual and hence transferable. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) TARAKESWAR PAL v. SRISH CHANDRA GHOSH MANDAL.

—Construction—Jaghir—Life estate.

In the absence of words clearly indicating a contrary intention a jaghir is presumed to be the grant of an estate only for life. 3 Bom. 186, 46 C. 683, 1921 Pat. 369 referred to. (Miller, C. J. and Mullick, J.) GURU MAHADEO ASRAM PRASAD SINGH v. JAGATRAJ KUER.

—Construction—Mode of user.

Where the terms of the original grant are ambiguous or where they cannot be proved by direct evidence a reference to the mode of user of the lands is legitimate. 16 C. L. J. 322, 40 C. 160 Ref. (Mookerjee and Cumming, JJ.) RANI HEMANTA CUMARI DEBI v. THE MIDNAPORE ZEMIDARI CO.

—Construction.—Resumable grant—Charity—Service tenure.

Where a person alleged that a tenure is resumable the burden of proving the allegation is on him and not on the grantee. 28 B. 305 referred to. Under the terms of a grant it was specified that the grantee was to enjoy the lands conducting vazhipadu to the diety. Held that the grant was not a service grant and that the offering of vazhipadu simply meant the "offering of rice of —Inam—Charity inam—Share of the proceeds of the inam appropriated to the private use of the inamdar—Effect of.

The fact that a third share of the proceeds of an inam has been appropriated by the inamdars for their private uses does not make it the less a charity inam for the grant was only one and could not be split up into parts—a personal grant of one-third and a charity grant of two thirds of the inam. 40 M. 116 Kel. on. —Inam—Construction—Proceedings of Inam Commissioner.

Where there is an inam grant, the Court must construe its terms for itself and the decision of the Inam Commissioner is not conclusive. It is not safe to interpret one document by reference to recitals in another document. It is only where the Court has given a definite meaning to certain expressions that that meaning should be applied to such expressions in other cases. In interpreting deeds and contracts great weight should be attached to the recitals in the documents themselves in gathering the intentions of the parties thereto. 1923 Mad. 545

—Inam—Dharmadaya—What is

Where a grant is made as Inam Dharmadaya, the significance is that it was made on grounds of religion and not on political grounds—The fact that it is referred to as jagir or saranjam i.e. political, does not derogate from the effect of the grant itself. The question whether the tenure is political is one which is for the determination of the Govt. (Viscount Haldane) MAHARAJA OF KOLHAPUR v. BALA MAHARAJ.

—Estates in Berar—Rules governing. See (1922) DIG. COL. 682. KRISHNA RAO v. NILKANTH. 69 I. C. 800.

—Inference from user—Absence of plea in plaint.

Where the plaint contained a plea of immemorial user the court can legitimately draw an inference of grant from such user. (Khose, J.) AMRITANATH BISWAS v. JOGENDRA CHANDRA BHATTACHARJEE. 69 I. C. 183 (2).

—Maintenance grant—Rights of grantee—Rent and profits of estate—Accretion.

Where a Hindu wife is given possession of certain villages under a lease by her husband subject to the payment of rent to him, she has no estate in the villages but only a maintenance grant; and the substance of the grant is that it is the rents, issues and profits that are alienated and not the immovable properties out of which such rents, issues and profits arise which remain the property of the grantor and annexed to his estate. The undisposed of accumulations of the wife cannot follow the 'estate' because the title to the estate was never in the wife but always in her husband the grantor. In order that there may be an accretion there must be an estate to which the accumulations may accrete (Das and Adami, J.) RAMESHWAR NARAIN SINGH v. RIKNATH KOERI. 1923 P. 165.

—Nature of—Rent free—Long possession.

Mere possession of land for a long series of years without payment of rent does not necessarily mean a rent free grant. (Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ.) GIRIJA NATH ROY CHOWDHURY v. CHANDI CHARAN LAHA. 38 C. L. J. 307.

—prior to 1802—Presumption.

Where lands were granted in inam prior to 1802, that fact is strong evidence to raise the presumption that they were excluded from the Permanent Settlement. (Ayling and Odgers, JJ.) TOTA VARAHALIAH v. SREE VENKATA SURYA-NARAYANA. 18 L. R. 324 : (1923) M. W. N. 732 : 75 I. C. 465.

—'Saranjam' grant—Presumption.

A grant of Saranjam may be either of the soil and the whole revenue derived from it, or a grant of the Royal share of the revenue only. There is no presumption that a grant of Saranjam is a grant of Royal revenue only. It must be determined in each case upon the facts what was the quality of the original grant although it may be that it is ordinarily a grant of the Royal revenue only.

It was plain that the original grant was made in respect of political services; but there was nothing in any of the documents produced which suggested that all that the grant was intended to give to the grantees was a lease from payment of the royal share of the Revenue. On the contrary in one of the early documents founded on the grant, mention was made expressly of the Kasba Hebli (subject of the grant) with its hamlets and Watahoi, with the Mahal Jukath and Mokassa "with the whole of the dues and cesses and hidden treasures, exclusive however of the dues of

GRANT.

Hackdars and Inamdars" and the language of the other documents was in similar terms. It was significant also that in the deed of partition executed by the grand-father of the plaintiff in 1879 the property partitioned was described as the Jahagir villages of Kasbe Hebli and Majre Watanhal and the Mouza of Talvai and Kurdapur" obtained from the British Government." Through out the documents there was no suggestion that what was conveyed was merely the Royal share of the land revenue of the lands was conveyed to the grantees and the amount of the nazarana which had been levied from time to time appeared to have been based on the yearly revenue of the estate, "there being no suggestion that the revenue derived by the holder as occupant" was distinct from the Saranjamdar was not liable to Nazarana

Held: All these considerations are sufficient to justify the inference that the original grant was a grant of the soil (Lord Salvesen.) THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. LAXMI BAI. 47 Bom. 327: 44 M. L. J. 471:

They cannot therefore be personally responsible on the note, nor could the sister as the next friend or as sister of the minors make a contract with the plaintiff which would bind the estate of the minors. Where a person's application to be appointed as guardian of a minor is rejected and there is no appeal from that order a subsequent application for the same purpose by him will not be entertained. Proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act are not intended to be summary. Where a District Judge in appointing a particular person as guardian ignored the procedure laid down in Ss. 11 and 13 and failed to consider whether the guardian was by character and capacity a fit person and whether the appointment was for the welfare of the minor, his procedure is materially irregular. (Kotwal, A. J. C.) GOPALRAO v. SHRAWAN.

—S. 17—Appointment of guardian—Consideration to be taken into account—Management of business—Purdanashin lady—Security—Remuneration.

The mere fact that an applicant is a purdanasin lady is no ground for rejecting her claim to be appointed guardian of the property of a minor. Where however the minor's estate owns a big business which could not be managed by a woman of the status of the applicant without an assistant, that may be a ground for appointing another person as guardian. Where an appellate court considers the advisability of the appointment of a particular person as guardian it may take into consideration also the questions of the remuneration that will have to be paid to him as well as the security which he is likely to furnish. ## —Ss. 17 and 19—Guardianship of minor—Father—Suit for custody of child.

Where a father has never had custody of his infant child there is no provision under Guardians and Wards Act by which the father can obtain the custody of the child. S. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act precludes from appointing any one other than the father of the minor as guardian of the minor unless the minor's father is found to be unfit to be guardian of the minor's person. The words of S. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act so far from being subject to the provisions of S. 17, expressly override them. 38 M. 807 followed. (*Batten, J. C. and Hallifax, A. J. When the claims of distant relations to the guardianship of the person of a minor have to be compared there is no question of preference other than what arises from a consideration of the minor's welfare. The presumptive heir to the property of a minor is not a suitable person to be appointed guardian of his person as such a person stands to gain by the minor's death. 10 M. L. J. 357 ; 2 C. L. —S. 19—Appointment of guardian—Father—European British subject.

Where the parties to a case are not European British subjects. S. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act lays down in clear and unmistakable terms that the Court is not authorised to appoint or declare a guardian of the person of a minor whose father is living, unless that father is unfit to be guardian. There is no reason to suppose that an application by the father himself was intended to be excepted from the provisions of the section. The view of the legislature presumably is that the father is the natural guardian and does not require appointment. (Brown, A. J. C.) RAMJAN KHAN v. MARIAN BIBI. 72 I. C. 200 : 1923 Rang. 120.

—S. 31—Permission—When to be granted—Inquiry—Necessity for.

S. 31 of the Guardians and Wards Act requires that permission to a guardian to do any of the acts mentioned in S. 29 shall be granted only in case of necessity or advantage to the ward. The order granting the permission should also recite the necessity or advantage. But the absence of any enquiry does not make the order a nullity. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) PROHLAD CHANDRA CHOWDHURY v. RAMSARAN CHOWDHURY. 38 C. L. J. 213.

—Ss. 34, 47 and 48—Appeal—Order directing filing of accounts and payment of money.

Where the District Court passes an order under S. 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act directing the guardian to pay into the Court a certain sum of money as being the balance due to him on an examination of accounts, the order is not open to appeal but may be questioned in revision. (Broadway, J.) RAM JAS V. CHANI. 1923 Lah. 89 (1).

—Ss. 34 and 39—Appointment of guardian—Order when effective—Omission to furnish security—Removal.

An order appointing a person as guardian though appealable as soon as it is made does not become effective or entitle the guardian to act as such, until he has furnished security. Failure to furnish security is a ground for removal of the guardian. (Harrison, J.) MT. KHUSAL DEVI v. SUKH DIAL. 71 I. C. 572.

—Ss. 34, 35, 45—Attachment of property guardian of improper.

The Court has no power to attach the property of the guardian or his surety for the purpose of realising the balance.

Section 35 of the Act provides the remedy for the realisation of the amount due from the guardian. Ample powers are also given under section 45 of the Act to the District Judge. (Abdul Raoof, J.) RADHAKISHAN v. KHUSHI RAM. 1923 Lah. 506 (1).

GUJARAT TALUQDAR'S ACT (VI of 1888) S. 2

(1) (a)—Mulgameti—Meaning of—Kathis of Salangpur—Status of—Talukdars

The Talukdari estates in Gujarat are the remnants of old Rajput kingdoms, those disintegrated being either disrupted by internecine feuds or crushed by foreign invaders. The Subordinate States thus formed were known by names generally indicative of their origin. The smallest of these subordinate rulers was the Gameti or ruler of a single village. Under the British rule the old rulership slowly degraded into a mere landlord estate. A Talukdari is therefore an estate which connoted rulership in pre-British times but which is now a landlord estate to which some seigniorial or subordinate rights may or may not still be attached. When the estate connoted rulership of a single village the holder is a Mulgameti (i.e.) a gameti who has lost all or most of his lordships. These estates being very small the holder was not included in the definition of Taluqdar until the Amending Act (II of 1905) recognised as a Taluqdar a Mulgameti who holds lands directly from Government.

Per Marten, J. : A mulgameti is one who is descended from a former ruler and owner of the village and still retains by regrant or otherwise some portion of the lands or interests therein of such former ruler and owner, but not necessarily any of his governing rights.

The kathis of the village of Salangpur in the Dhanduka Taluka of the District of Ahmedabad are Mulgametis but they do not hold land directly from the Government and are not therefore Talukdars within the meaning of S. 2 (1) (a) of the Gujarat Taluqdar's Act, 1888 as amended by S. 2 (1) of Act II of 1905. HIGH COURT—Chief Justice—Powers of—If can constitute Bench for trying only an issue in a case.

It is open to the Chief Justice of a High Court to appoint a special Bench to try a case, but it is not open to him in any way to fetter the discretion of the Court as to how it should be tried. He cannot appoint a Bench to merely try one issue in a case. (Greaves and Buckland, JJ.) GIRIDHARILAL HANUMANBUX v. EAGLE STAR AND DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO., LTD.

HIGHWAY—Dedication—Inference from user—English law—Applicability of.

It is competent to a Court to draw an inference of dedication of a highway to the public from long user. Though the general principles of English Common law as regards highways are applicable to India, the whole of the English Common law should not be bodily imported. (Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.) RAI BAJIRANG BAHADUR SINGH v. BABU BADRA NATH. 70 I. C. 74 : 1923 Oudh 26.

—Village pathway—Special damage not necessary to enforce right to pathway.

The plaintiffs asked for declaration of a village pathway used by all the people of the village for certain specified purposes. The defendants contended that the alleged pathway was not a public highway but was a permissive foot track.

Held : that the suit was for the enforcement of a village pathway and no question of special damage arose in the case. 15 Cal 460 Foll.

It is only in the case of a public highway that the question of special damage arises; where the case is one of a village pathway, there is no question of special damage. 23 C. W. N. 91 Ref. (Mookerjee and Rankin JJ.) HARISH CHANDRA SAHA v. HARISHCHANDRA CHACKERBUTTY. 1923 Cal 622.

HINDU LAW—Adoption—Age of adoptee—Restrictions on—Kshatriya boy of 19.

Among Kshatriyas a boy of the age of 19 whose upanayanam ceremony had not been performed at the time of his adoption could be validly adopted and notwithstanding the prohibition of the adoption of a boy over 5 years of age in the Dattaka Mimamsa. —Adoption—Authority—Construction.

Where the will recited "I have no male issue, etc., but have two married wives only. They two should adopt a boy for the perpetuity of my name after me. And at present there is one of my kinsmen, X-resident of Burhampur. My wives should adopt him as son after me. If he is not available, my two wives should, with the consultation of each other, adopt any other boy of my own family. If no boy in the family is available my wives should adopt none. If there is a difference of opinion between the two wives as to the boy to be adopted that boy should be adopted whom my younger wife Sonu will choose and "perpetuate my name and manage the property"

HINDU LAW—ADOPTION.

Held, looking to the intention of the testator which was that a certain boy was to be adopted, though both widows are mentioned, the will does not restrain the authority of either. The main object was that a particular boy was to be adopted, the mentioned of both widows was subservient to the adoption itself. The document gave the widows as far as this boy is concerned no option. It did not allow them any power of selection. Therefore the fulfilment of the wish of the testator by the remaining widow who was the only person who could fulfil it was not against but in accordance with what the testator contemplated. (Kotral and Prideaux, A. J. C.) AMBADAS v. KASHIBAI. 71 I. C. 979 (2) : 1923 Nag. 27.

—Adoption—Authority—Consent—Will—Construction.

There is no authority for holding that a father-in-law can authorise his daughter-in-law to adopt under the Hindu Law; the only way in which a widow can adopt is either by the authority of her husband or by the consent of her nearest sapindas given bona fide and honestly. No sapinda is entitled to give by way of a will to take effect after his death, a consent to an adoption by a widow. The consent has to be given with reference to the circumstances attendant upon the proposed adoption and usually at the request of the widow. Consent to a future adoption cannot validate the adoption. 36 Mad. 145 Ref. (Krishnan and Ramesam, JJ.) TADEPALLI LAKSHMI NARASIMHAM v. RUKMANIAMMA. 1923 Mad. 225.

—Adoption—Authority to adopt—Original owner dying leaving behind him his widow and a son—Death of son after attaining 25 years of age—Power of adoption of the widow of the original owner, not at an end.

Where a Hindu died leaving his widow and his son and the latter died after having attained his age of majority, but without leaving him surviving his widow, the power of adoption of the widow of the original owner is not exhausted and she can adopt a son to her deceased husband. Observations in 41 M. 855 (P. C.) considered as obiter and not binding.

—Adoption—Ceremonies—Putreshti Jag—Necessity for.

Putreshti Jag ceremony is not essential to the validity of an adoption even amongst the regenerate classes. An adoption is valid if upanayanam is not performed in the natural family although the other initiatory rights including tonsure have already taken place in the natural family of the adopted son. 20 C. ## HINDU LAW—ADOPTION.

—Adoption—Custom—Entry in Wajib-ul-az.

An entry in the wajib-ul-az that the widows could adopt in a certain locality is the statement of a custom to the effect she could do so even in the absence of authority from her husband. (Sir John Edge.) BISHWANATH SINGH v. JUGAL KISHORE. 45 M. L. J. 215 : 18 L. W. 88 :

—Adoption—Effect—Adopted son—Rights of—Alienations by widow—Effect on.

As soon as a person is adopted, all the alienations of the estate made by the widow would become ineffective against him unless it could be shown that they were made for necessity (Macleod C J and Crump, J.) GANPATI SHANKARAPPARI v. KSHNAPPA. 73 I. C. 204.

—Adoption—Evidence.

Mere execution of a deed does not effect an adoption, and if has yet to be found in a court of law that in a community where an orphan adoption is recognised as valid such an adoption could be made up by a deed alone. (Macleod, C. J. and Crump, J.) SHIDAPPA v. SANTAWAKOM. (1923) Bom. 302.

—Adoption—Form of—Dattaka form—Jains—Rights of adopted son.

Their is nothing in Munak Chand v. Munna Lal 95 P. R. 1909 to show that Jains cannot adopt in Duttaka form or that an adopted son among Jains can, in no case, become a member of the family of his adoption. (Broadway and Abdul Qadir, JJ.) GOPI MAL v. PANNA LAL. 72 I. C. 424.

—Adoption—Presumption as to factum.

Where an adoption was never challenged for many years it would be a little difficult for the adoptee to establish exactly what occurred. Held therefore that the factum of adoption must be taken as proved and that it is a fair presumption to make that such adoption was made with the necessary assent of the collaterals. (Broadway, J.) KANHAYA v. NAURANG. 1923 Lah. 374.

—Adoption—Proof.

Where in none of the correspondence which passed between the uncle and the nephew did the former refer to the nephew as his son; nor did he refer to his wife as his mother but on the contrary referred to her as his aunt, and as the nephew was the only other member of the family there was no necessity to adopt him. Held the alleged adoption is not proved. (Scott Smith and Mohi Sagar, JJ.) MT. UTTAM DAI v. DINA NATH. 1923 Lah. 359.

—Adoption—Proof of—Ceremonies—Performance of—Presumption.

Where an adoption has taken place more than 48 years ago and the adoption has not been challenged during that time by any member of the family interested in so doing and it was urged that the adoption was invalid for non-performance of dattahomam, Held that it was permissible to presume from the fact that the adoption had not been challenged for such a long period that if the ceremony was necessary, it must have been performed, 29 A. 184; 29 A. 519 Rel. (Kanhaya Lal and Sulaiman, JJ.) CHHOTE LAL v. CHANDRA BHAN. 45 All. 59 : 1923 A. 176.

—Adoption—Onus — Proof—Treatment in family for long time.

The onus of proving an adoption is on the party setting it up. But very slight evidence may be sufficient for this purpose, where the alleged adopted son has been treated as such for a long series of years. (Mookerjee and Cuming, JJ.) KAILASH CHANDRA NAG v. BEJOY CHANDRA NAG. 72 I. C. 680 : 1923 Cal. 18.

—Adoption—Rights of adopted son—Bequest as to charity—Dispute as to.

Where a Hindu testator being the sole owner of certain properties made a will giving authority to his wife to adopt a son and also making certain dispositions of his property to charity, the son adopted under the authority cannot dispute the bequest under the charity. 21 M. 11, 43 B. 542; 12 L. C. 991 : 1923 Mad. 376.

—Adoption—Rights of adopted son—Postponement of vesting of estate—Validity of.

Where a person is adopted a condition postponing the vesting of the estate in the adopted son beyond two lives in existence is invalid. (Hallifax, A. J. C.) KOLHI v. MT. CHOTTIBAI. 1923 Nag. 121 (1)

—Adoption—Rights of adopted son—Property obtained on partition in natural family.

Where a person governed by the Mitakshara Law, has obtained at a family partition with his father his share of the ancestral property and he is subsequently adopted in another family he is not thereby divested of the property which vested in him on partition, 29 M. 437 foll. 40 B. 429 dist. —Adoption—Rights of adopted son—Succession See (1922) Dig. Col. 619 KUAR NAGESHAR SAHAI v. KUAR MATA PRASAD. 69 I. C. 730

—Adoption—Rights of adopted son—Succession to maternal grand father's property in natural family.

Where a person is adopted into another family he cannot succeed to the property of his maternal grand father in his natural family. 43 I. A. 86, 68; 10 I. A. 138 Rel. (Macleod, C. J. and Crump, J.) BHASUHEB SHIDGAUDA v. RAMGAUDA ANNAGAUDA. 25 Bom. L. R. 813.

HINDU LAW—ADOPTION.

—Adoption — Validity of—Execution of document—Effect of.

Where an adoption is illegal the mere execution of a deed of adoption cannot validate it. (Fremantle, S. M. and Burn, J. M.) BRIJ RAJ SINGH v. LALTA PRASAD I. R. 4 A 238 (Rev.).

—Adoption — Validity of—Giving and taking—Motives of adopter—Relevancy of.

A mother can give her son in adoption even without her husband's express consent where such consent cannot be obtained as where he is dead or has joined a religious order. The fact that the person adopting had mixed motives for the adoption could not be sufficient in law to render the adoption invalid. Where the adopter has a right to adopt, the fact that there were motives of a worldly nature which induced him to adopt would not vitiate the adoption especially where the rights of other persons are not infringed. (Muller C. J. and Foster, J.) RAJA MAKUND DEB v. SRI JAGANNATH JENAMONI. 2 Pat. 469 : 4 Pat. L. T. 427 : 1923 Pat. 97 : 1 Pat. L. R. 201 : 72 I. C. 230 : 1923 P. 423.

—Adoption—Who can give—Gift by Hindu widow—Only son.

A Hindu widow can make a valid gift of her only son in adoption. 25 B 539 Foll. (Macleod C. J. and Crump, J.) GANPATI SHANKARAPPA v. KRISHNAPPA. 73 I. C. 204.

—Adoption — Who may be adopted—Daughter's son—Agarwala Vaishas.

Among the Agarwala Vaishas there is a custom which permits the adoption of a daughter's son (Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ.) BALLO v. RAM KISHUN. 21 A. L. J. 478 : 1924 A. 49.

—Adoption—Who may be adopted—Married boy.

A married boy cannot be validly adopted among any class of Hindus 10 B. 80; 13 M. 129; 32 A. 247; 35 A. 263 Rel. (Chevis, J.) HIRA v. HARDAT SINGH. 1923 Lah. 26.

—Adoption—Who may be adopted—Orphan—Adoptive father if estopped from questioning adoption.

An adoption of an orphan is invalid and the adoptive father himself may dispute its validity. There can be no estoppel where both sides know the full facts. A representation as to a matter of law, viz the validity of an adoption cannot give rise to an estoppel. 11 B. L. R. 291, 395; 21 M. L. J. 500, 503 Rel. (Ayling and Odgers, JJ.) RAJAMBAL AMMAL v. SHANMUGA MUDALIAR. 70 I. C. 653 : 1923 Mad. 11.

—Adoption—Who may be adopted—Sister's son—Leva Patidars of Gujarat.

HINDU LAW—ADOPTION.

—Adoption—Who may be adopted Sister's son—Nullity—Void adoption confers no title.

Among the Deshasha Brahmans, the adoption of the sister's son is a nullity.

An adoption is either effectual for all purposes or a nullity. A void adoption confers no right and creates no disability. Hence where a person is once adopted which adoption is null and void, there is no bar to his being validly adopted a second time into another family. (Macleod, C. J. and Crump, J.) BHAI ABASI DESHPANDE v. HARI RAMCHANDRA PATKI. 25 Bom. L. R. 411 : 72 I. C. 631 : 1923 Bom. 301.

—Adoption—Widow.

If it is established that events had occurred which could constitute an adoption, apart from any question of the competency of the person alleged to be adopted the widow cannot dispute such an adoption made by her husband 24 Bom. L. R. 496 Foll. (Macleod, C. J. and Crump, J.) SHIDAPPA v. SANTAWAKOM. 1923 Bom. 302.

—Adoption—Widow—Limits of her power—Extinction of joint family—Vesting of property in co-parcener's widow

The widow of a deceased coparcener of a joint Hindu family cannot in the absence of specific authority make an adoption subsequent to the death of the coparcener who survived her husband especially when the estate has vested in the widows of the surviving coparcener. 41 B. 453 ; 26 B. 526, 48 I. A. 543, 14 B. 463 Ref. (Shah, A. C. J. and Crump, J.) SHIVBASAPPA v. NILAYA. 47 Bom. 110 : 1923 Bom. 17.

—Adoption—Widow—Limits of her power—Widow inheriting as gotraja sapindas. See (1922) DIG. COL. 621 YEKNATH NARAYAN KULKARNI v. LAXMIBAI KESHO GOPAL. 47 Bom. 37.

—Adoption—Widow—Power to adopt after death of son aged 18—Consent of sapindas—Corrupt consent—Person claiming through such sapinda—Estoppel.

Where a Hindu widow succeeds as heir to her unmarried son who died at the age of 18, she is competent to adopt a son to her husband with the consent of his sapindas. The mere promise of payment for the consent of a sapinda does not vitiate the consent. There must be something more than a promise of payment to raise the plea of the invalidity of the consent on the ground that it was corruptly given.

Obiter : Neither a sapinda who has given his consent for a bribe or through corruption nor any one claiming through such a sapinda, can set up the invalidity of the adoption on the ground that there was no proper consent. The maxim "Nemo allegans furitudinem suam est audiendus" is one applicable to India. 32 M. L. J. 484 : 31 Bom. 405 Ref. (Schwabe, C. J. and Coutts Trotter, J.) PARTHASARATHY REDDY v. The existence of the antecedent debts due to third parties constituted valid necessity. (Scott Smith and Fforde, J.J.) MT. BASANTI v. CHANDIA SINGH. 1923 Lah. 502 (2).

—Applicability of—Aboriginal Bhuiyas—"Chowrasi" gadi—Succession—Adoption—Special custom—Property situate in Santhal Parganas—Bhagalpur Court—Jurisdiction—Regulation III of 1872

The holders of "Chowrosi" gadis, of which Lachmipur Raj is one claim to be Surjabansi Rajputs and as such high caste Hindus. They are really descendants of aboriginal Bouiyas who had become Hindus long ago. On the question whether an adopted son succeeds to the gadi, either by law or custom, Held, that this claim of Chowrasi gaditshad adopted in general, not only Hindu religion and Hindu social usages, but also the Hindu Law regulating succession to landed property, though they still retain some relics of non-Hinduism.

Held, also on the evidence that the custom of excluding adopted sons from succession was not established.

Custom of impartibility and succession of nearest of kin discussed and distinguished.

Decision on the question whether, under Regulation III of 1872 relating to Santhal Parganas, the Bhagalpur court had jurisdiction to try the suit, part of subject matter being situate in Santhal Parganas considered unnecessary. A man by becoming a Brahmo does not necessarily cease to be a Hindu, that is to say, something further than mere becoming a Brahmo is necessary for a man to cut himself off from Hinduism. A declaration under Act III of 1879 is effective only for the purposes of the Act and does not involve a renunciation of the Hindu religion. —Applicability of—Migrating family—Mithila School—Dayabaga Law

A Hindu family, residing in a particular province of India, is presumed to be governed by the law of the place where it resides. 20 C. 409 referred to. This presumption is rebutted, where the family is shown to have migrated from one province to another. The presumption then arises that the family carried with it the laws and customs as to the succession and family relation prevailing in the Province from which it came. 12 Moo. I A. 81, 29 C. 433 referred to. Thereafter the burden shifts and lies upon those who assert it to prove that the family after migrating has adopted the law and usages of the place to which it has migrated, 31 A. 477, 24 M. 650 : 40 C. 407, 34 B. 553 referred to. Where however it is proved by numerous instances of succession in the family and evidence of the observance of right and ceremonies at marriages, births and deaths which indicates the relinquishment of Mithakhara law and the adoption of the Dayabaga Law in the family, the Court would act upon such evidence and infer that the family had adopted the Dayabaga law. The Hindu law is not merely a local law but is essentially a personal law, an integral factor of the status of every family which is governed by it. In its new domicile, the family may, by the reflex action of manners and customs prevalent in resident families, consciously or unconsciously, modify its own governing rules, there may thus be an acceptance of a new law not due to sudden change by choice or agreement, but by the gradual evolution of a family usage. When a new family usage has thus grown up in the course of generations possibly with the concurrence or acquiescence of families of the same group, that furnishes the governing law of the family. 29 C. 433 ; 43 I. A. 35 ; 47 I. A. 213 followed. (Mookerjee and Cumming, JJ.) Sarada Prasanna Roy v. Uma Kanta Hazari, 50 Cal. 370 : 37 C. L. J. 233 : 1923 Cal. 485.

—Applicability—Sub—School of Hindu Law—Jaiswar Sub-division of Kalar caste—Residence—Domicile

In view of the decision of the Privy Council in 48 C 30 (P. C.) a Hindu residing in a particular province of India is prima facie subject to the doctrines of Hindu Law recognised in that province. The Jaiswar Sub-division of the Kalar caste residing in the Central Provinces is governed by the Benares School of Hindu Law, having originally migrated from Oudh. In determining a person's domicile, the place where his property is situate is not conclusive. (Kotwal and Prideaux, A. J. C.) Govind v. Radhabai Kalar 1923 Nag. 7 (2).

—Converts—Law applicable—Presumption.

Where the person in question continued to maintain a close connection with his family and brotherhood at his original place of residence, the presumption is that his family is governed in matters of succession by the same rules as are in force in its original home. Where the family is descended from converts to Mahomedanism from Hinduism the presumption is that they follow Muhammadan Law. The presumption is a rebuttable one. (Broadway and Campbell, JJ.) NAJM-UD-DIN v. ABDUL HAMID, 72 I. C. 845 : 1923 Lah. 175.

—Converts—Succession—Instances of following Hindu law.

Instances showing that converts to Mahomedanism had departed from strict Muhammadan Law in other matters could not be regarded as raising any presumption that Muhammadan Law had been abrogated by custom in matters of succession. But instances are relevant, and of importance, not to prove the special custom set up but to show that in spite of the fact that the ———Custom—Applicability of—High caste Hindus.

It would be dangerous to seek to extend custom by such logical processes as analogy.

The initial presumption in the case of high caste Hindus is in favour of such Hindus following their personal law, and the onus of proving any special or general agricultural custom lies on the person asserting the existence of such custom. (Broadway, J.) PARS RAM v. HUKMAN SINGH, 73 I. C. 239.

———Custom in contravention of general Hindu Law—Quantum of proof.

A custom in derogation of the general Hindu Law is a matter which has to be proved with more thoroughness and with greater precision than a case which merely affects the parties on record and does not adversely affect parties who themselves are not present in Court, but are nevertheless interested by virtue of belonging to the same community. Prior mortgage debts forming consideration of the mortgage in suit are not antecedent debts so as to bind the sons, but an oral debt incurred by a co-parcener of the grandfather which, was binding on the grandfather binds the grandson as an antecedent debt (Piggott and Sulaiman, JJ.) *RAM RATAN MISIR v. ———Debts—Antecedent debts—Alienation by father—Pro-notes.

Where a mortgage was taken by the creditor in lieu of pro-notes executed by the father, Held the effect of the novation of the contract was practically to render the earlier bonds unenforceable. The consideration of the mortgage is therefore a good consideration binding on the sons who were charged under the Hindu Law with the responsibility of paying the debts due by their father who died during the pendency of the suit on the mortgage. (Kankhaiya Lal, J. C.) RAM SINGH v. MT. RAGHUBANSA, 26 O. C. 201 : 9 O. & A. L. R. 29 : 72 I. C. 877 : 1923 Oudh 3.

HINDU LAW—DEBT.

———Debt—Antecedent debt, contracted on the security of family property.

A Hindu father has power to alienate the joint family property for an antecedent debt where such antecedent debt has been contracted on the security of the family property. This rule is not affected in any way whatever by the observation of the Privy Council in 39 All. 437, (42 Mad. 711, F. B., Foll.) (Mohi Sagar, J.) DAHIT SINGH v. HARI CHAND, 1923 Lah. 669.

Where a Hindu father mortgages joint family property and borrows money, the debt cannot form an antecedent debt to support a subsequent mortgage to pay off the prior one. A pre-emption decree merely gives an option of acquiring certain property at a certain price. The decree-holder is under no obligation to acquire the property unless he chooses. Money required for such a purpose is not an antecedent debt.

Where moneys are advanced to a Hindu father and a promote is taken for the amounts advanced and subsequently the title deeds of properties are deposited as collateral security, in a suit by the creditor to enforce the debt held, that the promissory note debt remained a simple money debt, though subsequently secured by a deposit of title deeds and that being dissociated in fact from the mortgage, it constituted an antecedent debt for which the whole of the family properties were liable including the shares of the sons.

Per Spencer, J.—The personal covenant contained in an earlier mortgage and subsisting at the time of a later mortgage cannot constitute an "antecedent debt" in a legal sense. A personal covenant given by a father at the time of entering into a mortgage does not constitute an antecedent debt. 39 A. 437 : 44 A. 368 Rel. 60 I. C. 177 diss.

Per Devadoss, J.—A personal covenant in a prior mortgage can be an antecedent debt in respect of a subsequent mortgage of the same properties. 39 A. 437 : 44 A. 368. 21 C. W. N. 957 Ref. Admittedly the father was not criminally prosecuted and the suit was one for accounts which he had failed to deliver. Every breach of civil liability does not necessarily involve a moral turpitude, and it has not been shown that the debt in question was criminal in law for the discharge of which the son is not liable. ———Debt—Liability for—Father's debt.

By the Mitakshara law according to 44 Cal. 524. a judgment against the father of the family cannot be executed against the whole of the Mitakshara property if the debt in respect of which the judgment has been obtained was a debt incurred for illegal or immoral purposes. In every other event it is open to the execution creditor to sell the whole of the estate in satisfaction of the judgment obtained against "the father alone." These words could not be clearer and they are absolutely comprehensive. There are no limitations, qualifications or reservations to the effect that the debt must be incurred by the father representing the estate or purporting to be for the benefit of the estate or in some capacity other than his personal capacity. The words in 44 Cal. 524 are "In every other event it is open to execution creditor to sell the whole of the estate in satisfaction of the judgment obtained against the father alone" and there is nothing to qualify the words "the father alone." The decision in 44 Cal 524 is to the effect that, once a simple money decree is passed against the father and manager of a joint Hindu family, that simple money decree can be executed by the execution creditor against the whole of the estate, and will operate against the interests of the sons, unless the debt has been incurred for illegal or immoral purposes. The decision in 15 A. L. J. R. 437 lays down an absolutely different proposition that joint family property cannot be transferred by an act of volition on the part of the manager, except with the consent of other co-parceners or for legal necessity or in payment of antecedent debts, and that the doctrine of the pious duty of a Hindu son to satisfy his father's debts can have no operation to validate such a transfer, so long at any rate as the father is alive. But in order to apply the principle of the second decision, there must be a transfer by the volition of the manager. (Stuart, J.) SHAMBU DIYAL SINGH v. ISWAR SARAN. 75 I. C. 597 : 1923 A. 306.

that and the plea that there was no debt of their father existing at the time which was of such a nature as to justify an alienation of their shares for its satisfaction.

The term "illegal" or "immoral" is used as a translation of the word Avyavaharika. A summary of the eight kinds of debts coming within that category which are specified in the texts is given in the judgment of Mukerjee, J. 39 C 862 and it includes 'promises without consideration' (Hallifax, A J C) ARJUN v. Where a son impeaches an alienation by his father on the ground that the debts were incurred for immoral or illegal purposes, it is not necessary to prove that each item was expended for an immoral purpose. When a person is shown to be leading a licentious life and living beyond his means, the fact that there is no business proved on which the loans could have been expended raises a presumption that they must have been expended for licentious purposes. The onus or proof of immorality or illegality as affecting the debt incurred by the father is upon the sons, for after the death of their father their liability to pay the father's debt arises under the express text of the Mitakshara, on the ground of their pious obligation to save their fathers from the region of torment or hell. The sons, are, therefore, bound to pay the decree debt of their father under the Hindu Law. The liability of theirs is a personal one, and it is not barred up to six years from the date of the decree. The rule of Hindu Law is that where a son or a guardian takes ancestral property by survivorship, he is bound to pay out of such property all debts of his ancestor not incurred for immoral or illegal purposes including the judgment-debtor, (Jwala Prasad and Adami, JJ.) SHEIKH KAROO v. RAMESHWAR SAO. 1923 P. 143.

——— Debts—Liability for—Manager—Binding nature of—Onus

There is no presumption that a debt contracted by the manager of a Hindu family is contracted for the benefit of the family and the burden is on the creditor to prove necessity or family benefit 34 A 135 : 113 P. ——— Debts—Liability for—Necessity—Pressure of creditors—Proof of.

Where there has been a long series of transactions it is not always possible for the creditor to prove exactly the purpose for which any particular item was borrowed, and in such a case, it is sufficient for the creditor to show that the family was in chronic need of money and that the moneys were advanced on the representation of the manager that they were needed for such object. Moreover where the necessity arises from the pressure of a judgment-debt the person dealing with the manager of a joint Hindu family he is entitled to treat the judgment as prima facie proof of necessity, and he is under no obligation to go behind the judgment in order to enquire whether the debt covered by the decree was for legal and binding necessity of the family (Das and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.) DUKHIT OJHA v. JANKI SINGH. * 71 I. C. 459 : 4 Pat. J. T. 377 : 1923 P. 443.

——— Debts—Liability for—Necessity—Suit just within time—Evidence Act, S. 114—Conduct.

Where a suit to set aside alienation by a father on the ground, among others, of want of necessity, was within limitation, yet the conduct of the plaintiff in instituting the suit just at the close of the period prescribed, was held to be an important factor in determining the nature of the transaction and in finding out whether the alienation was or was not for necessity. The mere fact that the area of the property comprised in the mortgage forming the antecedent debt is not known does not justify an inference of want of necessity. (Moti Sagar, J.) DALJIT SINGH v. their father declared invalid and a suit by creditors seeking to fix the liability of the father on the son. It is only when a son seeks to avoid liability that he has to prove that the debt incurred by his father was an immoral one. Where the son filed a suit for declaration that a mortgage of ancestral property executed by his father was not for necessity and therefore not binding on him, held that the debt though not binding on the son as a mortgage still there was nothing to debar the mortgagee from enforcing the decree which he might obtain against the father for the amount of the loan against ancestral property including the property mortgaged. 53 P. 69 I. C. 552 ———Debts—Liability for—Son's liability—Mortgage in valid—Pious obligation to pay debt.

The liability of a son or grandson to pay the debt of his ancestor, which is not tainted with immorality or was not taken for illegal purposes, cannot however be enforced so long as the original debtor is alive and is capable of paying his debts.

During the life-time of the father apart from any question of family benefit or necessity the liability of a son to pay a debt due by his father is only contingent. The existence of that liability contingent or vested, has been utilised to build up the doctrine of antecedent debt to validate a mortgage or sale effected by the father to pay such debt: and in many cases, a creditor has been allowed to recover a debt due by the father from the entire family property, if not tainted with immorality, as if the liability were concurrent. 44 A. 126: 39 A. 237 Ref.

If the attempt to enforce a mortgage on the theory of pious obligation fails, the right to attach the family property during the life time of the father on the strength of that pious obligation can be still less recognised because if no pious obligation exists, it must be as insufficient to support the one as to support the other.

The doctrine of antecedent debt, resting as it does on the theory of pious obligation, is only intended for the protection of third parties who may have acquired rights in good faith in the family property, and if a vendee cannot invoke it for validating a sale effected in lieu of an invalid antecedent mortgage in his own favour, it is still less open to a creditor, whose mortgage has been declared to be invalid, to recover the debt, represented by that mortgage, while the mortgagor is alive, from the shares of his sons, who have been exempted from liability out of the very property, the mortgage of which has been declared to be unenforceable. The debt for the payment of which this liability is sought to be enforced is in no sense an antecedent debt. It is the very debt for the repayment of which the mortgage was made; and if the doctrine of pious obligation cannot be invoked to support the mortgage, it can hardly be invoked during the father's lifetime to enforce the liability of the family property other than the interest of the debtor for its its repayment. ———Debts—Liability for—Pious obligation—Death of son—Liability of mother succeeding to estate of her son.

There may be no pious obligation on a mother succeeding to the estate of her son for the payment of the debts due by her husband, but if the son has succeeded to the estate of his father, the person who succeeds such son is as much liable for the payment of the debt due by his father to the extent of the family property, unless it is tainted with immorality as a person who would directly succeed to the property on his death. ———Debts—Rights of creditor—Interest—Borrowing by manager—Enforceability against family.

When a contract of loan entered into by a head member or karta of a joint Hindu family is sought to be enforced against the other members on the ground of necessity, it must be shown not only that there was a necessity to borrow the principal sum but that the rate of interest agreed upon was also a necessity : in other words, that it was impossible for the karta or the head member to obtain a loan for family necessity except at the rate of interest agreed upon.

The creditor in such a case has not only to show that there was a family necessity so as to bind the members of that family on behalf of the parties to the contract with respect to the loan advanced but that the rate of interest was the market or commercial rate. He will not be entitled to enforce a higher rate of interest against the other members and to make the joint family properties liable for interest higher than the current market rate of interest. ## — Gift—Construction—Defeasance clause—Effect of—Transferee from donee—Position of.

A clause in a deed of gift that the donor was to become entitled to the properties gifted on the happening of a specified contingency is not invalid or opposed to Hindu Law, A Hindu who had been sentenced to transportation for life made a gift of his properties to a relation of his subject to a condition that the donee should hand over the properties to the donor in case he returned to his native village after the termination of his sentence. The donee alienated the properties gifted to strangers who had notice of the terms of the gift. The donor subsequently returned and sued for possession. A grant of an annuity is a right of property and as it is an incorporeal right, the test of validity in each case is, whether, under the circumstances, the donor has sufficiently indicated an intention that the transfer should take effect as a corrody and with that intention has done all that is practicable by way of transferring such indicia of property as may be in existence. ———Impartible estate — Succession—Survivorship—Family arrangement superseding senior line—Effect.

Where as the result of a family arrangement the junior line in an impartible estate was substituted for the senior line, but there was no other evidence of any further interference with the rights of the senior line, the estate still remains joint family property and on the extinction of the junior line, the senior line takes by survivorship.

Per Krishnan, J. To show that an impartible estate has become the separate property of the holder, it is not absolutely necessary to prove that there was some division in which that property was involved or that the right of others in it were abandoned. It was an estate of an exactly similar character that was conferred by Government on the Zemindar at the Thirty Years Settlement. In addition a custom had by that time grown up in the Amgaon family that the estate should be held as an estate of that nature and subject to those conditions. ## HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY.

—Joint family—Alienation—Burden of proof—Effect of pre-emption having taken place.

When an alienation by the father or a joint Hindu family is impeached by the son, it is for the creditor in the first instance to prove either legal necessity or at least such inquiry as would have satisfied a prudent man that necessity existed. The circumstance that a pre-emption has taken place with regard to the alienation and that the pre-emptor is the person against whom relief is claimed does not affect the question of onus. A purchaser from a member of a Joint Hindu family of property which that member has no right to sell, it being the joint property, can enforce the sale only by a partition of the entire family property; and if, in such partition, the property sold can, with due regard to the interests of the other sharers to the debts due by the family, and to an equitable allocation of the various items of family property to shares of the several co-parceners, be wholly allotted to the vendor's share, the purchaser will be entitled to the whole property which the vendor professed to convey to him. Whether the alienee in such cases can get the property does not depend upon whether a suit is first brought by him for a partition of the whole joint property or by the other co-parceners for a partition of a part.

HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY

The decision in 40 C. 966 : 25 M. L. J. 512 (P. C.) is authority for the position that even in a suit by the other co-parcener for a share of the alienated property, it would be open to the Court on the application of the alienee to decree a general partition in which the principle of equity mentioned above should be applied.

The principle of equity applies equally to cases in which the alienor purports to sell the property on behalf of himself and of the other co-parceners and to those in which he purports to sell the property as his own. It applies whether or not the sale was a proper alienation in the interests of the joint family.

The purchaser is not to be deprived of this equity merely because, at the time of the sale, he took from the vendor a security bond (in the form of a charge on other joint family property) by which the vendor gave him an indemnity against the loss that might arise by any claim of the vendor's minor son. Under the Hindu Law as administered in the Punjab the interests of a co-parcener cannot be sold for consideration. But a mortgagee has an equity against the interest of the mortgagor. —Joint family—Alienation by father—son's rights—Auction sale.

HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY.

It is only when joint family property has passed out on account of an antecedent debt or sold by public auction that the sons cannot challenge the alienation unless they show the debt was tainted with immorality. Where the sale is not at a public auction, the alienee has to justify the alienation by showing antecedent debt or legal necessity. (Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ) SAHEB SINGH v. GIRDHARI LAL, 45 A 576 L. R. 4 A, 284 : 73 I. C. 1024 : 1924 A. 24.

———Joint family—Alienation—Father—Suit by son to set aside—Form of decree—Consideration partly binding.

Where a Hindu son sues to set aside an alienation of ancestral property made by his father on the ground that it is not binding upon him and the Court finds that out of the sale consideration, a portion was not required for family necessity the plaintiff would be entitled to a decree for possession subject to his re-imbursing the purchaser to the extent to which the sale was a valid sale. The form of decree in a case of this kind should, therefore, be a decree for possession in favour of the plaintiff subject to his paying to the purchaser so much of the consideration as was required for the necessity of the family, (Mears, C. J. and Banerji, J.) DWARKA RAM v. JHULAI PANDE. 45 A. 429 : 9 O. & A. L. R. 494 : 72 I. C. 134 (1) : 1923 A. 248.

———Joint family—Alienation—Father—Portion of consideration not binding—Sale when set aside.

In a suit by a son to challenge a father's alienation, where a portion of the consideration is not binding, what the Court should look at is the amount of the consideration in regard to which no legal necessity is established. If this amount is so trifling that it can be left out of account the sale should be upheld; other wise it should be set aside. Another test applied is whether the amount for which legal necessity is established could have been raised without the alienation sought to be impugned. (Daniels, J) CHANDRIKA SINGH v. ———Joint family — Alienation—Father — Antecedent debt—Mortgage

The definition of an antecedent debt as one "incurred irrespective of the credit obtainable from joint family property" is to be regarded as one to be construed in the light of the particular facts before a Court and as not excluding from the category of antecedent debt money borrowed on a hypothecation bond where the personal liability continues irrespective of the security. A usufructuary mortgagor is not as such personally liable to pay the loan. It is open to the alienee to invoke the antecedency of the father's debts to support an alienation as against the son even during the father's life-time. 39 A. 437 23 O. C. 211 referred to. (Ashworth, J. C.) JAMNA PRASAD v. BALBHADDAR. 25 O. C. 388 : 9 O. L. J 601; 74 I. C. 353 (2) : 1923 Oudh 147.

It is only when the property has passed out of the family on account of an antecedent debt or where it has been sold by public auction, that the sons cannot challenge the alienation unless they show that the debt was tainted with immorality. It is not correct to say that in every case where the property has passed out of the family (though under a private sale not in lieu of any antecedent debt and even when the legal necessity has not been established), the sons cannot challenge it unless they show that the debts were contracted for immoral purposes. Where a property has been sold by a father and the sons bring a suit to recover it, and apparently the property has not been sold away at public auction, then it lies upon the transferee to justify the alienation of the estate by showing that the debt was in lieu of some antecedent debt or that the alienation was for some legal necessity. Except in cases where joint ancestral property has passed out of the joint family either under a conveyance executed by the father in consideration of an antecedent debt or in order to raise money to pay off an antecedent debt under a sale in execution of a decree for the father's debts and in no others, the sons are not under an obligation to show that the debts represented by a mortgage executed by the father were debts which were contracted for immoral or other purposes not binding on the estate. A decree, unless it is binding on the sons, does not improve the position of the creditor any more than a sale which a father effects in order to pay a debt incurred by himself on the security of the mortgaged property. The exception to the general rule that no manager, guardian or trustee can be entitled for his own purposes to dispose of the estate, which is under his charge, cannot be extended where a liability under a mortgage merges into a decree, unless that decree can by any rule of law be held to be binding on the other members of the family. If a mortgage is not valid so far as it purports to encumber the joint family property, it cannot become a just and legal consideration, if, in the absence of the sons of the mortgagor a decree has been obtained on foot thereof against the mortgagor, otherwise the protection intended for the junior members of the family can in that way be easily circumvented and become illusory. ——— Joint family—Alienation — Father—Mortgage by—Public auction sale—Rights of parties.

Where joint family property has passed out either under a conveyance executed by the father in consideration of an antecedent debt or a sale in execution of a decree against the father, the sons cannot recover the property unless they show the debts were contracted for immoral purposes and the purchasers had notice of the same. Where the sale was a public auction sale and the sons could safeguard their rights if they had taken steps in time, they cannot afterwards question the rights of the purchaser by challenging the validity of the original mortgage executed by their father. ——— Joint family—Alienation — Father—Mortgage—Sons' liability.

There is a distinction between the sons' liability under a mortgage executed by a father of a joint Hindu family and his remedy after proceedings taken against the father on foot of the mortgage.

In the case of a joint Mitakshara family consisting of a father and minor sons, the father is necessarily the manager of the joint family, and as such, for all purposes, is a representative of the family. In the case of a joint Mitakshara family where the father, the managing member mortgaged family property for an antecedent debt and a suit was brought and decree obtained against the father, such suit and decree should be regarded as instituted and pronounced against him, in his representative capacity; and if a son after a decree being obtained against the father, upon a mortgage executed by the father, sues to have it declared that his share is not liable to satisfy the said decree, or after a sale in execution of such a decree, sues to recover possession of his share, he cannot succeed, unless he proves that the debt was contracted for immoral or illegal purposes, or that the debt was of an illusory character.

The rule as laid down in Suraj Bansi Koer's case is not limited to the cases in which the property had passed out of the hands of the family and gone into the hands of persons who were neither previous creditors when the sale is a private alienation nor judgment-creditors when the sale is by public auction. (2) If he is the father and the reversionaries are the sons, he may by incurring debt so long as it is not for an immoral purpose, lay the estate open to be taken in execution proceedings upon a decree for the payment of that debt.

(3) If he purports to burden the estate by mortgage, then unless that mortgage is to discharge an antecedent debt it would not bind more than his own interest

(4) Antecedent debt means antecedent in fact as well as in time, that is, the debt must be really independent and not part of the transaction impeached.

Where an alienation by the manager of a joint Hindu family is impugned by the junior members, the recitals in the deed of sale are not sufficient by themselves to establish necessity but they are clear evidence of the representation made by the manager. Where proof of actual enquiry has become impossible, the recital coupled with the circumstances, such as would justify the reasonable belief that an enquiry would have confirmed the truth of the recital is enough to support the necessity alleged. A representation by the father as to the existence of antecedent debts, is on the same footing as a representation by the manager as to necessity. The real value of the representation is that it indicates the scope of the enquiry that has been or may be presumed to have been made. 5 O. L. J. 629 : 29 O. C. 211 explained 36

An alienation of joint family property effected by the concerted action of all the members of the joint family who had attained majority at the time raises a presumption in favour of such alienation having been made for real family necessity. Where the rate of interest specified in a mortgage is high and there is, in addition, a provision for a penalty on non-payment of interest punctually, the provision for compound interest and the penalty might be regarded as improvident and therefore not binding on the minor members of the joint family. The existence of an antecedent debt of the father does not justify his alienating the whole of the family property at a sum considerably less than the market value.

Where in a suit by the sons to avoid an alienation, the debt was partly for binding necessity, the plffs. are bound to discharge the binding portion of the debt before obtaining possession of the property alienated. (Piggott and Walsh, JJ.)

An alienee from an undivided co-parcener has a right to sue for the partition of the family property and to recover his alienor's share, in the case of a sale of an undivided share, that share, and in the case of a sale of a specific item of property, an equitable right to have that property assigned, if possible, to his alienor's share. The share of the alienor which passes to the alienee is the share to which the former was entitled at the date of alienation. In a suit by a co-parcener for the recovery of the property alienated by another co-parcener or for partition, the alienee is entitled to claim partition, if it can conveniently be done.

In a suit by a grandson to recover possession of properties sold by his deceased grandfather, the Court below held that the sale was not for necessity and gave a decree to the plaintiff for a division of the property into two parts and for recovery by plaintiff of one-half with mesne profits from the date of sale. On appeal by the alienee it appeared that the plaintiff was the only surviving member of the family, and that, at the date of the sale, the grandfather was entitled, as and for his share, to property at least equal in value to the property sold and that there would be no inconvenience in allotting entire property to the alienee. Held that the alienee was entitled to retain the whole of the suit property, that the plaintiff's suit should have been dismissed, and that the plaintiff was not therefore entitled to any mesne profits.

—Joint family—Alienation—Necessity—Onus—Antecedent debt—Suit by son to set aside alienation

To lay down a general proposition of law that in every case where a Hindu son brings a suit to recover possession of properties from the transferees from his father the burden lies on him to prove that the transfer was without any legal necessity, is not quite accurate. Of course in every case the burden prima facie lies on the plaintiff to establish his case, but where it is either admitted or proved that the plff was the member of the joint Hindu family the property transferred was an ancestral property that it had been transferred without the plaintiff's consent and not apparently in lieu of any antecedent debt or at an auction sale, the burden would lie on the defendant transferee to justify the alienation (Lindsay and Sulasman, JJ) BAJNATH RAI v GOKUL RAI

—Joint family—Alienation—Necessity—Onus of proof—Presumption

In suits by creditors for the money due from joint family, no general and inflexible rule can be laid down, the presumption proper to be made will vary with circumstances and must be regulated by and dependent on them (Broadway and Zafar, JJ.) CHALA RAM v KISHAN CHAND —Joint family—Alienation—Necessity—Pre-emption decree—Payment of.

The fact that a transaction is entered into by all the adult members of the family is sufficient to raise a presumption of necessity. An amount payable under a pre-emption decree is a debt for which the manager is justified in borrowing money on the security of the family property (Daniels A, J C) SHAM SHER DATT SINGH v LALTA SINGH, 90 & A. L R 252 72 I C 1000

—Joint family—Alienation—Necessity—Pressure—Existence of debts

In order to justify an alienation made by the father of a joint Hindu family it is not sufficient in law to show that at the time of the alienation debts binding on the family were outstanding. It must be further shown that the alienation had to be undertaken under the pressure of a present necessity for the discharge of the debts. The power of the father to charge the estate can only be exercised rightly in case of need or for the benefit of the estate. The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted or the benefit to be conferred upon it in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded. These observations apply to a mortgage as well as a sale (Rafique and Lindsay, JJ.) BANDHU RAM v. RAM KISHUN, SONAR.

A coparcener in a joint Hindu family property, who establishes that a member of the family has alienated family property without legal necessity, can sue to recover the whole property. He cannot be allowed to sue for his own share of any specific portion thereof for the simple reason that in a Mitakshara joint family no particular share can be predicated as belonging to any individual member. The only concession, which the Courts have so far made in the direction of allowing the share of the transferor to be affected, is where the share of the transferor has been attached in execution of any money-decree. In such a case the Courts have held that a co-sharer who sues for the recovery of the whole property will be allowed to recover, but it will be declared that the purchaser of the interest of the transferor is entitled to a partition and to recover thereafter that portion of the property which represents the transferor's interest therein (Mullick and Buckmill, JJ) SHYAM SUNDER RAI v JAGARNATH MISRA, 2 Pat 925 1 Pat L R. 373.

———Maintenance—Daughter in law—Right to get maintenance from husband's family—Extent of

A widowed daughter in law has no legal right to maintenance as against the self acquired property of her father-in-law if her husband died during the life time of her father-in-law, 2 Beng L R. (A. C J) 15, 57 M 396 Ref.

But although the obligation of the father-in-law to maintain his widowed daughter-in law is only moral and not legal, when he has no ancestral assets in his hands the position of the heir who takes his estate by inheritance is different. What was a moral obligation in respect of the father ripens into a legal obligation when the estate passes into the hands of his heirs 11 A 194, 29 C, 557, Ref.

Where it is impossible to predicate how much will ultimately be realized out of the outstanding debts, it is sufficient to give the plaintiff a declaration that he is entitled to his proportionate share of whatever may be recovered. Any property acquired by a member with his own money after the passing of the preliminary decree for partition would not be liable to partition, but when, it is shown that he possessed ancestral funds from which such property could be acquired, it lies on him to show that those funds were not employed for the purpose. If he fails to discharge this burden, it must be presumed, that the property was acquired with money belonging to the joint family and it is therefore, liable to partition (Broadway and Brasher JJ) LACHHMAN DAS v NANAK CHAND 70 I C 810 1923 Lah. 20

It is an unabrogated rule of Hindu Law that a common way or a road of ingress and egress reserved as common property between the various sharers at a previous partition cannot be the subject of a partition. The expression "common way," referred to in Mitakshara Ch 1, S 1V, pp 16 and 25 is not confined to "common ways" existing prior to partition and is applicable to common passages created for the first time and reserved by agreement between the parties at the time of the partition. 36 B 379, 382 Ret.

Where the arbitrators annexed a condition to their award that property allotted to respective co-parceners is to be theirs but if any of them die without male issue, that person's share was to go to the other co-parceners held that the insertion of the conditions was valid and did not vitiate the award. The arbitrators did not alter the course of legal devolution in a mode at variance with the ordinary principles of Hindu Law, for according to Hindu Law the co-parceners could have validly agreed amongst themselves to exclude the widows from succession as the arbitrators had done. 29 M. ———Partition—Portion left undivided—Right of widow of one of the members to demand partition

When members of a joint family divide portion of the family property, a state of severance would in all probability result though it depends upon the circumstances in each case, and the facts provide, whether family still remained joint, each member holding his share of the property divided as his own separate property, and all the members holding the undivided property as members of a Hindu joint family. Where it was found that a very large portion of the family property was divided in 1889 amongst the members and from that date they began to separate, and had separate business and enjoyment in respect of their respective properties, it would be a legitimate presumption that they intended from that date to live divided and consequently they would own the property still remaining undivided as tenants-in-common and therefore a widow of one of the members is entitled to a formal partition of the property left undivided (MacLeod, C. J. and Crump J) KASTURIBAI MANIBAI v BAI MAHALAXMI 1923 Bom 464

———Partition—Presumption

If a property stood in the name of K, one of the four brothers, this is not even prima facie evidence that the property was obtained by K, for himself if at the time of acquisition, the family was still joint. There is no presumption with regard to any other property that it was excluded from the partition and the burden lies upon him who alleged exclusion, to establish his assertion. Separate possession is not conclusive evidence of partition and must be interpreted in the light of all the circumstances of the case. The sole occupation by one co-sharer, of a portion of joint property does not constitute an ouster of the other co-sharers, and a co-sharer in possession of a portion of the common land, with the tacit or express consent of his co-sharers, cannot change the nature of that possession (Mookerjee and Cuming, JJ) KAILASH CHANDRA NAG v. BEJOY CHANDRA NAG 72 I C 680 1923 Cal 18

———Partition—Presumption.

There is no presumption, when one co-parcener separates from the others, that the latter remain united. ## —Partition—Presumption.

Where one member of a joint family separates or shows his intention to separate, the presumption is that there is division in status as regards all Division by metes and bounds is not necessary (Syed Wazir Hasan, A, J C) MAHABIR PRASAD v SURAJPAL SINGH. 10 O. L J 240

—Partition—Presumption.

The defendants in a suit by the widow to recover possession of a specified share of her husband on the ground of separateness, start with a certain presumption in their favour, but the presumption is not a very strong one where the relationship is not a very near one. The widow is not bound to prove a formal separation, accompanied by an apportionment. She can succeed if she can produce evidence to satisfy the Court that the position of her husband and the defendants up to the time of his death was such that they could not have been living as members of a joint undivided family. It is by no means an unusual thing for members of a joint family, when acquiring landed property by purchase, to cause to be specified in their document of title the shares which they would respectively take upon a partition. Where this is not done the ordinary inference from the document, on the face of it would be that the vendees are taking in equal shares, and the members of the family may well think it convenient that such a presumption, where the facts should be rebutted by specification of it is not in accordance with shares, (Piggott and Walsh, JJ) MT JAIRAJ v, BHAGWAT PRASAD PANDE 1923 All 225

—Partition—Presumption—Partial Partition.

Where it is once admitted by the plaintiffs that there had been a partition before the date of their suit for partition the burden of proof lies upon them to prove that the properties in suit were joint family property and were undivided at the partition, that is, continued to be kept joined, till the date of suit the presumption being, that all property that belonged to the joint family was divided at the partition. Whether the property in suit was joint at the date of the partition and continued to be joint thereafter depends upon the questions, when was the property acquired and when did the partition take place (Kotwal, A J C) ANAND RAO v. DADA 71 I C 43

—Partition—Presumption—Separation in food, worship and residence—Partial partition.

From the separation of the members of the family in food, residence and worship it does not follow that the family had divided, for it might well be that in order to manage the family business and property at different places the members had to go to and live in those places separately.

When a member of a Hindu family who is divided in status from others is in enjoyment of a portion of the family properties while the others enjoy other portions, he is not in law excluded or ousted from those other portions, so as to disentitle him to his share of those portions, however long their enjoyment by others.

A family may remain joint in regard to some properties after a separation in regard to the others. The mere fact that there had been a partial partition of the family property does not affect the rights of the parties to sue for partition in regard to the other properties which remained undivided (Broadway and Zafar Ali, JJ) BHAGWAN DAS v MT PARBATI 72 I C 742 1923 Lah 569

—Partition—Proof of—Common living—Joint purse—Effect of.

It is not necessary that definite evidence should be given of a formal agreement between the parties to enable a court to hold that a separation had taken place. An inference of separation having previously taken place may be drawn from the subsequent acts of the parties without any proof of a formal agreement. But where the parties are found living together in the same house and meeting their expenses out of a common fund, it would require much stronger evidence than anything which was produced in the case to lead to the conclusion that they had put an end to their state of jointness (Miller C J and Foster J) TARINI PRASHAD SINGH v NUNU PRASAD SINGH 72 I C 1006

—Partition—Proof of—Transfer of name in khata.

As pointed out in 28 Mad 1 there is no necessary connection between the limited nature of the estate which a widow takes in her husband's property and the interest accruing to her in the income derived by her as such limited owner. That which becomes vested in her own right and which she can dispose of at pleasure is her own property, not limited but absolute, exclusive and separate in every sense of the term and devolves as such. There is no presumption that savings or purchases with savings effected by a widow are increments to the corpus of the husband's estate and pass together with it. The consent of the people interested in quarrelling with an alienation would be equally strong proof of its being justifiable whether it was a gift or a sale or a mortgage. ## —Widow—Alienation—Gift—Consent of reversioner Effect of

Where a reversioner consents to an alienation by way of gift by a Hindu widow his consent does not estop him from subsequently impeaching the alienation. The consent of the body of the reversioners would not validate a gift which is a transfer without a consideration. ## —Widow—Alienation—Gift—If challenged by reversioners—Strangers if can—impeach—Nature of the transaction

A sale, mortgage or gift by a Hindu widow which purports to pass the absolute title is valid against every one except the reversioners and unless the reversioners elect to treat it as a nullity it subsists as against every one else. A Hindu widow is not a tenant for life, but owner of her husband's property subject to certain restrictions on alienation and subject to its devolving upon her husband's heirs upon her death. But she may alienate it subject to certain conditions being complied with her alienation is not therefore absolutely void but is prima facie voidable at the election of the reversionary heir. He may think fit to affirm it, or he may at his pleasure, treat it as a nullity without the intervention of any court, and he might show his election to do the latter by commencing an action to recover possession of the property. Consequently a gift of the whole of her husband's property made by a Hindu widow not challenged by the reversioner during her life time and acquiesced in by those who would take a vested interest after her death cannot be challenged by any one else. It is the reversioners and the reversioners alone who can dispute the gift. If they choose to allow the property to which they are entitled to remain in the possession of the donee that is their affair and no one else can object. If the donee remains in possession under a claim of right for 12 years he will acquire an indefeasible title even against the reversioner (Miller, C J and Mullick, J) MAHARAJAH KESHO PRASAD SINGH v CHANDRIKA PRASAD SINGH, 2 Pat. 217 1923 P 122

Recitals in deeds cannot by themselves be relied upon for the purpose of proving the ascertainment of facts which they contain, for it is obvious, that if such proof were permitted, the rights of reversioners could always be defeated by the insertion of carefully prepared recitals. Where all the original parties to the transaction are dead, all those who could have given evidence on the relevant points have grown old, or passed away, a recital consistent with the probability and circumstances of the case has greater importance and cannot be lightly set aside. If it has been proved that a sale by a widow having a limited interest, has benefited the estate by the payment of debts which were binding on it, although the amount paid may not amount to the whole of the consideration money received for the property sold, the Court, when it sets aside the sale, will direct payment to the alienee to the extent of the benefit received by the estate, and it must follow that if the consideration money for the sale is found intact at the death of the widow, the estate has benefited to that extent. So that if the reversioner after the widow's death wishes to have the sale by her set aside, he can only succeed if he restores the money. Surrenders of life estates under Hindu Law are simply cases of accelerating succession to the next heir which means that the female life tenant effaces herself and succession of the whole estate goes on to the next heir just as if the life tenant had died. A surrender can only be in favour of the nearest reversioners. Transfer in favour of remote reversioners can only be regarded as alienations of the estate. Such alienations can be made only subject to certain conditions being complied with, but, even if the alienation be made without necessity, it is not absolutely void but merely voidable at the election of the heir, who may think fit to affirm it or may at his pleasure

According to a Hindu will the income of a shop was set apart or ear-marked to be paid after the expiration of each month to a Thakardawara. No Thakardawara was specified in it and the provision that the rent was to be paid after the expiration of each month clearly signified the object of the testator to be that the shop should remain under the management and under control of his successors. The alienation of the shop by the widow of the testator in favour of the charity funds was challenged by reversioners. Held the widows had to carry out the wishes of the testator in the way ordained by him and not in contravention of it (Broadway and Jafar Ali, JJ) BHAGAT RAM v. Will—Construction—Gift to unborn children—Validity—Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act (8 of 1921) Ss 2 and 3—Effect of

A Hindu testator who died in 1912 left a will containing the following provision in favour of his descendants—The building valued at Rs. 2,000 shall be taken by my third daughter and the rental income derived therefrom shall be enjoyed by her. She has no power to make sale, gift, mortgage, etc. After her issue shall use and enjoy it from son to grandson with power of gift, mortgage and sale. The testator's daughter had a son born in September 1918 but he died the next day after his birth and the daughter herself died a few days later. She left her surviving her husband and two sisters. On a question arising as to the rights of the parties under the will held that the daughter took only a life estate in the property bequeathed and that she did not acquire an absolute interest by reason of her son having pre-deceased her. The Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act operates retrospectively and therefore applied to the case and the property became vested in the son as soon as he was born. Consequently the succession was to be traced to the son, though he was not alive at the period of distribution 31 M L J 33, 40 M 818 followed (Kumaraswami Sastri, J.) PERIANAYAGI AMMAL v. Will—Construction—Gift to wife—Malik—Absolute owner

The fact that the beneficiary under a will is a female in no way affects the interpretation to be put upon the words used by the testator, but every case of this sort has to be decided on its own merits and its peculiar circumstances. The mere use of the word, "Malik" qualified by the surrounding contexts does not preclude the possibility of merely a life estate being conferred. A Hindu testator bequeathed his property to his widow and provided that she would be malik and that after her death her two daughters were to inherit in equal shares. Held that the intention of the testator was that his widow should have a life-estate and that after her death the two daughters should succeed 2 Lah 175, 30 A 84; 65 P. Will—Construction—Principles—Estate given to sister—Malik—Meaning of

The will of a Hindu provided that his properties should go to his only heir, his sister as malik and provided that in case she predeceased him a trust should be created in favour of a temple, but if she survived him she could use the income for life and dispose of the corpus at her pleasure. Nobody could sell or mortgage the property. If there was nothing to indicate she got a limited estate under Hindu Law and the use of the word malik indicated the conferring of an absolute estate.

Will—Construction—undisposed of property—Devolution

If a will fails to make any effectual and complete disposition of the whole of the testator's real and personal estate, of course the undisposed of interest, whether legal or equitable, devolves to the person or persons on whom the law, in the absence of disposition, casts that species of property.

Wherever there is a partial intestacy either on account of no person being alive to claim under the will or by reason of a bequest being void or otherwise ineffectual, there is always a resulting trust in favour of the heir-at-law.

No person can prevent his property or any part of it or any interest in it from devolving upon the heirs constituted by law after his death, except by a valid disposition giving it to some other person. He can only defeat the rights of his natural heirs by making a valid device in favour of some person but not otherwise, for he cannot make it the property of no one, the property must vest in some one and cannot remain in abeyance or suspense without an owner (Dalal and Simpson, A J C.) RUP KISHORE v. Will—Gift to unborn person—Power of appointment—Rule in the Tagore case,

There can be no question that in a case to which the rule in the Tagore Case applies, a gift which cannot be made directly cannot be made indirectly by means of a power conferred by the testator on his executor 24 I. A. 93 followed. The rule in the Tagore case is a general rule to which there may be exceptions. Property cannot be made inheritable otherwise than as the law allows, but there may be exceptional cases in which Hindu Law sanctions a departure from the rule that the donee must be in existence. The Hindu Law allows the founder of a religious trust or institution to lay down a general rule of succession to the managership and a power given by the founder to his widow to appoint a successor to the shebaitship cannot be said to be improperly or invalidly exercised if the widow appoints a person who was not in existence at the date of the death of the testator, as shebait. A trusteeship with power to appoint a successor is well known to and recognised by Hindu Law (Sanderson C J and Richardson, J.) MATHURANATH MUKERJEE v. The objectors were being assessed to income tax for the financial year 1922, 1923 on the basis of the profits disclosed by their accounts for the calendar year 1921. In those accounts a total sum of Rs 42,882 was shown as interest paid on account of money advanced during the year by the partners in the firm for the purpose of carrying on business. The objectors claimed that this interest should be treated as an allowance admissible under S 10 (2) (iii) of the Indian Income Tax Act, and should therefore be deducted from the net profits of the year before these are assessed to Income-Tax.

Held that such interest represented merely an assignment of a part of the net profits for the year in favour of partners who were regarded as entitled to such assignment by reason of special advances of capital made by them in the course of the year.

—S. 51—Appeal to Privy Council—General right discussed,

No statute, Imperial or Indian, is to be found giving expressly, or by implication, a right of appeal either with or without the leave of the High Court to His Majesty in Council from a decision or order made, or judgment given under S. 51 of the Indian Income Tax Act of 1918, Neither can any such statute be found giving a general right of appeal to His Majesty in Council from the Orders or judgments of any class of Courts as the 3rd Section of the English Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, gives a general right of appeal to the House of Lords from the judgments or orders of the Courts therein mentioned.

Clause 39 of the Letters Patent of the High Court of Bombay considered,

INCOME TAX (1918), S 51

The words "original jurisdiction" are only used in contradistinction to the words "made on appeal" mentioned earlier in the clause

A decision under S 51 of the Income Tax Act to be appealable must be either a final judgment or final decree or a final order A final judgment as understood in English litigation is nothing more than that there should be a proper litis contestatio and a final adjudication between the parties to it on the merits

The fact that the functionary who states a special case for the opinion of the Court is or is not bound to act upon it does not necessarily determine whether the order and decision of the court is or is not merely advisory In order to determine whether an order made by a Court on a case stated is final or merely advisory, it is necessary to examine closely the language of the enactment, whether statute rule or order, giving the power to state a case

When a case is stated for the "opinion" of the Court, that word would serve prima facie to indicate that the order made by the Court was only advisory Where the case is referred for the "decision" or "determination" of a question, there is a prima facie difficulty in holding that the order embodying this determination or decision is advisory, but the use of these words or one of them is not decisive.

A decision, judgment or order made by the High Court under S 51 of the Income Tax Act is merely advisory and not in the proper and legal sense of the term final and the appeal is incompetent. (Lord Atkinson), TATA IRON AND STEEL CO. LTD v. THE CHIEF REVENUE AUTHORITY OF BOMBAY —S 51—Chief Revenue Authority can be compelled to state a case.

If an assessee applies for a case, the Revenue authority must state it, unless he can say that it is frivolous or unnecessary He is not to wait for the Court to order him to do it, it will be a misfeasance and a breach of the statutory duty if he does not do it. The word, "may" in the section does not mean "shall" Neither are the words "it shall be lawful" those of compulsion Only the capacity or power is given to the authority. But when a capacity or power is given to public authority there may be circumstances which couple with the power a duty to exercise it Julius v Bishop of Oxford. 5 A. C 214, 222 Foll.

Always supposing that there is a serious point of law to be considered, there does lie a duty upon the Chief Revenue Authority to state a case for the opinion of the Court, and if he does not appreciate that there is such a serious point, it is in the power of the Court to control him and to order him to state a case If there is a point of law it ought to be decided in a regular manner and upon proper materials Ordering a case to be stated does not depend upon the question whether the Chief Revenue Authority had reasonable grounds for being satisfied that a reference was unnecessary.

The question whether capital placed in a particular investment was capital employed in the business or not was not a pure question of fact, upon which the decision of the Income Tax Commissioners would be conclusive but was a question of law or of mixed law and fact, the decision of the Revenue Authority upon which would be open to review.

An important question of law upon the construction of the statute is involved. This may be most tersely expressed by asking the question what are the interest bearing securities which form part of the assets of the business and are therefore to be treated as part of the capital and one guide in arriving at this conclusion may well be the difference of language between the later Indian and the earlier English Act (Lord Phillimore) ALCOCK ASHDOWN & CO LTD v THE CHIEF REVENUE AUTHORITY OF BOMBAY

INCOME TAX ACT (XI OF 1922) S 2—Registered firm—Assessment—Mode of—Registration in the year

Where the partners had lost their right to be dealt with as a 'registered firm' for the financial year 1922-1923, for the simple reason that they had failed even to provide themselves with an instrument of partnership within the extended period allowed them for the presentation of their return of income, they could not be dealt with as such retrospectively the next year. The obvious intention of the rules, as shown by the wording of the prescribed form of certificate, is that such applications for registration should ordinarily be presented in the month of April the first month of the financial year. Where the period for making a return of income has been extended, there can be no objection to a certificate being issued bearing the correct date of some other month. It will take effect from the date specified therein. When the assessment comes to be made, the officer charged with that duty will have to determine simply whether the firm with whose return, or with whose accounts he is dealing, is or is not a 'registered firm' within the meaning of the definition. Where the objectors had been plainly told that they would be dealt with for the year 1922-1923 as an 'unregistered firm' their attempt to escape from this position by going to the Income-Tax Officer at the beginning of January, 1923 is wholly futile (Banery and Piggott, JJ) LALLA MAL HARDEO DAS COTTON SPINNING MILLS In the Matter of

The plaintiff who owned a house and certain lands mortgaged it to the first defendant. Subsequently the plaintiff sold the lands to the 2nd defendant the arrangement being that the 2nd defendant should pay the consideration money for the sale to the first defendant and thus discharge the mortgage. The plaintiff also executed a mortgage on the house to the 2nd defendant for the purpose of securing the additional amount required to discharge the mortgage due to the first defendant. The 2nd defendant failed to discharge the mortgage with the result that the first defendant obtained a decree on the mortgage and brought the properties to sale. At this stage the 2nd defendant paid a portion of the mortgage decree and by an arrangement with the mortgagee got the lands alone released. The house was brought to sale and was purchased by the 2nd defendant himself in the name of another person who ejected the plaintiff therefrom. Plaintiff brought a suit for possession of the house and damages Held, that the cause of action for the suit for damages arose on the date when he suffered a loss by being ejected from the house. 2nd defendant was in a fiduciary position of relationship to the plaintiff and having purchased the house as a result of his own breach of duty, was bound to convey the house to the plaintiff with mesne profits, subject however to the mortgage in his favour for Rs 1,000. 29 M L J. 551, 44 Cal 573 referred to. ## INDIAN SOLDIERS ACT (IX OF 1918), S 10.

INDIAN SOLDIERS (LITIGATION) ACT (IX OF 1918) S 10—Compromise—Signed by some of the agents—Application to set aside—C P Code, O 47, R 1

An Indian soldier before going abroad to serve in the war executed a power of attorney to his four brothers. A partition suit filed against him was compromised by one of the brothers without the knowledge and consent of the others. On his return the soldier made an application to set aside the compromise decree. Held, that the High Court had power to do so under O 47, R 1 C. P. Code or S 10 of Act IX of 1918 (Chatterjee and Chotzner, JJ) S. M. HAIMABATI DIVI v. PRAN KRISHNA BANERJEE, 27 C W N. 193. 75 I C 262.

S 11 of Act IX of 1918 under which the period during which a plaintiff has been serving under war conditions is to be excluded, applies only where the plaintiff is an Indian Soldier at the time when the action was brought. The Section has no application to the case of a plaintiff who was a soldier before the date of suit but who has ceased to be such on that date (Martineau, J) BARKHURDAR v. KARAM DIN 72 I C 107. 1923 Lah 465.

S. 11—Applicability of

S. 11 of the Act IX of 1918 applies only where the plaintiff is an Indian Soldier and it does not become applicable by the mere fact that he was a soldier at the time when the cause of action arose (Martineau, J) MULA MAL v. PIARA SINGH 71 I. C 323

S 11—Applicability of—Soldier on active service.

S 11 of Act IX of 1918 does not apply to the case of a plaintiff who has formerly been a soldier but has ceased to be one at the time when he brings his suit. The time during which the plaintiff was serving under war conditions cannot be excluded (Martineau, J) MAHOMED DIN v. ILAM DIN 5 Lah L J, 174. 73 I, C 817 (1) 1923 Lah. 455

The plaintiff entered into a contract in December 1922 for the purchase by him from the defendant of certain Java sugar to arrive by a named ship due about the end of the year at about Rs 20 to cwt. "ex godown." Duty was payable on sugar at 25 per cent. On the "tariff value" which was fixed annually at the average of the market prices ruling during the previous 12 months ending with September, the practice being to bring the new tariff valuation into operation from the beginning of January. When the goods in the case arrived the tariff valuation was reduced and the amount of duty payable was consequently less. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover the excess, where he had paid the full contract amount in order to get the goods, held, that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed.

The purchaser is entitled under the circumstances to deduct from the cost price so much as will be equivalent to the decrease of duty consequent on the reduction of tariff value under S 10 of the Tariff Act VIII of 1894 as amended by Act IV of 1916.

The word 'duty' in S 10 refers to the amount payable and arrived at by taking into account the tariff value and the rate of duty.

The excess payment made by the plaintiff as a condition of his getting the goods is a payment made under duress and not a voluntary payment and can therefore be got back (Schwabe, C J. and Krishnan, J) HAJEE SHAKOOR GANI v. SABAPATHY PILLAI 45 M. L J 749. 18 L. W 796 32 M L T 152 (H. C.)

—Easement—Obstruction to light and air—Proposed building—Form of order.

Where the plaintiff brings a suit to restrain the defendant from interfering with the access of light and air to his building by a construction proposed by the defendant the form of decree is not always that contained in form 15 of Appendix B of C P Code. It is quite true that it is the form prescribed for a decree in a quia timet action asking for an injunction against a building higher than the old level. That form is the common form of injunction which has been used in England ever since the cases of Yates v Jack (1866) L R 1 Ch 295, but it is obvious, when reference is made to the Easements Act that this form is appropriate as expressing what the Court should direct if the plaintiff succeeds in a quia timet action. Though the plaintiff may have an easement of light and air for all the windows which obtained light over the defendant's old buildings, he has no cause of action against the defendant unless he threatens to disturb his enjoyment of his easement. Therefore, if he succeeds in proving that, he is entitled to an injunction restraining the defendant from disturbing the easement, to the enjoyment of which he has been held to be entitled. By S. 32 of the Easements Act the owner of a dominant heritage is entitled to enjoy an easement without disturbance by any other person. What amounts to an actionable disturbance is defined in S. 33 of the Act. When the defendant is so enjoined, it will depend upon the future character of his building whether he has disobeyed the injunction in such a way as to give rise to a right of action. An injunction was issued in the case by "perpetually restraining the defendants from disturbing the easements to which the plaintiff is entitled in respect of the windows of the south wall of the premises mentioned in the plaint which were held to be ancient windows save in so far as they were obstructed by the defendant's old building." ## INJUNCTION.

—General injunction—Mention of particular acts unnecessary.

It is always undesirable that an order should be made for bidding a party enjoined generally from doing particular acts. If once the Court enjoins the defendant against particular acts there is no limit to the number of acts which might have to be mentioned. The general injunction is sufficient. —Nuisance—Declaratory suit—Septic tank—Preventive remedy.

The principles on which a Court acts in granting an injunction in preventing a nuisance likely to be committed, are these.—The Court will not in general interfere until an actual nuisance has been committed, but it may, by virtue of its jurisdiction to restrain acts which, when complied will result in a ground of action, interfere before any actual nuisance have been committed where it is satisfied that the Act complained of will inevitably result in a nuisance. The plaintiff, however, must show a strong case of probability that the apprehended mischief will in fact arise in order to induce the Court to interfere. There are at least two necessary ingredients for a quia timet action. There must, if no actual damage is proved, be proof of imminent danger, and there must also be proof that the apprehended damage will if it comes be very substantial.

Plaintiffs were the owners of certain houses and a temple frequented by worshippers on one side of the road. On the opposite side the defendants had a jute mill in which there were several septic tanks from which it was alleged that offensive smells emanated and complaints had been made from time to time by the plaintiff. In July 1919 the plaintiffs wrote to the defendants stating that they had been informed that the defendants were about to erect another tank opposite to the plaintiff's premises and alleging that nuisance and inconvenience were likely to arise therefrom and asking them to abstain from erecting the septic tank at that particular place. The defendants did not reply to the latter with the result that in August 1919 the plaintiffs brought a suit for an injunction restraining the defendants from constructing the tank. An interim injunction was issued pending the trial and it was established by the evidence that the use of the septic tank had been approved by proper authority and by qualified scientific men as a proper system in the neighbourhood and that the new septic tank, if properly kept would emit no smell and cause no nuisance. Held that no injunction could be granted as it was quite possible by the use of due care to prevent offensive smell emanating from the new tank. The Court however declared that the granting of suit was without pre-judice to the right of the plaintiff to take such further proceedings as might be necessary in case the new septic tank proved to be a nuisance in the future.

—Official Receiver—Duties of—Challenging alienation in fraud of creditors

When a creditor challenges an alienation as being in fraud of creditors, it is the official Receiver's duty to give notice to such creditor and ask him to substantiate his allegation. A general notice asking creditors to prove their claim will not suffice. A date should be fixed for inquiring into the bona fides of the transactions impugned, and notice of the same given to creditors to come and object. There must be an examination of the insolvent and creditors if any, and if he finds an alienation to be fraudulent, he must move the court to set it aside. Even if he finds it not fraudulent but a creditor wants it to be taken to court, he must do so taking an indemnity for costs if necessary. INSURANCE—Condition in policy that if claim is not brought within a certain time policy would be forfeited—Validity.

A clause in a policy of insurance that if on a claim being rejected, a suit is not filed within 3 months, the benefit under the policy would be forfeited does not offend against Ss 28 and 23 of the Contract Act and hence is perfectly valid (Greaves and Buckland, J.J.) GIRIDHARILAL HANUMANBUX v EAGLE STAR AND BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO LTD 27 C W. Fire — Arbitration clause — Condition precedent to suit—Rejection of claim by Insurance company—Right to sue.

A policy of fire-insurance provided that if a claim was made under the policy and rejected by the insurance company and a suit was not commenced within three months after such rejection all benefit under the policy would be forfeited. There was also a clause to the effect that if any difference arose as to the amount of any loss or damage such difference should independently of all other questions be referred to arbitration and that it should be a condition precedent to any right of action upon the policy. Plaintiffs sued for damages from the insurance company in respect of the destruction of their goods by fire. The trial Court found that the defendant Company had rejected the claim and that the suit was therefore competent. The Court also stayed the suit and referred the parties to arbitration. Held that the rejection of the claim by the company gave the plaintiffs a right of action within three months after the date of rejection. The plaintiffs had a right to sue to have the question of the propriety of the rejection decided and it was only in the event of that question being decided in favour of the plaintiffs that the amount of loss or damage should be ascertained. The suit should therefore be heard in the ordinary course. (Macleod, C J and Crump, J.) THE EAGLE STAR AND BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO. v. DINANATH 47 Bom 509 25 Bom. L R 184 72 I. Where the owner of a mill insures it against fire, and subsequently mortgages it to a third person and the mill and the premises are destroyed by fire, the insurance company is not liable to indemnify the mortgagees against the loss. The contract is one to indemnify the insured and not any other person between whom and the company there was no privity of contract. To entitle the mortgagees to any claim on the policy there must be a covenant not only to insure but to insure for the benefit of the mortgagees or to apply the policy money in reinstatement or otherwise for the benefit of the mortgage or an assignment of the policy taken. In the absence of any such covenant or assignment of the policy the mortgagee cannot claim anything against the insurer. The right of the mortgagee was to bring the mortgaged property to sale or in the event of its alienation by the mortgagor to follow it into the hands of a purchaser. If the insurance company sold the remnants of the machinery, etc., after the fire under the terms of the policy, then, the contract of insurance being one of indemnity, any salvage belonging to the insurers is presumed under such circumstances, to have been abandoned and any thing that remains of the property belonging to the insurers to reimburse themselves so far as they can by selling the salvage for what it will fetch. (Robinson, C J and Maung Lun, J.) P. V CHETTY FIRM v. MOTOR UNION INSURANCE COMPANY 1923 Bur. 8.

Policy—Conditions of — Disclosure of particulars—Omission—Estoppel by conduct—Prejudice.

In a policy of insurance against fire there were two conditions to the effect that the assured should submit within a particular time full particulars of the loss sustained and that the company should have a right to take over possession and management of the insured property and sell or do any other act with regard to it. A loss by fire having occurred notice of claim was preferred but the insurance company took over and kept possession of the assured's property. Subsequently the company pleaded that the particulars required were not given by the insurer and therefore set up immunity. Held that the company having taken advantage of the salvage clause and assumed possession of the property to the detriment of the owners were estopped by their conduct from objecting that the full particulars were not given (Lord Atkinson) THE YORKSHIRE INSURANCE CO v. THOMAS CRAINE. 32 M. L. T. (P. C.) 25.

Money borrowed left in deposit with lender—Effect—Interest if payable

If a person takes a loan on interest and leaves the amount borrowed with the lender as a deposit without interest, to be drawn on as he may require, the interest payable on the agreement of loan does not cease to run. The mere fact that a borrower does not require the money and, therefore, does not demand it for a long time and that the lender is himself able to use it during that time can make no difference on the lender's right to charge interest. Post diem interest—Mortgage by conditional sale.

INTEREST

—Post disem—Mortgage—No provision for payment of interest after due date—Effect of

In the mortgage sued no mention was made about the payment of interest year by year but after the clause relating to the payment of principal and interest after due date there was no stipulation that interest should be payable at the contract rate. The penalty of not paying at the end of two years was stated to be the right of the mortgagee to recover principal and interest when he liked. There was no stipulation that if the money was not paid on the due date interest at the contract rate would continue to run. Held that the contract was so onerous that the deed should be read as far as possible to favour the mortgagor, that there was no reason shown, such as insufficiency of security, why such an exorbitant rate of interest should be agreed upon and that the Court should fix a reasonable rate as payable after the due date (Dalai, A.J.C) RAZA HUSAIN KHAN v GANESH PRASAD.

Under a rule framed by the Madras High court the institution fee for plaints on the Original side was raised by a notification in the Gazette and they were to come into force from the date of publication. The notification reached the High court at 5 P M on a certain day when the offices had just closed.

Held by the majority of the special Bench that the new rules applied to all plaints filed on that day, Per Schwabe, C J The word "from" proceeding a date may mean "or and after" or after. The context and circumstances of each case should be looked at to arrive at the true construction. Unless there are valid reasons to the contrary if the named date is at the beginning of a definite limited period i.e. where there is a termines ad quem as well as a quo, then prima facie the first day is excluded. If the named date is at the beginning of an indefinite period the first day is included.

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

Per Coutts Trotter, J—Where a statute fixes only the terminus a quo of a state of things which is envisaged as to last indefinitely, the common law rule is that portions of a day ought to be neglected and the order takes effect from the first moment of the day on which it is enacted or passed, when the order limits the period marked both by a terminus a quo and a terminus ad quem, the former is to be excluded and the latter to be included in the reckoning.

Per Kumarasami Sastry, J—There is no hard and fast rule in construing the significance of the word "from." Each case must depend on its own facts. Justice and equity require that the date of notification ought to be excluded. (Schwabe, C J, Coutts Trotter and Kumarasamy Sastry, JJ) In re COURT FEES

———Intention of Legislature—Language plain

If the language of a statute is clear and unambiguous the Court must give effect to it and has no right to extend its operation in order to carry out the real or supposed intention of the legislature. It matters not in such a case, what the consequences may be. Where by the use of clear and unequivocal language capable of only one meaning anything is enacted by a legislature it must be enforced even though it must be absurd or mischievous (Shadi Lal C J and Le Rossignol, J) PIARA SINGH v MULAMAL. 4 Lah. 323 ———Intention of the Legislature—Meaning of words used—Plain construction.

A Court is not at liberty to speculate on the intention of the Legislature, and to construe them according to its own notions of what ought to have been enacted. Nothing could be more dangerous than to make such considerations the ground for constructing an enactment that is unambiguous in itself. To depart from the meaning on account of such view is, in truth, not to construe the Act, but to alter it. But the business of the interpreter is not to improve the statute, it is, to expound it. The question for him is not what the Legislature meant, but its language means, i.e., what the Act has said that it meant. To give a construction contrary to, or different from that which the words import or can possibly import, is not to interpret law, but to make it. (Shadi Lal, C J and Martineau, J) *GOBIND DAS v. ———Maxim—Expressio unius exclusio alterius—Scope of the rule in modern legislation

A general rule of construction of acts of the legislature is expressio unius exclusio alterius (The express mention of one thing implies exclusion of another). But the method of construction summarised in the maxim cannot be applied without limitation, for a failure to make an expression complete may easily arise from the accidents of legislative procedure, and it is common to find provisions put into statutes ex abundanti cautela and at the instance of parties interested. Consequently provisions sometimes found in statutes, enacting imperfectly or for particular cases only, that which was already and more widely the law have occasionally furnished ground for argument based on the maxim, that an intention to alter the general law was to be inferred from the partial or limited enactment. But the maxim is plainly inapplicable to such cases. The only interference which a Court can draw from such superfluous provisions (which often find a place in Acts to meet unfounded objections and idle doubts) is that the legislature was either ignorant or unmindful of the real state of the law or that it acted under the influence of excessive caution. ———Plain meaning

Per Crump, J—Courts are bound to construe a section of an Act according to the plain meaning of the language unless either in the section itself, or in any part of the Act anything is found to modify, qualify or alter the statutory language even if absurdity or anomaly be the result of such interpretation. The proper course in interpreting an Act intended to codify a particular branch of the law is first to examine its language for its natural meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law and to start with enquiring how the law previously stood and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view, (Macleod, C.J. and Crump, J.) ALFRED WILKINSON v WILKINSON, 47 Bom 843

—Restriction on rights of the subjects—Strict interpretation

A statute imposing restrictions upon the rights of the subjects should be strictly construed and such restriction should not be extended beyond what the words used actually cover (Abdul Raoof and Mohi Sagar, JJ) THE ZAMINDARA BANK SHERPUR KALAN v SUBA 71 I C 722 —Retrospective operation—Intention to take away vested rights.

It is an established axiom of construction that though procedure may be regulated by the Act for the time being in force, still the intention to take away a vested right, without compensation or any saving is not to be imputed to the Legislature unless it is expressed in unequivocal terms. It is not a fair reading of an enactment to hold that it was intended to impose an impossible condition under pain of the forfeiture of a vested right and an amending act should be construed as not applying to cases where its provisions cannot be obeyed. The law, as amended, may regulate the procedure in suits in which the plaintiff could comply with its provision but cannot govern suits where such compliance was from the first impossible 41 C. 1125, Rel (Ross, J) GOCHARAN PRASAD SINGH v WARIS ALI.

—Retrospective operation—When given

It is a general rule that all statutes are to be construed to operate in future, unless from the language a retrospective effect is clearly intended. It is chiefly when the enactment would prejudicially affect vested rights of the legal character of the past transactions that the rule in question operates. Every statute which takes away or impairs vested right acquired under existing laws, or creates a new obligation or imposes a new duty or attaches a new disability in respect of transactions or considerations already passed, must be presumed out of respect to Legislature to be intended not to be have a retrospective operation.

As a general rule, mere alterations in forms of procedure are retrospective in effect and apply to pending proceedings, but where a change in procedure is complicated with a change of exist-

—Resumable grants—Circumstances leading to the inference that grant is resumable—Service tenures—Resumption

Where the jagir was specifically mentioned as a service tenure involving the performance of police and other duties and the settlement with the Taluqdar showed the rent was increased four villages were taken out of the Pargana and set apart for the maintenance of the widows of the previous holder and a new patta was granted to him by the Maharaja and a new Purnava was issued to him at the zemindar's instance for possession of the jagir.

Held, the settlement with the talukdar was not a continuance of the old tenure. Had the talukdar succeeded to the jagir by right of inheritance the maintenance of the widows, would have had no concern with it or the right to take away any part of the property to provide for their maintenance.

Resumption in connection with these service tenures does not mean that on failure of the direct male line it "escheats to the zemindar and becomes what is called his Sir or Khas property, the jagir retains its character, but the zemindar becomes entitled to make a new settlement with the knowledge and sanction of the authorities, (Mr Ameer Ali) RAJA SRINATH RAY v UDAI NATH 28 C W N 145 33 M. ## Dependent Judgments—Reversal of main Judgment—Effect of.

Money recovered under a decree or judgment cannot be recovered back in a fresh suit or action whilst the decree or judgment under which it was recovered remains in force, but this rule of law rests upon this ground, that the original decree or judgment must be taken to be subsisting and valid until it has been reversed or superseded by some ulterior proceeding. If it has been reversed or superseded the money recovered under it ought certainly to be refunded and it is recoverable either by a summary process or by a new suit or action. The true question therefore in such cases is, whether the decree or judgment under which the money decree was originally recovered has been reversed or superseded? In other cases there is no right to a refund of money paid under a decree which has not been reversed on appeal (Lord Carson) SRI RAJA BOMMADEVARA NAGANNA NAIDU BAHADUR v RAVI VENKATAPPAYYA. 45 M. Civil and Revenue Court—Proceedings of Revenue Court—When can be impeached for want of jurisdiction in a Civil Court.

The exercise of jurisdiction with which we can here interfere must relate to the subject-matter, pecuniary value, locality of the parties these are matters which form the foundation of a Court's jurisdiction, and if a court wrongly assumes that the foundation exists when in fact it does not exist then and then only it is wrongly exercising jurisdiction. But jurisdiction in its wider sense is sometimes understood to mean the power to do certain specific things which are ordained by statute.

If the Court has assumed jurisdiction correctly, that is to say, if by reason of its local situation or pecuniary authority, or by reason of the subject-matter, or the portion of the parties the Revenue Court had power under the statute to entertain the partition proceeding, then, every error made in carrying out the partition in accordance with the terms of the law would not necessarily invalidate the proceeding and render it null and void. As has been often observed a Court has jurisdiction to decide wrongly as well as rightly.

Where the foundation of jurisdiction does not exist as in cases where a Revenue sale is held though there is no arrear of revenue at all, or a certificate sale is held in execution of a certificate issued without authority, a Civil Court has an undoubted right to declare the sale to be a nullity and to restore the property to the owner. So again where a property such as a burial ground which the Estates Partition Act forbids the Deputy Collector to partition, is partitioned a suit will lie to declare that the partition so far as the burial ground is concerned is null and void, but if the Deputy Collector merely commits an error of law, it would be contrary to the principle to hold that a Civil Court can interfere for the purpose of readjusting the arrangement and making a fresh partition (Mullick and Ross, JJ.) *RADHAKANTO PARHI v. —Want of—Irregularity in the exercise of—Distinction

There is a clear distinction between 'jurisdiction' and 'exercise of jurisdiction'. Since jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine a case, it does not depend either upon the regularity of the exercise of that power or upon the correctness of the decision pronounced, for the power to decide necessarily carries with it the power to do wrongly as well as rightly.

The boundary between an error of judgment and the usurpation of power is thus, the former is reversible by an appellate court within a certain fixed time and is therefore only voidable, the latter is an absolute nullity. So far as the jurisdiction itself is concerned, it is wholly immaterial whether the decision upon the particular question be correct or incorrect. Where it held that a Court had jurisdiction to render only correct decisions, then each time it made an erroneous ruling or decision, the Court would be without jurisdiction and the ruling itself void (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) KUMAR ARUN CHANDRA SINHA BHADUR v MANMOHAN SINHA ROY

LAND ACQUISITION—Compensation—Measure of—Injury to property—Land Clauses Act, S 68—Canadian Law

Compensation claims are statutory and depend on statutory provisions. No owner of lands expropriated by statute for public purposes is entitled to compensation, either for the value of the land taken, or for damage, on the ground that his land is injuriously affected unless he can establish a statutory right.

Where damage is occasioned to a proprietor A by what is done upon other land which has been compulsorily acquired by the Crown from another proprietor B, such damage would not have been actionable as against B, the original proprietor and could not be taken into account in awarding compensation to A. Where however the mischief is from land taken from A himself he is entitled to compensation for injury done to his other lands acquired. It is a matter of difficulty to assess the amount of compensation where the mischief complained of arises, not only on land which had been taken from the claimant but also on land over which he had no ownership claim. In awarding compensation regard must be had not merely to the actual user of the land acquired at the time when the compensation case is heard but also to such prospective or contemplated legal user as may injuriously affect other lands of the claimant (Lord Parmoor). THE SISTERS CHARITY OF ROCKINGHAM v THE KING 32 M. —S 23—Market value—What is—Considerations in fixing—Speculation

The market value of a plot of land is to be determined as a whole, having regard to the sales in the vicinity. The mere fact that it was purchased by a Speculator in land with the object of reselling it at a profit is no ground for disregarding the sale for assessing the compensation.

The expression "market value" means the value which a parcel of land would realise if sold in the market. The seller must be a willing seller, a forced sale affords no criterion of market value. The purchaser must be a prudent purchaser, i.e. one who makes his offer after making necessary enquiries as to the value of the land, an offer made by one who knows nothing of the value of the land in the locality and who makes no enquiries about it affords no test of market value. —S 29—Khot and occupant—Occupant in possession of specific area of warkas.

In the case of warkas or bhati land in Salsette, it has been a recognised custom to divide the compensation between the occupant and the Khot in the proportion of 2 to 1. But that has been due to the fact that in the case of such lands it is extremely difficult to define, and ascertain the value of the respective interests of the Khots and the occupants, with the result that a rough and ready method of division has been adopted for want of a better one. In many cases the claimants against the Khots can hardly be called occupants. The claims are based on the fact that they are occupants of certain defined plots of land for the purpose of cultivating them so that by reason of such rights as occupants, they are entitled to other rights over the adjacent lands either for the purposes of grazing or of gathering rab materials. It is not generally shown that in such cases the occupants of cultivated lands have any defined area of warkas or bhati lands allotted to them, and so in order to divide the compensation between the Khot and the persons who have the right of user, owing to their position as cultivators, it has been found a convenient compromise to divide the compensation between them in that proportion. But it is entirely different where you find a tenant in occupation of a defined area of land, and paying assessment for it. Then undoubtedly he has a right to possession of all that area. This principle which has been embodied in S 111 (B) of the T. P. Act and though the section itself does not apply to the Punjab the principle therein enacted does. Denial in a suit will not work a forfeiture of which advantage can be taken in that suit because the forfeiture must have occurred before the suit was instituted. The denial therefore must not only be of a clear unambiguous nature but must be antecedent to the suit for possession. ## LANDLORD AND TENANT

Nature of tenancy—Muafi Khanati—Different kinds of tenancy

A Muafi Khanati tenant may be exempt from paying rent for services to be rendered to the Malguzar or for services to be rendered to the village. The distinction between the two classes is clear. A man may be entitled to hold certain land free of rent as long as he performs certain services, both tenure and exemption being dependent on the services and ending with them. This is one class. If the other persons are entitled to hold land as tenants with an added condition that they shall pay no rent so long as they perform certain services, the exemption but not the tenure being dependent on the services and ending with them (Hallifax, A J C BED PRASAD v, KANGALU 1923 Nag 163)

Notice—Waiver of—Receipt of rent

By receiving an increment of rent for a period of 6 months in advance after termination of the tenancy by notice to quit, the landlord waives notice. A landlord may recover rent of the statutory tenant without waiving the notice to quit. Permanent tenancy

Long possession and uniform payment of rent are not by themselves sufficient to justify a finding that a tenancy was permanent from its inception (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) KEDAR NATH SADHUKHAN v MADHU SUDAN DAS. 37 C L J. 478 75 I C. 105 1923 Cal, 682.

Permanent tenancy—Evidence of—Long possession—Non-payment of rent—Effect of

Where the origin of a tenant's possession of certain land used as a house-site is shown to be permissive and derivative from the land the tenant cannot acquire by prescription a title adverse to the landlord unless he openly asserts his permanent right and definitely challenged the right of the landlord to evict him. Mere non-payment of rent is in these cases of very little value as showing any right to permanent residence. In many cases no actual right is placed by tenants of this class except such incorporeal rent as is illustrated by a general position of dependence upon the ground landlord as one of the village proprietors. It is not sufficient for a tenant to show that he has not actually delivered cash or even manure or has not rendered certain definite and specified services, as his position as a temporary tenant may equally well be illustrated by the mere fact of recognising a certain feudal dependency upon the landlord (Pipon, J. C.) RAHIMUDDIN v SHAHBAZ KHAN —Permanent tenancy—Evidence of—Origin unknown—Inference from circumstances.

In a case in which there was no direct evidence as to what the original tenancy was, it appeared that a pucca house was erected on the premises in question at least 50 years before suit, that from that date the rent fixed and paid for the premises in question had never varied that the tenant from time to time had disposed of his interest, and that during that period the value of the land had risen. Held that the proper inference to be drawn on the facts was that the tenancy was a permanent tenancy and not one from month to month (Sir Walter Schwabe, C J and Wallace, J.) ABDUR SALAM SAHIB v M KANDASWAMI CHETTIAR.

—Permanent tenancy—Origin of tenancy unknown—Uniform payment of rent—Erection of buildings

Where the origin of tenancy was unknown, but the original tenant and his successor had been in occupation of the land for over sixty years on payment of rent which was never varied, and the tenancy was treated by the landlord as heritable and the land was set out for residential purposes, the inference may well be drawn that the tenancy was in its inception permanent. The presence of a permanent structure on the land is not essential to establish that the tenancy in its inception was of a permanent character.

—Permanent tenancy—Proof of estoppel—Building of pucca structures

Where the document creating the tenancy is not forthcoming the nature of the tenancy can only be proved by the mode of using the land, the acts and conduct of the parties. If there were a series of successions and recognitions and the rent continued uniform for a long series of years permanency can be inferred. The mere fact that there are pucca buildings without proof of landlord's belief and standing by will not do. (Ghose and Panton, JJ.) SYED ALI KAZEMINI v MANIK CHANDRA PRAMANIK

—Permanent tenancy—Proof of—Inference from facts

The Court below found (1) that the origin of the tenancy and its terms were unknown but it was certain that the tenancies were created more than 30 years and possibly 50 or 60 years ago, (2) that the land was let for building purposes and the lessees constructed houses on the parcels of land in dispute at considerable expense, (3) that the tenancies in dispute were transferred from time to time and that the landlord acquiesced in these transactions and (4) in all other cases brought by the landlord against other tenants in respect of the same tenure on the ground that they were tenancies at will had been dismissed on the finding that the tenancies were permanent. Held, that the only legitimate inference from these facts was that the land originally was let for building purposes on a permanent tenancy. 28 C 738 50 I C 749 Ref to (Ryves, J.) So far as tenures are concerned, the Bengal Tenancy Act makes it obligatory upon the tenants to have their names recorded in the landlord's sherista whenever they become entitled to them by succession. In the case of a tenure, therefore, where only one tenant takes the trouble to have his name recorded in the landlord's sherista, and the others, either by design or negligence fail to do so, it may be presumed that the tenants who failed to have their names recorded in the landlord's sherista consented to the tenant who had his name recorded representing them both in transactions and in suits affecting the landlord and the tenants. But other principles arise where the Court has to deal with the case of the sale of a holding, as to which there is nothing in the Bengal Tenancy Act compelling raiyats to have their names recorded in the landlord's sherista. It is a question of fact in each case whether the recorded tenant does in fact represent the holding in dispute and that the fact that only one tenant is registered is an item in the evidence upon the question whether he is or is not the representative tenant qua the landlord (Das and Adami, JJ)

Where the defendant purchased the holdings on the assumption that they were transferable and professed to be the tenant in occupation, in such circumstances, demand by the plaintiff for rent is good evidence of mutual consent to the creation of a tenancy, unless the plaintiff is able to explain that the demand was not unqualified and should be differently interpreted (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ)

———Rent—Decree for—Purchase in execution sale—Subsequent sale—Validity of—Estoppel.

It is settled that after a holding has been once sold in execution of a rent decree and has passed out of the possession of the tenant it cannot ordinarily be again sold in execution of any other decree for rent due by the same tenant. An exception however, has been made in cases where execution Court, though irregularly, allows the holding to be sold subject to a liability to satisfy another outstanding decree, in such cases the auction purchaser is concluded by res judicata and the landlord is competent to proceed in the first instance against the holding and to call upon the auction purchaser to discharge the liability which he has undertaken. But that principle has no application where the decree-holder is himself the purchaser. The judgment debtor cannot resist the attachment of his other properties if after the sale the decree holder had changed his mind. The law gives the decree holder an option and there is no question of estoppel. In order to create an estoppel the representation must be a statement of fact and not of a proposition of law (Mullick and Macpherson, JJ.) JUGALKISHORE NARAYAN SINGH v. BHATU MODI

-----Shamlat Delt—Partition of common land—Ejectment of plaintiff from his land in Deft's Thulla

The land in suit as well as 4 bighas 19 biswas cultivated by the plaintiffs formed part of the village common land, when this common land was partitioned according to Thullas, the land in suit was allotted to Thulla Surta and the other plot to Thulla Kanca. The plaintiffs were in possession (cultivating) of the latter plot and the defendants were similarly in possession of the land in suit, and although the ownership was changed at partition, the parties continued in possession of their respective plots.

When the Plaintiffs were ejected from the land in the Thulla of defendants which they were cultivating they sued for the possession of land in suit which was in their Thulla

Held, the arrangement was only for mutual convenience and the plaintiffs were entitled to get possession of the land in suit from defendants who had somehow got their names entered as its proprietors. (Broadway, J) MUGHLA v. ABHE RAM

—Status of tenant—Clause entitling—Landlord to realise rent summarily.

Where the tenancy of the plaintiffs was unquestionably a rayat's tenancy the status of the plaintiffs could not be elevated because a condition was annexed to the lease which entitled the landlord to realise rent by summary process. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ) PURNA CHANDRA DAS v ALI MAHOMED. 37 C L J 548 70 I C 999.

—Status of tenant—Entry in Jamabandi papers—Effect.

An order in a correction of records case directing the applicant's name to be entered as an occupancy tenant has the effect of defining his status until it is attacked by some other party or until he obtains under-proprietory-rights (Fremantle, S M) MAHANT RAM DAS v JANGI SINGH. I R 4 A. 281 (Rev.)

—Status of tenant—Rayat—sub-tenant—Lease in favour of relations of Zemindar

The question for decision in the case was whether certain cultivators who had been hitherto recorded as sub-tenants in land included in a lease given by the zemindar to a female relation living with him had a right to record as tenants-in-chief with retrospective effect, the result of which would be that they would be given occupancy rights. Held that leases of this kind were fictitious and that the sub-tenants should be recorded as tenants-in-chief so that the occupancy rights were acquired.

Whatever private arrangements the zamindar might like to make with the members of his own family, their names should not appear in the record as intermediary between himself and his tenants or sub-tenants of his sir (Fremantle, S M) SAHDEO RAI v. MT BHAGWATI KLAR I R 4 A. 227 (Rev.)

—Status of tenant—Transfer of tenancy—Rights of transferee

A person who was at one time holding as tenant paying rent could not degenerate into the status of a trespasser merely because the successor to the proprietary rights took no steps to levy rent on him (Pearson J M) ASHRAF ALI v. BAKHTAWAR I R 4 A 14 (Rev.)

—Sub tenant—Ejection of head tenant—Effect of.

It is convenient that actions for possession based on forfeiture should be brought against all the parties interested in the premises. The effect of not making every sub-tenant a party is not to limit the right which the landlord would have, on obtaining his decree, to obtain possession of the premises by executing the decree against the tenant.

Once the owner obtained a decree in ejectment against the head lessees and that decree having been obtained by S. 115 of the Transfer of Property Act, all rights of sub-lessees who held under the head lessees were at an end, for the simple reason that a landlord cannot give to a tenant or sub-tenant something which he does not possess himself. If his rights are gone, those who claim under and through him lose their rights also. The effect of the decree was that the present defendants, who were the head landlords of the plots, were entitled to possession of these premises as against the plaintiffs and as against the plaintiffs' landlords (Page, J) RAMKISSEN DAS v. BINRAJ CHOWDHURY 50 Cal 419 1923 Cal 691.

—Sub tenant—Stranger paying rent to Zemindar—Inference—Relationship

The mere fact that a person other than the tenant is cultivating the land and paying rent direct to the Zemindar does not deprive the tenant of his rights. It only suggests some private arrangement and a relation of landlord and sub-tenant (Fremantle Dube S M and Burn, J M) HAZARI DURA v. DUBE SHUKUL I R, 4 All 404 (Rev.)

—Surrender—Effect on under tenancy.

When a tenant surrendered his tenancy, the subtenancy was also determined thereby (Batten, J C) GOPALA v SAKHARAM 6 N L J. 234 73 I C 15 1923 Nag 261

—Surrender—Joint lessees—Surrender by one—Validity and effect of

Where there are two joint tenants under a lease though one joint tenant may be competent to surrender for the other joint tenants as well as for himself, he would only be entitled to do so if it was for the benefit of them all. ## —Tenant holding over—Who is

A tenant holding over is a person who after his right to occupation under a lawful title is at an end continuing in possession without the agreement or disagreement of the landlord (Hallifax A J. C) NARAYAN v TUKARAM 74 I. C 93 1923 Nag 310

—Termination of tenancy—Subsequent occupation by tenant—Damages—Rent—Right to.

Where the term of a tenancy, under which rent is payable periodically, is brought to a premature termination, the lessor is entitled to damages and to rent for unexpired term of the lease. Even the acceptance of surrender does not preclude the lessor from suing for damages for breach of the contract. It does not destroy the existing cause of action (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ) BEJOY CHANDRA SINHA v. HOWRAH AMTA LIGHT RAILWAY CO LTD 72 I C 98.

prietary rights has all the powers and privileges that a landlord has under the Tenancy Act in respect of his tenants and in respect of creating tenants. But the powers of a thekadar may be limited by conditions in his theke that he should not lease out land or create new tenants. ——— Title—Demol of—Interpretation

Where a tenant, in the memorandum of appeal in a Land Acquisition case described himself as the owner of the portion acquired and the question was whether that amounted to a disclaimer of landlord's title. Held it did not amount to "a distinct unequivocal renunciation of the tenancy" which is essential to constitute a disclaimer such as the law contemplates. The court has to bear in mind not only the nature of the document in which the expressions occur, but also to the nature of proceedings in regard to which the document was drafted. In considering whether what has taken place amounts in law to a denial of the landlord's title, the Court must have regard not only to the language used and the circumstances under which it came to be used, but must also consider what the tenant intended by using the particular words under the particular circumstances. In the absence of a custom or a contract to the contrary an occupancy tenant is entitled to enjoy the fruits of all the trees on the holding. But it appears to be clear that in the absence of a custom or of a contract to the contrary a Zemindar has no right to interfere with the enjoyment by his tenant of the trees

Held, further that the mere failure on the part of the plaintiff to sign the annual Kabuliyat should have this result only, that he would not be entitled for the time being to the right of management of the village. ## —Fazendari tenures—What is

In its strict or proper meaning Fazendari tenure means an indefeasible right to hold in perpetuity on payment of a small quit or ground rent, in its loose sense, any kind of tenure agreed on between the parties.

The estate to be really Fazendari must be one approaching as near as possible an estate of absolute ownership. It must be of unlimited duration subject to such rights as escheat. There must be no rights of re entry or resumption on the part of the Government (Fawcett, J) RAHIMTULLA v. HASANALI 25 Bom L R 1192

—Ghatwali tenure—Incidents of—Succession—Hindu Law relating impartible estates—Applicability or

The incidents that attach to the tenure known as Ghatwali are (1) that it is impartible and permanent, (2) that it descends by lineal primogeniture, and (3) that it is alienable at least with the consent of the Zamindar.

Where the family of a ghatwali is governed by the Mitakshara law the devolution of immovable property in the family must be governed by that law subject to the question of impartibility, unless either there be some special custom of the family in the contrary, or unless there be some peculiar feature inherent in ghatwali tenures, which prevents the operation of the Mitakshara rule of succession in the case of impartible property. The Ghatwali property is impartible and the sons and the other members of the family take no, immediate interest at birth entitling them to claim partition. But in a joint Mitakshara family the course of succession to ghatwali property is not different from that which regulates the succession of other impartible property. In a Mitakshara family living in commensality, the inheritance even of impartible estates is confined to male members to the exclusion of the females unless the estate itself is separate or self-acquired. ## —Construction—Bemayadi lease—Building purposes—Permanent tenancy

Under a bemayadi lease, no term was fixed for the lease to run and the purpose of the lease was to enable the lessee to erect a gola house. There was a stipulation that the lessee shall not construct any pucca building without the express and written permission of the lessor. present survey, etc. The dett land was similarly described in his lease, "Land lying within the boundaries as shown in the map which is in the settlement papers, etc." and in the Schedule as "1 drone 5 gandas of land in all covered by dag No 1742 13797 of the present survey, etc." It was admitted that the reference to the map in the leases had this effect, that it should be treated as incorporated in the leases and forming part of the documents. If things stood alone, there would have been no question that each party would be entitled to the dag as shown in the map as forming his parcel and the boundary line would have been the line drawn in the map. In the map however, at the place where the boundary line had been drawn a gopath had been depicted but as a matter of fact there was no gopath in the locality. There was however, actually a gopath in existence further to the south of the boundary line as drawn in the map. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to all the lands up to the line as drawn in the map, without reference to the actual site of the gopath.

The map was referred to in the leases not for the purpose of showing the site of the gopath, which is not mentioned at all, but for the purpose of showing the boundary lines, and the mistake in the drawing of the gopath at the place was immaterial.

As soon as there is an adequate and sufficient definition with convenient certainty, of what is intended to pass by a deed, any subsequent erroneous addition will not vitiate it (Walmsley and Ghose, JJ) DARAPALI SADAGAR v NAJIR AHAMED 50 Cal 394 1923 Cal 669

The use of the words putrapoutadi krame indicates that it was intended to be a perpetual lease. Held the tenancy was intended to be a lease at a fixed rent. ## LEASE

Construction—Lease for seven years—Provision for another lease with same conditions—Right of landlord to eject before the expiry of first lease

Under the terms of a hikapatta the lessee was to enjoy the property for seven years and that after the expiry of that period the lessor was to execute a fresh patta on the same conditions as before and with respect to the same lands. In a suit in ejectment by the landlord after the expiry of the first term of 7 years Held that the landlord was not entitled to eject. The lessee was in possession and since the time for the specific performance of the contract of lease for the second period of 7 years had not expired, the effect was the same as if a renewal had been granted (Bucknill and Kulwant Sahay, JJ) MOHIT NARAYAN v KAMAL NATH OJHA (1923) Pat 23 1 Pat L R 69 1923 P 236

Construction—Lease for specific purpose—Duration

A lease provided "under the rent note dated 2nd August 1890 executed by my Dadi, named Fundabi, the land, is in your possession for the purpose of your ginning factory. That khata holder died and the khata is transferred in my name as heir. Therefore I have fixed the rent of the field which is given to you by Fundabi for constructing a ginning factory and is in your possession, at Rs 120 per annum, and given it to you in order that you may keep it in your possession as long as you please. You should always keep this land in your possession for the use of your ginning factory. I will not ask it back." Held that it was an agreement with a particular company, the original lessees, that they should hold the land as long as they liked. A perpetual lease is determined by the death of the lessee, 4 Bom. 424, Ref., and on the same principle where the company to whom the land is given for a specified purpose is defunct, the lease comes to an end. The lease is a perpetual one in the sense that the lessees could do what they liked with the land and any diversion of use of the land from the purpose for which the lease was apparently granted would give the lessor a right of re entry and therefore in the present case the lease came to an end when the land was no longer used for ginning factory (Prideaux, A J C) GOVARDHAN DAS v WAHED KHAN 1923 Nag 243

Construction—Mireshorotto Janmaiya Meaning of the boundaries. The portion of a lease governing the lessee's right to build was as follows: "You shall not be competent to make big excavations but you shall be competent to construct pucca wall, pucca privy and pucca plinth of the tin ghur."

Held, that reading the clause as a whole, it was the intention of the parties that the lessee's right to erect permanent structures should be limited to those specified in the condition and that this condition amounted to a prohibition to build any other structures than those expressly mentioned. —Construction—'Thicca' 'Mokra'—Meaning of—Tenancy from generation to generation

The word "thicca" is used to indicate the creation of a tenancy and the word "mokra" is in reality 'Mokarari,' indicating that the rent was fixed in perpetuity. Consequently, if these two words are taken together, there is no escape for the inference that the rent was fixed in perpetuity, in other words, that the tenure was not only maurasi but mokarari. There is, however, a subsequent clause in the document which may militate against this view, namely, the clause which bars the alienation of the tenancy without the consent of the landlord. A pleader who had been discharged from Government service for improper conduct in connection with a criminal case concealed the fact, and applied for renewal of the Pleadings certificate. Held that though the conduct of the pleader in relation to the criminal case was open to grave comment, yet it was not such as to justify the refusal of the application for renewal of the certificate. ## LEGAL PRACTITIONER

The conviction of a legal practitioner for perjury is good ground for striking off his name from the roll of practitioners. In deciding the question, the propriety of the conviction cannot be questioned, but the court can go into the facts to find out for itself the extent of the moral turpitude involved. Where the conviction is by a foreign court, but the law is the same as in India and there has been a fair trial, the same principles will apply.

An order of disbarment is not conclusive for all time. If circumstances change and the court is convinced that the delinquent has been brought to a higher sense of honour and duty, the order can be cancelled.

Where a long time has elapsed since the date of conviction and there is evidence that in the interval the practitioner has been leading a honourable life, that matter can be taken into consideration when the disciplinary powers of the court have been invoked.

Disbarment of a member of the English Bar by the Benchers of his Inn does not ipso facto lead to his being struck off the rolls of an Indian High Court. The matter would have to be decided under the discretion given by the Letters Patent (*Schwabe, C. J. A letter addressed by a pleader to a Magistrate with reference to a case disposed of by him containing improper and vulgar abuse of the magistrate and a demand for an apology followed by a threat of further proceedings, is highly objectionable and the pleader is guilty of professional misconduct. Instructions from client are no excuse whatever for a pleader exceeding what is his duty towards the Court. In cases like this an apology and much less a conditional apology, would be insufficient (Maulead, C. J. and Crump, J.) THE GOVT PLEADER v. TATKE

A legal practitioner cannot represent conflicting interests or undertake the discharge of inconsistent duties. When he has once been retained and received the confidence of a client, he cannot accept a retainer from or enter the service of those whose interests are adverse to his client in the same controversy or in matters so closely allied thereto as to be in effect a part thereof. The rule is rigid and is designed not only to prevent the dishonest practitioner from fraudulent conduct but as well to preclude the honest practitioner from putting himself in a position where he may be required to choose between conflicting duties or be led to an attempt to reconcile conflicting interests, rather than to enforce to their full extent the rights of the interests which he should alone represent. Fidelity is required from all who hold fiduciary relations they must not lightly enter upon such relationships, but if they do, they will not be permitted to be disloyal, and of all species of disloyalty desertion and adherence to the enemy or to the opposite party in a suit is recognised as the worst. On those grounds it has been held that an attorney may be disbarred where he conducts a criminal prosecution against a person or assist therein, and thereafter appears for the defence, or while acting as attorney for the prosecutor in a criminal case he accepts money from the defendant in consideration of a dismissal (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ) EMPEROR v RAJANIKANTA GHOSE

The first clause of S 14 of the Legal Practitioners' Act empowers any Court in which a pleader practises to consider a charge of misconduct made against him in such court, and the section does not limit the consideration of the charge to the court in which the misconduct is alleged to have been committed so that it seems immaterial that the misconduct charged was committed in another Court. If the charge is made in the Court in which the Pleader practises, that Court is competent to enquire into it. The expression 'such Court' in the first clause of S 14 cannot be construed to mean the Court in which the misconduct is alleged to have been committed. A court acting under S 14 of the Legal Practitioner's Act is not restricted in ordering an enquiry to offences mentioned under cls (a) and (b) of S 13. It can direct an enquiry in respect of an offence under cl (f).

Before judgment is actually delivered in a case it is professional conduct to ask the Bench clerk about the trend of the judgment to be delivered (Dawson Miller, C, J, Kulwant Sahay and Foster, JJ) In the matter of NARENDRA NATH ROY (1923) Pat 329

It is a valid ground for interference by the High Court, in the exercise of its general powers of supervision, if the District Judge had disobeyed this latter direction and had included in his list of touts the name of a person who had never been allowed an opportunity of showing cause against such inclusion. It has never the intention of the Legislature to allow anything of the nature of an appeal against the decision of a competent Court under section 36 of Act No 18 of 1879. The High Court cannot allow its general powers of supervision to be invoked so as, in effect, to create a right of appeal which was never intended by the Legislature (Piggott, J.) KASHINATH v EMP 45 A 676 L R 4 A 317 21 A, L J 671 90 & A L R 696 74 I C 11 1924 A 69

Plaintiff was sued for the due performance of his duties and due accounting by an agent. In a suit instituted in Malabar by the principle a decree was passed against the agent and the plaintiff for the balance due by the agent to the principal and that decree was on appeal affirmed by the High Court. Alleging that in allowing that decree to be passed the agent or his representative conspired with the principal in suppressing material documents with a view to make the plaintiff pay the decree amount, the agent being impecunious, that the said fraud was practised in Madras, and that it was discovered in Madras, the plaintiff instituted a suit in the High Court (Original Side) Madras for having the prior decree set aside on the grounds alleged. The defendant were the agent's representatives, who resided in Malabar. In order to bring the suit within the ordinary Original Jurisdiction of the High Court plaintiff applied for and obtained leave under S 12 of the Amended Letters Patent to sue the defendant living in Malabar. The leave so granted was after notice set aside. On an appeal from the order setting aside the leave held that assuming that the High Court had jurisdiction to grant the leave, it should in the exercise of its discretion, refuse the same.

Nearly whole of the alleged cause of action arose in Malabar. There would be no ground at all for bringing the suit here but for the fact that two of the defendants reside here who it is alleged, have in their power there a very material document. The fact that some difficulty is anticipated in getting the document produced in Malabar is not sufficient ground for holding that the suit which is essentially a Malabar suit not a Madras suit, should be brought in Madras.

Per the Chief Justice—The discovery of the fraud is not part of the cause of action but the fraud itself is. Quere whether the fraud alleged is sufficient ground for setting aside the decree.

Semble S 12 of the Amended Letters Patent does not confer jurisdiction upon the High Court in cases where one or more of the several defendants reside within jurisdiction (Schwabe, C J and Wallace, J) PARAMESWARA PATTAR v VIYATHAN MAHADEVU 72 I C, 982 1923 M 272

Where the Vakil without expressing regret for his conduct maintained the correctness of his position he was suspended for 6 months. rendering assistance to the courts in the administration of justice but also for giving professional advice for which they are entitled to be paid by those members of the public who require their services. Their position training and practice give them an immense influence with the public and their example must necessarily have a much greater effect whether for good or for evil than the example of those who do not occupy this privileged position. It is not necessary for the High Court in order to be able to exercise its disciplinary jurisdiction that any offence should have been committed by a pleader nor is it necessary that what the pleader has done should have subjected him to anything like general infamy or imputation of bad character. ## —Cl 12—Applicability of—Submission to jurisdiction—Part of the cause of action within jurisdiction—Waiver of objections,

Where the breach of an agreement took place in Calcutta part of the cause of action arises within the limits of the ordinary Original Jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court. Though the plaintiffs in the action should have taken the leave of the Court under Clause XII of the Letters Patent before instituting the suit, still if there is a submission to the jurisdiction of a Court and if there is no inherent lack of jurisdiction in that Court the absence of the formality which would confer complete jurisdiction on that Court will not render the judgment of that Court null and void. Part of the cause of action having arisen within the jurisdiction of that Court, there is not an entire absence of jurisdiction in the Original Side of the Calcutta High Court taking cognizance of the suit. In order to give a complete jurisdiction it was necessary for the plaintiff in that action to ask the leave of the Calcutta High Court. Where leave of the High Court was not taken when pliffs instituted the suit in 1914, but the defendants submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court and expressly undertook not to question the jurisdiction of the Court that undertaking having been given when they applied for setting aside the ex parte decree, and one of the terms of the consent order by which the ex parte decree was set aside was that the defendants would not question the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court, Held that Calcutta High Court had jurisdiction to render judgment in the case, and the decree could not be set aside on the ground of want of jurisdiction. The real question for consideration in such cases is whether the plaintiffs had acted in good faith in prosecuting their suits in the Revenue Courts before they came back to the Civil Court. —S 10—Specific purpose—Meaning of—Agreement for payment of sum out of particular fund—Obligor if a trustee—Suit for recovery of money out of fund—Agreement to pay on demand—Limitation—Promissory note—Assignment—Rights of assignee.

On the deposition of a Native Prince, the East India Company took over such of his debts as were proved to its satisfaction under commission appointed for the purpose. The manner in which those debts were to be paid—as provided for by an agreement between the company and the creditors of the deposed Rajah by which the Company undertook to set aside a sufficient part of the Revenue to be received by it to provide for the payment to the creditors of the Rajah, who had signed the agreement, of their debts. Those creditors were to receive transferable bonds or certificates and sufficient revenue was to be set apart and applied to paying the interest on those bonds and also to creating and accumulating a sinking fund for the redemption in due course of the principal. In pursuance of that agreement transferable bonds, called Promissory notes, were issued whereby the Company agreed to pay the holders thereof on the expiration of 15 months notice of payment on demand at the general treasury at Fort St George the principal sum and to pay interest half yearly as long as the company was in possession of the revenues of Tanjore. The interest was to be paid at the Treasury in cash to the proprietors if resident in India and in cash or by bills at 12 months at the option of the proprietors, if resident in Europe. In a suit by the assignee of one of such notes against the Secretary of State for India in Council for recovery of the amount due thereon Held, (1) that a trust was created by agreement between the company and the creditors of the deposed Raja, that the company and the Government and its successors were trustees of the funds in their hands for the purpose specifically defined in the agreement namely the payment of interest and of principal of the transferable bond to be issued under the agreement and that S 10 of the Lim Act applied to the case, and (2) that assuming Art 120 of the Lim Act applied, time began to run only from the date of demand for payment and the suit which was filed within 6 years from that date was not barred.

Per the Chief Justice The Company was not under a duty to seek out the creditors and pay them, especially as the payment under the promissory notes was to be to the payees or their order. It came under no liability to pay either the principal or interest until the demand was made for payment at a particular place and in some cases in a particular manner. A "Specific purpose" within the meaning of S 10 of the Lim Act is a purpose that is either actually and specifically defined in the terms in which the trust is created or a purpose which from the specified terms can be certainly affirmed.

LIMITATION ACT (IX OF 1908), S 10

Per Wallace, J The trust created by the agreement did not cease by the issue of the bonds, but continued and was to continue according to the agreement, so long as any obligation to pay remained on any bond, and only when every bond was discharged

The assignment to the plaintiff which was made in 1909 recited that the assignor was entitled to the promissory note and to a specified amount of interest. The assignor was on the date of the assignment entitled to a larger sum by way of interest, but the parties to the agreement erroneously thought that interest on the note had stopped from 1854, and hence mentioned a smaller sum as representing interest. The operative part of the assignment however assigned all the interest on the promissory note which the assignor had, Held, that the deed of assignment was wide enough to cover both principal and all interest due and to become due, and the plaintiff had by virtue of it all the rights of the assignor, (Schwabe, C J and Wallace, J) SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v PANDIT RADHIKA PRASAD BAPULI, 44 M L J 685 46 Mad 259 18 L W 210 74 I C 785 1923 Mad 667

—S. 12 (2) and (3)—Copies of judgment and decree—Application for, on different dates Time occupied in obtaining copy of decree—Deduction of

An application for copies of judgment and the decree must be made before the expiry of the time for filing an appeal. There is, however, no obligation imposed on appellant to file applications for copies of judgment and decree at one and the same time and therefore he can make his applications for copies at different times. It is settled by authorities that the applications made at different times entitle the Appellant to take advantage of the time occupied in obtaining copies of both judgment and decree. Now, if the time requisite for obtaining copy of one of those documents extends the time of limitation, then the application made for obtaining copy of the other document after the time originally fixed for filing an appeal under the law of limitation but before the extension of time allowed by reason of time required for obtaining copy of one of those documents expires, will entitle the Appellant to extension of time required for obtaining copy of the other document (Jwala Prasad and Adami, JJ) JADU NANDAN SAHAY v HANUMAN SAHAY (1923) Pat 235 73 I C 619

—S. 13—Foreign territory—Territory under temporary military occupation—Basra

Basra was not a territory under the administration of the Government of India within the meaning of S 13 of the Lim Act. The fact that the troops which took part in the campaign in Mesopotamia were known by the name of the Indian Expeditionary force, and the despatches relating to its operation were published in the Gazette of India is not sufficient to show that Basra was under the administration of the Government of India. The occupation was military occupation for the purpose of proceeding with the expedition and protecting the army on its way onward and securing its safety and support. The territory was, except for those purposes, not under the administration of the Government of India. The plaintiff obtained a mortgage from one Tipava in 1904, and in a suit on that mortgage a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. In execution of that decree he purchased the property in suit with the leave of the Court. When he tried to get possession, he was obstructed by the present defendants, to whom apparently Tipava had transferred the property while the litigation was pending. As a result the plaintiff filed Suit No 344 of 1911 against the defendants to obtain possession. He obtained a decree on February 15, 1913. There was an appeal first to the District Court and then to the High Court, which ultimately confirmed the decree on December 10, 1915. He filed his application for execution of this decree on June 28, 1920. During the interval, however the defendants filed Suit No 42 of 1916 for a declaration that the plaintiff's decree had been obtained by fraud. The litigation lasted till July 31, 1920 when the suit was ultimately dismissed. In that litigation the matter came up to the High Court in Second Appeal No 328 of 1917. By that judgment the suit was remanded and ultimately decided against the then plaintiffs. The litigation of 1916 lasted up to July 31 1920. The application for execution, even taking the time to run from the date of the final decree in appeal was time-barred, unless the plaintiff can claim a deduction of the period taken up in the litigation of 1916. The lower Courts came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was not entitled to deduct the time under any of the provisions of the Limitation Act, and accordingly rejected the application for execution. In a suit by some of the trustees of a mosque for removal of its manager and for the appointment of a receiver the manager, (defendant) claimed that the suit was un-sustainable and that instead of his being indebted to the mosque, the mosque owed him considerable sums of money which he had spent out of his pocket. An issue was raised as to the amount payable to or by, the manager and the trial court found on evidence that the manager was entitled to be paid a sum of Rs 3,302 from the mosque and directed the receiver appointed in the suit to pay up the said sum. On appeal the appellate court concurred with the trial judge as regards the liability of the mosque to pay the manager but dismissed the suit on the ground that all the trustees had not been impleaded as parties. The manager thereupon brought a suit for recovery of the amount found to be due to him deducting the amounts actually paid by the receiver, appointed in the previous suit. —S 16 and Arts 137, 138, 144—Applicability of—Auction purchaser obtaining symbolical possession, but kept out of actual possession—Suit for possession—Limitation

Where Art 144 of the Limitation Act, applies no deduction of time under S 16 can be allowed either in law or under the general principles of equity

An auction sale was confirmed on 13—9—1902 and symbolical possession obtained on 12—1—1904. An application was made to set aside the sale on 21—6—1905, but was dismissed on 8—4—1906. A suit for possession was instituted on 11—7—1914 but the contesting defendants were added as parties only on 27—3—1916

Held, (1) the sale became absolute on 13—9—1902 when the sale was confirmed and not on 8—4—1906 on the dismissal of the application for setting aside the sale, as the confirmation of a sale cannot be kept in abeyance when proceedings are not taken to set it aside before confirmation

(2) Art 137 cannot apply to the case, as the judgment-debtor was in possession at the date of sale, (3) Nor would Art. 138 govern, as it evidently refers to a case where the purchaser has not obtained delivery of possession even if it applies, the suit is barred even after deducting the period during which the application to set aside the sale was pending.

(1) the proper provision applicable is Art 144 and from the date symbolical possession was delivered the possession of the judgment debtor was adverse to the purchaser (Chatterjee and Pantun, JJ)

—S. 19—Acknowledgment of liability—Part payment—Liability impliedly acknowledged

Towards a promissory note executed by him defendant made part payments on three different dates. There was therefore an admission of liability to pay the balance.

An endorsement on a promissory note by the promisor is an acknowledgment of liability which starts a fresh period of limitation from the date on which it is made. It is open to a borrower to make a promise in writing signed by himself to pay a debt of which his creditors might have enforced payment but for the law of limitation of suits. If the entry be construed as a promise to pay, such promise is applicable quite as much to the sum borrowed on that day as to the sum found due on adjustment of account. 18 C L J 269, 18 C L J 329, 23 M 94, 31 A 495, 3 M 159 Ref. The distinction between an acknowledgment and promise to pay is sometimes difficult to draw, specially as an unconditional acknowledgment, has always been held to imply a promise to pay because that is the natural inference. If nothing is said to the contrary it is what every honest man would mean to do. The case is clear where the entry is made in respect of an aggregate sum, with regard to a portion whereof there could only be a promise to pay and not an acknowledgment. 6 Bom 683 8 B 405 Ref. —S 22—Ex parte decree—Application to set aside—Addition of parties—Limitation.

S 22 of the Lim. Act, which speaks only of suits, does not apply to applications. An application to set aside an ex parte decree cannot, as regards an added party, be regarded to have been made when the added party is actually brought on the record of the application.

When a thing is to be deemed to be something else, in truth it is not that something else but is treated as that something else by a statutory fiction for the purposes of that particular Statute. Thus the word 'deemed' in S 22 of the Limitation Act indicates that the statutory fiction can be resorted to only when after the institution of a suit a new party is added or substituted (Das and Bucknill, JJ.) CHANDRIKA ROY v. —S 23—Suit for damages for wrongful distraint—Limitation—Agra Tenancy Act, S 146

The plaintiffs had cut and stacked from the land within the purview of their lease, a large quantity of thatching grass which they hoped to sell at a substantial profit. The defendants wrongfully and maliciously levied a distraint, under colour of Chapter IX of the Tenancy Act, upon this grass of the plaintiffs. The immediate result of this was that the plaintiffs missed their market and were unable to sell their grass, while the defendants were disposing of theirs. In the mean time the rainy season began and the land upon which the plaintiffs stacks were standing was flooded. The plaintiffs brought a suit to contest the distraint and finally succeeded in obtaining an order from the Court setting the distraint aside. When however, they became entitled to re-enter into possession of their own grass, the stacks, had been so damaged by rain and flood as to be utterly worthless. Thereupon the plaintiffs claimed the full value of the stacks, as the correct measure of damages for the wrong done to them by the defendants in wrongfully distraining the same. The distraint was levied on the 15 May 1919. The suit under S 142 of the Tenancy Act, to contest the distraint was terminated by the Court's order releasing the grass on 16th of September 1919. The present suit for damages was instituted on the 12th of December 1919.

Held following Dalip Upadhyay v. Gauridat Upadhyay (II Legal Remembrancer 61) the cause of action for a suit for damages in respect of a wrongful distraint takes its origin from the day on which the distraint came to an end and the suit may be lawfully instituted within the prescribed limitation period of three months calculated from the said date. — Art 11 (A)—Applicability of—C P Code Or 21, R. 100—Application under—Dismissal of, for want of cause of action

The 1st defendant purchased the land in suit in execution of a mortgage decree and took delivery of the same through the Court Thereupon the plaintiff, who, claimed half of each of plots Nos 1 to 3 and entirety of plot No 4 made an application under Order 21, r 100 of the C P Code That application was dismissed on 8—7—1916 and in these terms "On the applicant's (plaintiff's) side he examined himself. The opposite party is ready It appears from the applicant's deposition that he is still in possession of the disputed plots of land. So here is no cause of action for his application under Order 21 Rule 100 Civil Procedure Code Hence it is ordered that this case be dismissed with costs to the opposite party Pleader's fees Rs 2 only" The plaintiff did not bring any suit for recovery of possession within a period of one year from the date of the last mentioned, namely 8th July 1916 His present suit was instituted on the 7th March 1918, that is more than a year after the date of the order passed on the application under Order 21 Rule 100 His cause of action, so far as the present suit is concerned has been formulated by him in paragraph (6) of his plaint and it appears therefore that after the date of the order passed on the application under Order 21, Rule 100 defendants Nos 1 to 5 entered into a conspiracy and forcibly cut and took away the paddy reaped by the Bhag tenants of the plaintiff and thereby dispossessed the plaintiff The plaintiff stated that thereupon he instituted a suit being suit numbered 225 of 1917 in the Court of the first Munsiff of Kantai That suit was, however allowed to be withdrawn by the Court, with liberty to institute a fresh suit and the present suit is the fresh suit which the plaintiff had the liberty to institute It was contended for the plaintiff that the subsequent dispossession alleged in para 6 of the plaint gave rise to the cause of action, after the suit had been withdrawn, for the present suit The defendant contended that the plaintiff not having brought the suit within the period prescribed by Art. 11 A of the Limitation Act, the present suit should be held to be barred by limitation. Held that the suit was not barred It is the question of possession with which the plaintiff was concerned and having remained in possession down to the date when, as alleged by him, he was dispossessed in the manner referred to in paragraph (6) of the plaint. He was not under any necessity, so far as we can see, to go to a Civil Court for the useless formality of asking for confirmation of possession of the property in question when as a matter of fact he remained in possession thereof (Ghose and Panton, JJ.) PAHAL GHORAI v HAJI MUNSHI FAZI UDDIN MAHOMED

—Arts 59 and 60—Loan—Deposit—Suit for recovery—Limitation

There is no distinction in the Limitation Act between money lent and money deposited with regard to the agreement to repay. So that it is not the agreement that the money should be payable on demand that distinguishes a deposit from a loan. There must be something further proved, and it is not possible to define exactly what that must be. It has sometime been suggested that facts must be proved which create a sort of fiduciary relationship between the lender and the borrower, but it cannot be said that it is always necessary. Ordinarily when A hands over money to B on the understanding that it is not a gift, but has to be repaid when demanded, that would be considered in law a loan, and when the plaintiff seeks to prove that the money so handed over was a deposit the onus would lie upon him to prove that there were additional circumstances which turned the loan into a deposit 19 B 775 referred to, (Macleod, C J and Crump, J) GOVIND CHINTAMAN v KACHUBHAI 25 Bom L R 503

LIMITATION ACT (IX OF 1908), ART 75

An instalment bond provided that on default of payment of any instalment, the whole claim could be enforced or if the creditor liked to waive such right. There was no payment at all made, some of the instalments were recovered by suit and for the rest a suit was filed more than 3 days from the first default, but within 3 years of the time at which the earliest of the instalments claimed fell due. Held, the filing of the prior suit amounted to a waiver of his rights to claim the full amount and the cause of action for the second suit arose only when the earliest of the instalments claimed fell due. Under a mortgage executed in 1902 the principal sum borrowed was Rs 1,200 and the sum was made payable in annual instalments of 100 rupees each. On default of payment of every one instalment the whole of the balance was to be paid at once. In the years 1903 and 1904 the mortgagors paid Rs 44 only. In 1923 the mortgagees filed a suit to recover the amount of the first two instalments and obtained a decree. Under a mortgage the period fixed for redemption was 12 years but the mortgagor was to pay interest annually. In case of default it was open to the mortgagee either to add the interest due to the principal and charge compound interest or to sue for the principal at once. Held, that the bond fell under art 80 read with art 116 of the Lim Act and time began to run against the mortgagee from the date of the first default in payment of interest. Consequently a suit for sale on the mortgage or for a simple money decree against the mortgagor brought beyond the first date of first default, would be barred by limitation. be paid within a period of 7 years. The bond further provided that the lender would have the liberty to demand the repayment of the entire sum due under the bond on the happening of default in payment of the interest due for any two consecutive years. There was a default in payment of interest for 2 consecutive years. In a suit on the bond it was contended that it was barred by limitation. Held that the suit was governed by art 80 and not by art 68 of the Lim Act. The creditor under the terms of the bond acquired merely an option to recall the whole of the money due thereunder on the happening of default in payment of the interest for 2 consecutive years and the breach of the original promise for the repayment of the money within 7 years gave another remedy to him to enforce at the end of that period. —Art 85—Mutual open and current account—Meaning of

It is well settled that an open account is one which is continuous or current, uninterrupted or unclosed, by settlement or otherwise consisting of a series of transactions. A current account has been held to be an open or running account between two or more parties, or an account which contains items between the parties from which the balance due to one of them is or can be ascertained. Mutual accounts are accounts which show reciprocity of dealings between the parties and do not embrace those having item on one side only though made up of debits and credits. —Art 85—Mutual open and current account—Limitation for suit on.

Under art 85 of the Lim Act the Court has to consider whether the account between the parties was mutual, open and current indicating reciprocal demands between the parties. It is not essential that the balance should in fact have been in favour of one party at some stage. It is enough if the dealings are such that the balance might

The fact that the balance of an account was always in favour of the same party does not prevent the account from being mutual. The test is the intention of the parties (Hallifax, A C J) PANDURANG v KALLUDAS. 1923 Nag 108

—Art 85—Mutual, current and open accounts—Test of

In order that accounts might be mutual within the meaning of Art 85 of the Limitation Act there must be transactions on each side, creating independent obligations on the other, and not merely transactions which create obligations on the one side, those on the other being merely complete or partial discharges of such obligation. If there may be a balance in favour of either party it follows that there must be mutual liabilities of both parties to each other, if however the balance is always in favour of one party in the very nature of the transactions, then there is no case of separate mutual dealings and art 85 will not apply 6 C L J 158 toll (Schwabe, C J and Wallace, J) THURUTHELLAKATH T P KUNHI KUTTI ALI v KUNHAMMAD

—Art 85—Mutual open, and current account—Test of.

Mutual accounts are such as consist in reciprocity of dealings between the parties and do not embrace those having items on one side only though made up of debits or credits. Where the account in this case shows dealings between the parties which amounted to mutual debits and credits on both sides so that sometimes the balance was in favour of one party and sometimes of the other, the case comes within art. 85 of the Lim Act. It is not necessary that there must have been a shifting balance, but it must be shown that was a possible and likely incident of the mutual transactions with regard to which the account was kept (Kulwant Sahay and Foster, JJ) FYZABAD BANK, LTD v RAM DAYAL. 4 Pat L T 571 74 I C, 831 rise to reciprocal demand from time to time. The accounts were never settled.

Held, the fact that the agent for his own convenience totalled up the position and made entries of the result in each firm's books did not close the account. Where a principal sues his agent for recovery of money received by the agent on his behalf and not accounted for, the suit is governed by Art. 89 of the Limitation Act and where the agency is continuous, the period of limitation starts from the date when the agent refuses to account for the moneys. A suit by the principal against his agent for damages caused by the agent's breach of duty or negligence is governed by Art 90 of the Limitation Act, and the starting point of limitation is the date when the breach of duty or negligence comes to the knowledge of the principal. When the hand that receives and the hand that pays is the same no suit will lie for payment. When there is no one competent to sue there can be no cause of action and consequently limitation can not run, because there is no one against whom it can run.

Usually arrears of rent become due, within the meaning of Art 110 of the Limitation Act, at the end of each fash year. But a different time may in certain circumstances be the time from which limitation begins to run. In a case in which there was no one to whom the arrears were payable and who was capable of enforcing the obligation by suit, held that there was no cause of action in existence and the arrears became due, within the meaning of the article, only as soon as there was some one to whom they were payable.

In a case in which a Devasthanam was the melvaramdar, and a Mutt the kudiwaramdar held that there was no cause of action in existence for a suit to recover arrears of rent from the Mutt, so long as the trusteeship of the temple and of the Mutt was vested in the same person and that for a suit for such arrears, time began to run only from the date on which a different person was appointed trustee of the temple (Phillips and Devadoss, JJ) SRIMATH DEIVASIKHAMONY NATARAJA DESIKAR v. ## LIMITATION ACT (IX OF 1908), ART 118.

—Art 116—Registered Sale—Breach of covenant for title—Suit for damages—Limitation—Starting point.

A registered deed of sale executed in 1905 by two persons, after reciting the receipt of consideration therefor, stated "If there is any dispute in respect of the property by relations and others, etc we shall settle them at our own expense and we shall be bound to carry out this sale without obstruction." The son of one of the vendors sued to set aside the sale as regards the share of his father and obtained a decree in 1913 for possession of that share. In a suit by the vendee in 1917 within 2 years from the date of dispossession in pursuance of the decree of 1913 for the recovery of the part of the purchase money corresponding to the share of the property recovered from him Held that, assuming that the clause in the sale-deed set out above did not amount to a covenant for quiet enjoyment there was clearly a covenant for title and on breach of that covenant that vendee had 6 years to sue under art 116 of the Lim Act from the date when the covenant was broken and that the suit was not barred (Kumaraswami Sastri and Devadoss, JJ) SISTLA SUBBAYYA v PATA PICHANNA. 1923 Mad 28

Where the reversioners of a deceased Hindu allow a suit for a declaration against the adoption of a daughter's son to become barred by time under art 118, they are not entitled to sue for a declaration that a subsequent gift to the adopted son is not binding upon them because that gift does not give them a fresh cause of action, in that it does not involve any further denial of the rights of reversioners then was involved in setting up the adoption in the first place (Leslie Jones and Abdul Raoof, JJ) KHUSHAL SINGH v NANDA 5 Lah L J 63.

—Art 118—Declaration without further relief of possession—Adoption alleged to be void

A suit for a declaration that an adoption under a registered deed was null and invalid and for a further declaration that the plaintiff was a reversioner is governed by Art 118, even when the adoption is alleged to be void ab initio. Had the plaintiff been suing for possession on the ground that he was the reversioner and had he further alleged that the adoption was invalid under the Hindu Law, Art 118 would not have been applicable and the plaintiff would have had twelve years within which to sue. —Arts. 120 and 62—Pliff's use—Claim for profits recovered by deft

The plaintiffs were the owners of a village named Ghola while the defendant No 1 and the deft No 3 were the owners of a contiguous Mouzah called Kangore. The deft No 3 owned 5/6th of Mouzah Kangore and the deft No 1 1/6th of the share. Sometime in 1907 there was a dispute between the deft No 3 and the pliffs, predecessor-in interest with regard to some lands one party alleging that the lands appertained to Ghola. The lands were attached under S 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and remained under attachment up to the year 1916. In consequence several suits were brought by the deft No 3 for the establishment of his right to these lands and the dispute between the deft No. 3 and the pliffs terminated in a compromise. In the meantime the defendant No 1 withdrew from the collectorate certain sums of money representing his share of the profits of the lands which had been attached as appertaining to Mouzah Kangore on various dates, e. 11th May 1913, 19th June 1913, 7th January 1916 and 18th January 1916. —Arts 130 and 131—Right to levy assessment—Limitation claim that tenancy is rent free

Art 130 of the Limitation Act can have no application unless and until the land is found to be rent free, the mere non-payment of rent for a period does not bar the landlord's right to have the rent assessed and to recover rent from his rent Where the suit is not for the resumption or assessment of rent free land, but for the assessment of mal land presumably liable to be assessed, the circumstances that rent has not in fact been paid for more than 12 years before suit is not per se sufficient to support a decree of dismissal The right to have rent assessed must continue so long as the relationship of landlord and tenant continued in respect of land liable to be assessed. The right can only be lost by one or other of the modes recognised by law The right to levy assessment upon rent free land is governed by Art 130 and is consequently extinguished if no suit to enforce the right is instituted within the time allowed On the other hand under Art 131, the right to levy assessment, would, as a recurring right accrue when there has been a demand and refusal, only in those cases where the relationship of landlord and tenant or landlord and occupant had ever existed Once the right is established, then the non payment of rent or assessment would not be sufficient to enable the tenant to begin to set up a title by adverse possession There must be some overt act such as refusal to pay the rent or assessment, before time begins to run Case law reviewed, (Mo'kerye and Chotzner, JJ) AKBAR SAHAR v RAMESH CHANDRA MOITRA 38 C. der the bond with interest thereon at 2 per cent per mensem, without waiting for the future instalment falling due. The plaintiff alleged that the first instalment was duly paid and the instalment for 1309 to 1311 together with interest thereon were paid and accepted although the payments were made out of time and the suit was brought for the subsequent instalments. The main defence was that the suit was barred by limitation. Held (1) that it is a general rule that where money is payable by instalments with a provision that the whole of the money will become due on default of payment of one of the instalments, the money becomes due when default is made in any of the instalments. (2) An exception has been engrafted upon the general rule in certain cases, viz., that if the right to enforce payment of the whole sum due upon the default being made in payment of an instalment has been waived by subsequent payment of the overdue instalment on the one hand receipt on the other, then the penalty having been waived, the parties are admitted to the same position as they would have been in if no default had occurred. (3) The payment and acceptance of overdue instalments in the present case constituted a waiver and the plaintiff was entitled to recover the subsequent instalments. It has no application to a case of simple mortgage. — Arts. 134 and 144—Execution sale of trust property for personal debts of trustee—Limitation for recovery of trust property.

The purchaser of trust property in execution of a personal decree against the trustee is clearly within the terms of the exception to S 10 of the Lim. Where there is nothing to indicate that the predecessors of the defendants had acted in bad faith in taking a transfer of property which was subject to a mortgage Art 134 of the Lim Act protects a purchaser in the above circumstances from a claim by the mortgagor unless the claim is brought within 12 years from the date of the transfer. A transfer by a mortgagee does not stand on the same footing as a transfer by a trustee. Where there is valuable consideration, the question of good faith is practically immaterial in the latter case on account of S 64 of the Trusts Act. But where the transferee from a mortgagee purchases in similar circumstances, without having any notice that the transferor had any higher interest than that of mortgagee, Art 134 protects him from a claim by the mortgagor. Art 141 of the Lim Act has no application where a Hindu or Mahomedan female had possession of an absolute estate. Art 144 of the Lim Act applies to a suit for possession on the death of such female (Kanhayyalal, J C and Dalal, A J C) CHAUDHRANZARIF-UN-NISA v CHAUDHRI SHAFIQ-UZ ZAMAN 26 O C 133 75 I C. 626

—Art, 141—Onus of proof

Art 141 Lim Act is inapplicable when time has once commenced to run against the last full owner, as in such a case, it continues to run and is not suspended or in any way affected by the mere circumstance that the owner is succeeded by a female entitled to a woman's qualified estate. After the statutory period has run out all persons claiming through the owner are barred. The Article makes it clear, that the reversioner has 12 years after the death of a Hindu or Mahomedan female to establish his right as heir to the last full owner and it lies upon the party in possession to prove that he has got a better title (Macleod, C J and Crump, J) PANDURANG v, BASAPPA 1923 Bom 364.

LIMITATION ACT (IX OF 1908), ART 142

Once limitation begins to run it does not stop except in the cases specially provided for by the Lim Act. In 1894 plaintiff's father sued for a declaration that certain alienations by a Hindu widow were invalid but the suit was dismissed on the ground that there was a nearer reversioner one Balusamy. On the death of the widow in 1897 Balusamy sued for possession but his suit was dismissed in 1916 on the ground that his adoption was invalid and he was not a reversioner. Plff sued for possession in 1919.

Held, that the suit was barred by limitation. It could not be said that at any time the plaintiff's right was satisfied and that on account of the annulment of that satisfaction a fresh cause of action arose. 12 M I A 244, 43 M 815, 35 C 209; 43 C 660 Dist (Phillips and Ramesam, JJ) RANGANATH RAO v RAMA PANDITHAR, 44 M L J 87, 70 I C 446, 1923 M 108.

—Art, 142—Adverse possession—Onus of proof.

In a case where the suit is resisted on the ground of acquisition of title by prescription it is not for the plaintiff to prove his title within 12 years. It is for the defendant to prove his adverse proprietary title. 39 Mad 670, 17 A L J 84, Foll (Gokul Prasad, J) RAGHA MAI v ABDUS SATTAR, 74 I C 879, 1923 A 565.

—Art 142—Burden of proof

In 1915 when a survey party came to measure the fields it was found that the defendants were in actual possession of more than half of the land and in excess of the moiety shown under the paper title. Held that there being no evidence at all to shew at what period the discrepancy in area between the title deeds and the actual occupation crept in, plaintiff must prove that the discrepancy arose within the last 12 years (Marten, J) KASHINATH GIANOBA v GANESH SITARAM, 1923 Bom 361.

—Arts 142 and 144—Discontinuance of possession—Submerision and reappearance of land—Rights of true owner—Trespasser—Interruption of possession

Where land becomes submerged it is constructively in the possession of its lawful owner. Consequently where a trespasser has been in possession of lands which at intervals of 4 or 5 years become submerged, there is an interruption of the possession of the trespasser and a revival of the possession of the true owner during the period of submerision. Consequently the trespasser's possession is not continuous and he cannot acquire a title by adverse possession (Gokul Prasad and Sulaiman, JJ) RAM NAIN MISIR v DEBKI MISIR, 69 I C 912, 1923 A 75.

—Art, 142—Dispossession—Meaning of—Discontinuance.

Art 142 of the Lim Act refers to dispossession or discontinuance of possession. Dispossession implies the coming in of a person and his driving out another from possession. Discontinuance of possession implies the going out of the person in — Art, 144—Delivery of symbolical possession—Adverse possession—Onus.

A trespasser cannot tack his own possession to possession of the previous trespasser for purposes of limitation. But where a trespasser sells his claim to possession to a purchaser, that purchaser is entitled to tack the previous possession to his own possession for purposes of limitation and each subsequent purchaser of the claim or right to possession would have the similar right to tack the previous periods of his predecessors in-title (Lentaigne, J) MA MI v HADJI MAHO MED, 1 Rang 176, 75 I C 81, 1923 Rang 261.

On the failure of an owner to pay the Government assessment, his estate or interest in the land is forfeited or rather determined, and under a sale for arrears of revenue what is sold is not the interest of the defaulting owner but the interest of the Crown, subject to the payment of the government assessment, and therefore the time limited by the Limitation act only commences to run from the date of the sale.

Delivery of symbolical possession does not in any way affect the possession of, or give start to a fresh period of limitation against persons who are not parties to a suit or execution proceedings. This rule is applicable to the case of purchasers at sales for arrears of revenue.

In cases governed by article 144, if the plaintiff has succeeded in proving a clear title, the burden lies on the defendant to prove adverse possession for the statutory period, and possession to be adverse must have all the qualities of adequacy, continuity and exclusiveness (Mookerjee and Chotener, JJ) JOBEDA KHATUN v TULSI CHARAN DAS 1923 Cal. 82.

— Arts 144 and 148—Denial of title of mortgagor—Effect

It is not open, to a mortgagee by denying the existence of a mortgage to curtail the period of limitation provided for a suit for redemption. Once a mortgage comes into existence it continues to subsist as a mortgage until the period for its redemption expires despite any attempt made by the mortgagee to deny the existence of that mortgage or set up an adverse title in himself. ## —Art 144—Right of fishery—Nature of—Acquisition—Limitation.

A right of fishery of whatever nature is not strictly an easement. It is either an interest in immoveable property or a profit a prendre which may be either in gross or appurtenant to a dominant tenement.

The question of acquisition of such rights must be determined by reference to the nature of the right claimed and proved to have been exercised. If it is a mere right to fish not excluding the lawful owner it would appear to be an easement within the description of the word in the Limitation Act and can be acquired by 20 years' uninterrupted enjoyment. If it is an exclusive right of fishery it is an interest in immoveable property and can be acquired by 12 years' adverse possession involving an ouster of the rightful owner. Such a right contains all the essential elements of property and even if it may properly be described as a profit a prendre, it has also the distinctive features of an interest in immoveable property. Even if S 26 of the Limitation Act applies, it would not bar the operation of Art 144 and S 28 if the right came under both descriptions (Miller, C J. and Mullick, J) MESSRS HENRY HILL & Co v SHEORAJ RUI

———Arts 148 and 144—Mortgage—Co mortgagors—Redemption by one—Suit for possession by the others—Limitation

A comortgagor redeeming the whole mortgage does not become a mortgagee of the portion redeemed belonging to other co owners, but becomes merely a charge holder, and art 148 of the Lim Act refers only to a suit against a mortgagee and has no application to a suit against a charge holder. The rule that ordinarily one cosharer cannot hold adversely against another cosharer proceeds upon a rebuttable presumption that the cosharer in exclusive possession is holding on behalf of the other cosharers. This presumption is rebutted when it is shown that the cosharer in possession denies the right of the other cosharers to enter into joint possession until they have paid to him their share of a charge upon the property which he has defrayed, (Campbell, J) WAZIR v GIRDHARI 71 I C. 847 1923 Lah 311

———Arts 148 and 144—Scope—Record of rights—Evidentiary value

Art. 148 provides for a suit against a mortgagee to redeem or to recover possession of immoveable property mortgaged. This suit must be governed by Art. 144 and not by Art 148. The possession of the Defendants co-mortgagors, as alienors does not, in any way, contradict the ulterior proprietary right of the Plaintiffs mortgagors. — Art 181—Decree for redemption—Right of mortgagor to deposit money at any time

The position of a mortgagor who has obtained a decree is very different from that of a mortgagor who still has to bring a suit. In the latter case all sorts of defences may be pleaded and it may be found that his right is barred by limitation or by renunciation or that the claimant is not in fact the legal representative of the original mortgagors or that the integrity of the mortgage has been broken. In fact until a decree has been passed there is no certainty whether or under what conditions he may be entitled to recover the property but once he has got a decree in his favour his right is definite, ascertained and final, subject only to his depositing the money. The manner in which a redemption decree is to be enforced is not a mere matter of procedure but a question of right. The right of a mortgagor to deposit the money under a decree visi is a continuing right which may be exercised at any time until an order absolute is passed and an application to deposit the money is not governed by Art 181 of the Limitation Act (Daniels, A J C.) RAM RUP v GHANI AHMAD

It is quite clear that an application for making a conditional decree passed by consent, absolute would be governed by the general Art 181 which applies to all applications for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in the Limitation Act or by Sec 48, C P. —Art 182—Execution—Partition decree—Decree not drawn up owing to delay in furnishing stamp papers—Time for execution

Under the Stamp Act a decree for partition is chargeable with duty to the amount prescribed by Art 45 of Schedule I of the Act and the expense of providing the proper stamp is to be borne by the parties to the decree in such proportions as the Court directs. The result is, that a decree for partition is not formally drawn up until paper bearing the proper stamp is supplied to the Court. The decree is then engrossed on the stamp paper and signed by the Judge. A decree for partition was signed by the Judge on the 2nd January 1920, no stamped paper having been furnished till on or shortly before that date. The judgment was pronounced on 25-3-1914. The delay in signing the decree was due not to any fault of the Court or to any cause beyond the control of the parties but solely to the delay of the parties in supplying the requisite stamped paper. Held, that the circumstances disclose no ground for saying that limitation did not run from the date of the decree as provided in Art 182 of the Limitation Act. The orders of a District Magistrate under part 2 of the Indian Lunacy Act with respect to the reception, care and treatment of lunatics are executive and not judicial in their nature and are not open to revision by the High Court. MADRAS ACT (I of 1876), Ss 2 and 6—Permanently Settled estate—Suit for separate registry Refusal—Grounds for

Lands in a permanently settled estate had been granted by the then Zemindar to the predecessor in title of the defendants on a small kattubadi and subsequently even the kattubadi was remitted for ever. The present Zemindar on the refusal of the Collector to order separate registry, instituted a suit against defendants for the said relief. The Court below dismissed the suit holding that the effect of the apportionment would be to impose a new burden on the defendants not imposed by the original grantor. Held, on appeal that the circumstance relied on was no ground for refusing relief to the plaintiff. If there was any understanding that the grantor should himself pay the assessment imposed on lands after separate registration that would be a matter of contract between the grantor and the grantee and by paying the assessment the grantees would be able to recover the amount from the grantor. The expression "taking part in a ballot" in Rule IV of the Rules under the Mad. District Municipalities Act includes presiding at the meeting of councillors for the election of a Municipal Chairman conducting the ballot, opening the box and counting votes. The expression is not confined to the mere act of voting. The word "chairman" in S 28 of the Act includes "Chairman Delegate" in cases where there is no vice-chairman. A chairman seeking re-election is incompetent to preside at a meeting of the council for election of a chairman, and where there is no Vice Chairman he should appoint a Chairman Delegate who under S 28 of the Act would preside at the meeting. Where instead of so doing the Chairman himself presided, it is a clear breach of the election rules. But the election will not be invalid on that ground unless the result has been materially affected by the breach of the rules. Where therefore the lower court set aside an election of a chairman, on the ground that he presided at a meeting of the council for election of the chairman, though he was himself seeking re-election without inquiring whether the illegality affected the result of the election, the High Court reversed the case for such enquiry and decision.  in inam—Mouza—Presumption—Grant of both the warams

The grant of a whole village in inam will not be presumed to be the grant only of melwaram interest unless it is shown that the kudiwaram interest was already in the hands of some one else than the donee. The mere fact that there were about 300 inhabitants in the village after the date of the grant is not proof that at the date of the grant there were any tenants in the village holding lands with any right of occupancy by custom or otherwise. The use of the expression mouza does not necessarily import the meaning that there were occupancy tenants on the land,

An inam within the ambit of the Pittapur Estate was granted by the then Zamindar of Pittapur to the plaintiff's ancestors under a sanad and a chekunama dated 22-6-1800. The grant was made free of kattubadi and purported to be sarwadumbala or absolute. The plaintiff assigned an interest in his holding to 1st defendant under a document dated 20-1-13 and described as a Thirumanam document which provided that, in accordance with a prior agreement, the property which had been placed in 1st defendant's possession in 1910-11 should remain in it until the end of the year 1917-18 in consideration of a cash payment of Rs 160 at the date of the prior agreement aforesaid and other subsequent payments on plaintiff's behalf, in all Rs 1,280, and that 1st defendant should 'pay all dues other than extra taxes, which might be levied hereafter,' and should at the end of the term 'surrender without any relinquishment.' There was no evidence of any advances prior to those enumerated in the Thirumanam document of 1913, and those enumerated in the said document of the cash payment of Rs 160 were made, after and when the prior agreement was executed, and the former after possession had been given. There was no power of sale and no provision for accounting.
 In 1912 the Revenue Officer engaged in the preparation of a record of rights for the 2nd defendant's (Pittapur) estates under the Madras Estates Land Act entered 1st defendant as occupancy ryot in respect of the holding instead of plaintiff. In a suit by the plaintiff for declaration

MAD ESTATES LAND ACT (I OF 1908), S 3

that the 1st defendant was not an occupancy tenant of his inam, held

(1) That the Thirumanan document was a lease within S 105 of the Transfer of Property Act, and not a mortgage with possession,

(2) that the 1st defendant was not a ryot within S 3, Cl (15) of the Estates Land Act,

(3) that the suit inam was not a part of the Pittapur Estate but a presettlement inam excluded from the assets of that Zamindari and did not fall under S 2 (3), (d) as it was not a whole village and plaintiff was not a landholder under S 3, Cls (2) and (5) of the Estates Land Act

The word "payable" in S 3 Cl (1) of the Estates Land Act means "payable according to the terms of the contract between the parties to it," and Cls (1) and 15 are applicable whatever the stage or stages at which those terms, so far as they relate to payment for the use of the land, have to be or have been to be fulfilled. The payments in consideration of which the Thirumanan document was given were "rent" within the meaning of S 3 Cl, (1) notwithstanding that the only payment contemplated were those to be made in future after the beginning of and in the course of the relation between ryot and landholder.

Lands in respect of which the Zamindars purported to make grants either absolute or subject to a Small Kattubadi are "Iakhiraj lands (or lands exempt from the payment of public revenue and all other lands paying only favourable quit rents" within the meaning of S 4 of Regulation XXV of 1802 (Oldfield and Ramesam, JJ) KOPPI REDDI NOKAYYA v MANDALEKKA BHEEMANNA

—S 13 (3)—Waram systems—Right of landlord to revert to—Muchilika—Construction—Enhancement of rent—Distraint—Suit to set aside—Decision as to propriety or tender of patta

The landholder is entitled to revert to the waram system unless the ryots establish that it has been superseded permanently by the cash system by contract, express or implied, between them and the landholder.

Where there is evidence to show that the tenure was a waram tenure to start with, evidence is not necessary to prove that this is the prevailing tenure unless the presumption that the tenure was a waram tenure is rebutted by the ryot

Evidence of money payments for several years at varying rates under specific contracts in term-pattas for stated periods does not warrant the inference that waram system was permanently given up

The decision in ryot's suit to set aside a distraint that a tender of patta was not a proper tender operates as res judicata in a suit by the landholder under S 77 of the Estates Land Act as regards the question of propriety of that tender.

Aman system means waram system and a provision in a muchilika by which after the expiry of the period under it the ryots undertake to cultivate the lands under "pathukattu muchilikas under the Aman rules" amounts to an agreement by the ryots to revert to the waram system after the expiry of the period fixed in the muchilika.

Under the waram the landholder is entitled to a share in all the produce of the land unless there is a special contract to the contrary exempting any particular crop. His claims to share in all the crops cannot be looked upon as an enhancement of rent within the meaning of S 13 (3) of that Act (Spencer and Krishnan, JJ) VARADA REDDI v SRINIVASA MUDALIAR

A landholder claimed to recover rent at wet rates from his tenant for land which the latter had cultivated wet in consequence of improvements made at his own expense. The plaintiff claimed wet rates on the strength of a contract of the year 1885 before the passing of the Madras Estates Land Act. The improvements were made after the Act was passed. Held, in the circumstances the plaintiff was not entitled to rely on his contract with reference to S. 13 (3) of the Estates Land Act. The intention of the Legislature was to refuse to contracts made before, equally with contracts made after the passing of the Act any effect in the relation between the ryots and the landholder, (*Schwabe, C. The appellant presented under S 420, Cr P, C a jail appeal to the High Court which was dismissed under S 481, Cr P C as out of time by a learned Judge, sitting as Vacation Judge. On the re-opening of the Court the appellant presented another appeal through counsel against the same conviction and sentence, which was admitted by the same learned Judge. Held, that the decision on the prior appeal was a bar to the subsequent appeal being heard on the merits. Even if the subsequent appeal could be treated as an application for the revision of the previous decision, neither S 439, Cr P Code nor any other provision empowered the High Court to revise the judgment of one or more of its own judges.

The admission of the subsequent appeal could not be treated as a setting aside by the learned Judge of his prior order and as a re-opening of the case on its merits, because the learned Judge was admittedly not at the time aware of his prior order.

The Bench hearing the subsequent appeal apart from the fact that it was constituted differently, had no power to review the prior order. The Code does not confer any such power. The High Court has no inherent power of review in such cases, and the existence of such a power cannot be inferred from the position of the High Court as a Court of Record.

The dismissal of the prior appeal by the Vacation Judge could not be treated as a nullity on the strength of the notification regarding his sittings, which was to the effect that he would dispose of "urgent applications which require to be heard immediately." The notification must not be regarded as more than a general statement of the powers which the Vacation Judge ordinarily will exercise, and cannot be read as derogating from those, which in virtue of statute and rules he possesses and of which he cannot consistently with them, be deprived. And under S 108 of the Government of India Act and High Court Appellate side Rules No 4 and No 1 (i) (f) the vacation judge was competent to dismiss the prior appeal.

Per Devadoss, J—Quaere, Whether a Criminal Appeal or Revision Petition can be dismissed for default of appearance.

When a criminal appeal or revision petition is dismissed without hearing there is no judgment at all and the learned Judge or the Bench which disposed of the matter for default of appearance can rehear the matter. (Oldfield and Devadoss, JJ) K. KUNHAMAD HAJI In re 46 Mad 382

MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT S 57.

When the Local Boards Act 1920 came into force it was decided to bifurcate the existing Taluk Board at Negapatam and to provide a Taluk Board for each Revenue Taluk under S 6 of the Act which requires that there should be a Taluk Board constituted for each Taluk, the Government having the power under S 4 to declare by a notification any part of a District to be a Taluk. It was consequently decided to have one Taluk Board for the Revenue Taluk of Negapatam (and another for Nannilam) in order to effect this bifurcation the necessary notifications were published in the Fort St George Gazette. The District Board of Tanjore resolved that the the Negapatam Taluk Board to be twenty. The Government by notification appointed 19 persons to be members of the taluk Board, Negapatam, while a twentieth member had not been appointed, the nineteen members elected a President on the 21st August, 1922. The Subordinate Judge having held that the election of the President was invalid for the reason that there were only 19 members in the re-constituted Taluk Board of Negapatam at the time of election, held, in revision that the High Court has power to revise the order of the Subordinate Judge notwithstanding that R 12 cl 3 of the rules to the conduct of enquiries and the decision of disputes relating to election declared to be final 44 M. L J 1 followed 16 L. W 827 dissented from

Held also that the order of the Subordinate Judge was erroneous. It is the Local Boards Act and the notifications of Government that constitute the Taluk Board and not the appointment of members. —Dower—Lien in favour of widow—Transfer of debt and the property—Transfer of the property without the debts—Rights of transferee—Death of widow—Effect of merger

Where a Mahomedan widow in possession of her husband's property "in lieu of dower" transfers the security, either with or without the dower debt, the transferee is entitled to retain possession of the property until the dower debt is paid, though, where the transfer is without the privity of the persons bound to discharge the dower debt, the transferee takes the security subject to the state of account between the widow and the persons bound to discharge the dower debt at the date of the transfer and any payment made by these persons to the widow after, but without notice of the transfer must, in the absence of collusion be allowed to these persons, as against the transferee.

But the case is different where there is a sale of the property and not an assignment of the security. The right to hold the property as a security for the dower debt and to continue in possession thereof until the dower debt is satisfied is property, and is both heritable and transferable 43 A, 127, 32 A 551, 43 Mad 214 Ref.

But the widow has no proprietary title in the property, except to the extent of her share therein and where she purports to sell the property and not the security only, the sale is utterly ineffectual so as to confer any title on the vendee. But though the vendee takes no title to the property by virtue of the sale, he is entitled to retain possession of the property, if he is put in possession thereof, not indeed by virtue of the deed of sale, but because, so long as the debt remains unsatisfied, the heirs at law could not claim to be put in possession of the property and the widow herself would be bound to make good her representation to the vendee to the extent of such interest as she could lawfully transfer. The widow is entitled to retain possession of the property so long as her claim is not satisfied. There is nothing to prevent her from putting some one else in possession of the property and conferring on him the same right which she could exercise over the property. Having done so, she could not maintain ejectment against him if she has received consideration for the transaction, and it follows that, though the sale does not operate to confer any title on the vendee, he is still entitled to retain possession of the property as against the widow and all persons claiming through the widow, so long as there is a debt due to the widow. He is also entitled to maintain his possession of the property as against the heirs at law so long as they do not discharge the dower debt.

Where therefore a Mahomedan widow in possession of her husband's property as a security for her dower debt, purports to sell the property and put the vendee in possession of the property, the vendee is entitled to retain possession of the property so long as her claim to the dower remains unsatisfied. But the moment the dower debt is satisfied either by payment to the widow or to her heirs, the heirs of the husband are entitled to recover possession of the property from the transferee, and the same result follows where the heirs of the widow happen to be heirs of her husband, for in such an event the right to receive the dower debt and the liability to pay the dower debt unite in the same persons, and there is consequently an extinction both of the debt and security and therefore of the right to retain possession of the property as a security for the debt. To prove the tabli-lishhad in a claim for pre-emption, it is enough if the court believes the statement of the plaintiff that he made the demand in the presence of witness as required by law. The witnesses themselves need not be called. The fact that two demands were made at one and the same time regarding two separate transfers does not make them illegal (Rafique and Lindsay, J.) SAYAD AMJAD ALI v SAYAD WAJID ALI 1923 All 487

—Pre-emption—Second demand—Validity

Mahomedan Law requires that the second demand for pre-emption should be made either in the presence of the vendor or vendee or on the property that is the subject of pre-emption. The singular words 'vendor' and 'vendee' include the plural also. According to the interpretation of the Mahomedan Lawyers, if the demand is made neither in the presence of vendor nor on the property sought to be pre-empted but in the presence of the vendee then in case there are more than one vendee the demand should be made in the presence of all, (Rafique and Lindsay, JJ.) ALIMAN BEGAM v ALI HUSAIN

Religious office Sajjadanashin—Mutwalli—Right of females

No doubt the origin of the rule that a woman is not qualified to perform the functions of sajjadanashin is based upon the consideration that it is unseemly for a Mahomedan lady to perform duties which bring her in close and intimate association with the general public of the opposite sex, but there seems to be no reason why the disqualification should be confined only to those cases in which the office requires that spiritual instruction should be given by a teacher to his disciples. Whatever may have been the exact nature of the objections upon which the disqualification of a woman to act as sajjadanashin was originally based it would appear to have become a settled rule at the present day that no woman is qualified to become a sajjadanashin whose office involves the performance of religious and spiritual duties, not only those of puimuridi but those of reading the fateha and offering prayers and incense in a place of public worship.

The *mutwalli*ship appertained to the office of the sajjadanashin and as that office required certain personal qualifications which cannot be performed by proxy the question did not arise in the present case whether a female could be appointed mutwalli delegating the performance of religious office to a proxy (Miller, C J and Kulwant Sahay, J) BIBI KANIZ ZOHRA v SAIED MUZTABA HUSAIN 1923 Pat 241 4 Pat L T 613

The burden of proving a valid dedication to public religious uses of certain property is on those who assert it. A dedication could not be presumed merely from the facts that a saint was buried at a particular place and that urs had been held at the tomb on his death anniversary. ———Waqf—Dedication—Validity of—Power of sale saved to donor

The reservation of a power to sell and transfer the property during her life time by the dedicator derogates from the nature of the grant. Such a condition is inconsistent with a valid wakf which must be certain as to the property appropriated and at the same time unconditional, and not subject to an option. There might be a reservation of the annual profit of the donor for her life but a provision empowering the donor to sell and appropriate the proceeds thereof for his own or other's benefit, would make the settlement invalid. 6 B 42, 16 A L J 841 Ref (Gokul Prasad and Kanhaiya Lal, JJ) AMIRUDDIN v MUZAFFAR-UL-HASAN, 45 All, 107 69 I C, 641 1923 A 55

The mere charge upon the profits of the estate of certain items which must in the course of time necessarily cease, being confined to one family, and which after the lapse will leave the whole property intact for the original purposes for which the endowment was made does not render the endowment invalid under the Muhammadan Law. Where there was admittedly an ultimate dedication of the entire property to religious and charitable uses, the weight of authority is entirely in favour of the validity of the wakf (Ryvs and Daniels, JJ) *MD. ## MAHOMEDAN LAW.

———Waqf—Essentials of—Shiah law—Completion of the trust—English law

There are four essential requisites on which depends the validity of the waqf (1) that it must be perpetual, (2) it must not be contingent, (3) that possession must be given of the thing dedicated, or more properly, the properties should cease to be the properties of the donor, and (4) that the right of the donor should be entirely divested therefrom. It is however, recognised in Shia Law that it is lawful for the waqif to constitute himself or herself the mutwalli, and that, in such a case, a formal change of possession is out of the question, and that all that is required is, not actual delivery of possession, but a change in the character of possession

The Shia Law differs from the English Law on the question of the completion of the trust, though they agree in this that where the trust was in the first instance created, the Court will enforce it and will not enter into the question whether the trust was acted upon. In England, transmutation of possession is not, whereas in Shia Law it is, an essential pre-requisite to the creation of the trust. In England, if the settlor purposes to convert himself into a trustee, then the trust is perfectly created as soon as the settlor has executed an express declaration of the trust intended to be final or binding on him. In Shia Law, the waqif must still show that he has changed the character of his possession (Das and Adams, JJ) MT BIBI KANIZ ZAINAB v SYED MOBARAK HOSSAIN 72 I C 748.

Thattans in North Malabar following Makhathayam Law—Partition suit—Partibility of property—Presumption—Onus of proof Veetukutti—Right to share in joint family property—Basis of Presumption

In the case of the Thattan caste in North Malabar, which caste follows Makhathayam Law, the ordinary Hindu Law has in the first instance to be applied, unless and until proof of custom to the contrary is established. Under Makhathayam Law, as under the ordinary Hindu Law, partibility is the rule and impartibility is the exception.

Held, therefore, that in a suit for partition by a member of the Thattan caste in North Malabar, there was no presumption of law in favour of impartibility, and the onus of proving the same lay on the defendant.

MALABAR LAW

Evidence of witnesses to the effect that they had never known a case of partition does not afford in law sufficient proof of a valid custom of impartibility.

The mere fact that the plaintiff in such a suit is w at is known as a Veetukutti or the son of a Sambhandam wife, does not disentitle him to a share in the joint family property. Assuming he is illegitimate, he may claim to be a Sudra for the purposes of Hindu Law, and to be entitled to a share as in the case of an illegitimate son of Sudra under the ordinary Hindu Law, or he may rest his claim on the ground that his caste follows Sudra custom in the matter of the inheritance of an illegitimate child. If the Hindu Law for Sudras is to be applied to the plaintiff's caste, he will, prima facie even if illegitimate, be entitled to a share without further proof or disproof of that custom, while if the case is to rest on proof of a custom by which Sudra's custom is applied to his caste or on proof of independent custom altogether then such custom will have to be proved. —Damages—Suit for—Proof of malice—Reasonable belief—Privilege

As a rule, an action lies for the malicious publication of statements, which are false in fact and injurious to the character of another within certain limits, and the law considers such publications malicious, unless, it is fairly made by a person in the discharge of some public or private duty, whether legal or moral, or in the conduct of his own affairs in matters where his interest is concerned. In the latter class of cases the occasion prevents the inference of malice which the law draws from unauthorised communications and a qualified privilege attaches to the statement so made, if fairly warranted by any reasonable occasion or exigency and honestly made or made in good faith for common convenience and welfare of society. There are three elements necessary to make the defence of qualified privilege good, namely, the occasion must be fit, the matter must have reference to the occasion and it must be published from right motive. In deed, it is a duty which every one owes to society and to the state to assist in the investigation of any alleged misconduct and to promote the detection of any crime. When it comes to the knowledge of any one that a crime has been committed a duty is laid on him as a citizen of the country to state to the authorities what he knows respecting the commission of the crime, and if he states only what he knows and honestly believes, he cannot be subjected to an action of damages merely because it turns out that the person as to whom he has given the information is, after all not guilty of the crime. For the sake of public justice charges and communications which would otherwise be slanderous are protected, if bona fide made in the prosecution of enquiry into a suspected crime. Odgers on Libel Slander, p 272 (5th Edn) 5 W. —Suit for damages—Issues arising in the case—Nature of evidence necessary—Conviction by trial Court—Reversal on appeal

If in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution the plaintiff has been convicted in the first instance and ultimately acquitted on appeal, the presumption is against the absence of reasonable and probable cause unless the original conviction is proved to have proceeded on evidence known to the defendant to be false or on the wilful suppression by him of material information, 12 C L J. 410 foll. —————Suit for damages—Reasonable and probable cause—Malice—Proof of

To succeed in an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must allege and establish both (a) absence of reasonable and probable cause and (b) malice, and must fail altogether if he fails to establish both

An honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds, which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accused, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed

The malice necessary to be established is not, even malice in law, such as may be assumed from the intentional doing of a wrongful act, but malice in fact, malus animus indicating that the party was actuated either by spite or ill-will towards an individual or by indirect or improper motives though these may be wholly unconnected with any uncharitable feeling towards any body

In all these questions the burden of proof is on the plaintiff

If, in order to show the absence of reasonable and probable cause, there are minor questions which it is necessary to determine, the burden of proving each of those minor questions lies upon the plaintiffs, just as much as the burden of proving the whole does.

The test as to the burden or onus of proof, whichever term is used, is simply this to ask oneself which party will be successful if no evidence is given, or if no more evidence is given than has been given at a particular point of the case, for it is obvious that as the controversy involved in the litigation travels on the parties from moment to moment may reach points at which the tribunal will have to say that, if the case stops there it must be decided in a particular manner (Abdul Raoof and Campbell, JJ) ABDUL SHAKIR v LIPTON AND CO. 72 I C 411 1924 Lah. 1

—Contract—Equity—Misrepresentation

A Court would at least direct restitution by a minor of such part of the consideration of a void agreement which may be in his hands. Even in the case of innocent misrepresentation, the minor is bound to refund the property over which he has control. This liability attaches to a minor not on the ground of estoppel but on the ground that an infant shall not take advantage of his own fraud. If therefore a contract has been induced by a minor's false representations the contractual obligation is under no circumstances enforced against him but equity may compel him to restore any benefit received by him. If the property which the minor has obtained is still existing in specie he may be compelled to restore it but if he has obtained money which has probably been spent and there is no possibility of tracing it and therefore of restoring the very thing obtained by fraud, it would be enforcing a void contract if he were made to repay it. The doctrine of legal necessity has application only when the minor has an estate or a fund which it is the duty of the Court of equity to protect as against the improvident act of the guardian.

A minor bought with funds supplied by his aunt a property which had been sold in execution of a mortgage deed. As full purchase money had not been paid to avoid confirmation of sale in execution of mortgage decree, the property was mortgaged by the minor purchaser and the vendors became sureties.

Held, looking at the two transactions as one, once it is realized that the minor was not in possession of any estate independently of the transaction which he was seeking to challenge, it becomes manifest that the Court cannot extend its protection to the minor by denying validity to the transaction which had brought the estate into existence.

If the two transactions are regarded as separate, then in dealing with a guardian of a minor the lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the transaction into which he is invited by the guardian to enter and to satisfy himself that the guardian is acting, in the particular instance, for the benefit of the ward. No authority imposes upon the lender the further duty of enquiring into the necessity for an altogether different transaction which perhaps has made the proposed transaction inevitable. If the law did impose such a duty upon the lender, then it might be said that he is bound to enquire into the antecedent management of the estate. But it is settled law that, provided the necessity for the loan has not arisen from any misconduct to which the lender is or has been a party he is not affected by the precedent mismanagement of the estate. A mortgage with possession to secure a sum of Rs 1,80,000 with interest at 12 per cent per annum stipulated that the principal sum was to be repaid in annual instalments of Rs 10,000 for 6 years after which the entire balance and interest was payable. There was a provision under which the mortgagor was to be allowed to remain in possession of the property for two years after which possession was to be delivered to the mortgagee. In case possession was not so delivered to the mortgagee the whole estate was to be sold to him for the entire amount due including principal and interest. Held, that the main object and obligation of the deed was to secure the payment of the instalments of mortgage money and that the other provisions in the mortgage however extensive and far reaching were merely intended as security to enforce the obligation, that the mortgagee was bound to accept a tender of the first instalment though made a few days after the due date, and that the mortgagor, though he did not deliver possession of the mortgaged property after the expiry of two years as stipulated, could sell the property to a stranger and pay up the mortgage there is nothing to prevent a mortgagor and a mortgagee from agreeing as to what sum could be charged annually for the expenses to be incurred by the mortgagee in possession (Lord Buckmaster) CHELIKANI VENKATARAMAN GARU v SREE RAJAH VATSAVAYA VENKATA SUBADRAYAMMA.

—Prior and subsequent—Rights of purchasers in execution of decrees on prior and subsequent mortgages

The question in the case was whether the plaintiff respondent who was the purchaser of the property in dispute, under a prior mortgage decree, to which the defendants appellants were no parties, had a right to eject the defendants, the purchasers in execution of a decree, based on a puisne mortgage, to which the prior mortgagees were no parties. It appeared that in the year 1910 the second mortgagees obtained a decree on foot of their mortgage for sale of the property and purchased the property on 20th of April 1912, in execution of such decree. To this suit the prior mortgagee was not made a party. In the year 1916 the prior mortgagee got a decree for sale on foot of her mortgage, but to this suit, neither the puisne mortgagee nor the purchaser in execution of his decree, were made parties. The prior mortgagee got a decree and put the property to sale and, in execution thereof, purchased it herself. She obtained possession over three-fourths of the property and did not get possession over one-fourth which was in the possession of the defendants.

MORTGAGE

She brought the present suit for the recovery of possession of the remaining one-fourth also, and, in the alternative, for a conditional decree that the defendant should redeem her mortgage, and in case of his failure, to do so, she should be put in possession of the property in dispute. Held that the plaintiff had no right to possession of the property under the mortgage on which she based her title. It was a simple mortgage and not a possessory mortgage. —Mortgagee in possession—Adverse possession—Receipt of rents and profits

So long as the mortgagee is in possession his possession is to some extent that of a trustee, unlike ordinary lessees he is bound to preserve the right, title and interest of a mortgagor and to prevent any invasion of that right by any stranger. The mortgagor having put the mortgagee in his stead in the possession of the property enjoys immunity and believes that so far as his possession is concerned, his interest will be protected by the mortgagee. Therefore, if the mortgagee has either by his neglect or in collusion allowed any other person to come into possession of the property, there will be no invasion of the rights of the mortgagor and when the time for redemption arrives he will be entitled to treat the stranger as a trespasser, and the stranger's right by adverse possession will not commence against the mortgagor unless and until the mortgagor has exercised his rights of redemption and had redeemed the property. This is the case of a complete possession where no right of possession is exercised by the mortgagor. There may, however, be cases where the mortgagor and the mortgagee are both in possession of the property in accordance with the arrangements arrived at by them and set forth in the covenant in the bond. The possession of the mortgagee consists in the appropriation of the usufruct of the property and that usufruct may be enjoyed by both mortgagor and mortgagee for the usufruct and the income of the property might far exceed the interest in lieu of which the mortgagee enjoys the possession of the property. In such a case the application of the principle will be varied, but the principle will apply to that portion of the usufruct which is supposed to be in the possession of the mortgagee.

When kakajri or rents and profits are reserved by the mortgage and are payable to the mortgagor there is no reason why the principle of adverse possession should not apply, though in order to take advantage of adverse possession it must satisfy all the conditions required for adverse possession, namely it must be open and hostile and to the knowledge of the mortgagor. A mere non payment of kakajri or forbearance to realise it for any length of time would not create any adverse possession nor a mere payment of the same to a stranger by duress, force or compulsion, unless such payment is made with the knowledge of the mortgagor that it was being paid against his interest (Jwala Prasad and Ross, JJ.) BINANAND SAWATE v THURGO MAHTO (1923) Pat 249 4 Pat L T 659 1923 P 592

MORTGAGOR AND MORTGAGEE

A mortgagor is not entitled after making the mortgage to grant leases which may have the effect of materially diminishing the value of the security for the remedies of the mortgagee under the mortgage. ———Rights of mortgagee to sell hypotheca—Rights of purchaser

The balance of authorities is clearly in favour of the view that a mortgagee decree holder has the conduct of the sale and is entitled to execute the decree against any of the mortgaged properties he pleases and if any question of equity arises between the decree holder and the persons to whom the equity of redemption in the mortgaged properties in or in any of them may have subsequently become vested that equity can only be enforced by an independent suit for contribution and not in proceedings for execution. Though every parcel of the mortgaged properties is liable rateably to its value and the principle applies with equal force where the mortgagee himself buys the equity of redemption in one or more of such parcels or releases any part of the security, such an enquiry as to the rateable distribution of the mortgage debt cannot be made in execution proceedings. The suit was in respect of land acquisition proceedings taken by the defendant in his capacity of Land Acquisition Officer, and the reliefs asked for comprised a declaration that those proceedings were all invalid and an injunction prohibiting the defendant from taking wrongful possession of the land from the plaintiffs. Held that the suit was really to all intents and purposes one against a public officer in respect of an act purporting to be done by such public officer within the meaning of S 80 of the Civil Procedure Code, and as such two months' notice in writing was required before it was instituted.

The fact that there is a fear of imminent danger if the defendant is not restrained by means of an injunction is not a reason for failing to comply with the very clear provisions of law as to notice.

The notice required by S 80 is imperative and should be served in all cases, even where an injunction is asked for. (Chandrasekhara Aiyar C J, and Plumer J) BRAHMAPP v CHAKRAPANI IYENGAR 1 Mys L J 1

Defendants executed a hundi which was not duly stamped for the same amount in favour of the plaintiffs by way of renewal of the previous hundi and made an endorsement on the back of the latter hundi that another hundi for Rs 1,000 had been executed in lieu thereof. Held the giving of the second hundi would have operated as a discharge of the previous hundi, only if the second hundi was legally enforceable. The question as to the negotiability or non-negotiability of an instrument is quite distinct from the question of a party's discharge from liability of the holder, and that the liability of the drawer of a bill of exchange or of any subsequent party thereto is not in any way affected by the document being negotiable or otherwise. Nor can mere cancellation have the effect of discharging a party from liability unless it is made with the express intention of discharging that party for if it is made unintentionally or is made under a mistake it will be inoperative. ## N. W F P REGULATION (VI OF 1901), S 3—Hazara Settlement Rules—Effect and scope of

It is difficult to regard section 60 of the Hazara Settlement Rules of 1872 as laying down anything more than a rule of evidence.

It is perfectly clear that the Legislature intended that Regulation VI of 1901 should be retrospective. It must be remembered that this Regulation goes beyond a mere repeal of the Regulation of 1872 and adds in section 3 a very definite pronouncement that entries made in the Regular Settlement of 1871 shall be regarded as having no mere force than entries made in any other Settlement. It would be difficult perhaps to describe this provision as having a retrospective effect, as its object is to prescribe a rule of evidence for Courts adjudicating upon cases which arise after its enactment. It could only be regarded as retrospective if it be assumed that Regulation I of 1872 not only prescribed a rule of evidence for the guidance of Courts, but also conferred an absolute title irrespective of the evidence upon which a title was based. If this latter view of Regulation I of 1872 be accepted, it is clear that the Legislature in putting into law Regulation VI of 1901 deliberately intended a retrospective effect, i e, that even if a valid title had been conferred by Regulation I of 1872, such a title should no longer be considered valid by the Courts and should be open to challenge exactly as any other title recorded in the Settlement is so open (*Pirbon, J. OATHS ACT, S 1—Party agreeing to abide by oath of his opponent—Power of Court to go into evidence

When a party agrees to abide by the oath of the other party or any particular witness, he clearly takes the risk of the witness swearing falsely. What he says in effect is "whatever this witness states on oath, I am prepared to accept as true and to have the case decided on the basis of it." In such a case the court acts illegally and with material irregularity in entering into evidence on the question of consideration. —Ss 8 and 9—Scope of—Reference to referee—Court discretion to refuse—Pleader's power to refer.

Where the parties to an arbitration agreed merely to abide by the statement of a referee even though not "on oath or solemn affirmation" then neither Section 8 nor Section 9 of the Oaths Act would be applicable. Section 9 is by no means mandatory and it seems that under certain special circumstances the Court may have discretion to refuse to refer the matter to the referee. If no judicial proceeding had been recorded it might very well have been that the so-called agreement was an informal talk not reduced to writing, and in any case looking at the fact that the respondent had the very next day withdrawn from the agreement and revoked it, it cannot be said the Court was wrong in exercising its discretion and in ordering that the case should be disposed of on the merits. ———Transfer of—Abatement—Suit for ejectment—Right of landlord

Where a tenant transfers an occupancy holding not transferable by custom, and the transferee gets into possession of the property and remain in such possession for 9 years, the original tenant not making any arrangement for payment of rent of the landlord, there is an abandonment of the holding entitling a landlord to sue in ejectment. The landlord's rights of re-entry cannot be defeated by the transferee putting an original tenant in ostensible possession of a portion of the holding or pleading defects in his own title. The landlord in such a case need only prove that there has been a transfer of the entire interest of the tenant and that the transferee is in possession of the entire holding by virtue and in pursuance of such transfer. OCCUPANCY RIGHTS—Accrual of—Joint tenants —Relinquishment—Period of joint occupation if counts

Where one of two occupancy tenants of a holding resigns his rights this relinquishment does not affect the rights of the other.

Where the occupancy rights are in the course of accrual the position is however different. The relinquishment effects a change in the tenancy and consequently the period before the relinquishment cannot be counted towards the accrual of occupancy rights.

(Per Burn, S M.) — If a joint tenant relinquishes the holding but continues to be a member of the joint cultivating partnership there is no change in tenancy. If the relinquishment is genuine and there is no longer any sharing in the cultivation of the holding there is a change in the tenancy. (Fremantle, S M and Burn, J M) SETH PREM NARAIN v. GANGA. ## Summary settlement—Object of

The first summary settlement in Oudh did not finally decide the proprietary title of the person who had engaged to pay the fixed revenue to the British Government. To allay mis-giving in the minds of the landholder it was considered necessary to settle proprietary rights after confiscation. All such proprietary rights were grants from the British Government and started fresh titles to the property, but it does not follow that these titles were free from the personal law of the grantees as regards succession and title of heirs. This settlement gave finality and perpetuity in respect to the proprietary right in the soil. Subsequently to emphasize this fact of the grant of a proprietary title sanads were issued to Taluqdars in accordance with letters of the Governor General in Council. These letters were subsequently given the force of legislation under Act II of 1869. They declare that every Taluqdar with whom a summary settlement had been made since the re-occupation of the Province, thereby acquired a permanent hereditary and transferable right in the Taluqa for which he had engaged including the perpetual privilege of engaging with the Government for the revenue of the Taluqa. The Chief Commissioner proposed a form of sanad and the approved form was sent to him by the Governor General with his letter dated 19th October 1859. The Sanads were given by Lord Canning at a Darbar held on 26th October 1859. The Sanad conferred no new rights but only declared the rights already determined in the 2nd Summary Settlement of 1858. ## Ss 22 and 13—Succession to estates—Rules governing

The special provisions embodied in section 22 of the Oudh Estates Act govern the succession to the estates mentioned in the second, third, and fifth of the lists, while the ordinary law to which persons of the donor's or testator's tribe and religion are subject govern the succession to the estates who would succeed to cases entered in the 4th and 6th lists. In the former class of estates the person who would succeed to the estates, if the taluqdar or grantee were to die intestate, would be the person to whom the special provisions of section 22 would apply. In the latter class of estates the person who would succeed to the estate, if the taluqdar or grantee died intestate, would be the person whom the ordinary law of the tribe or religion of the taluqdar or grantee would select. If the estate is one entered in lists 2, 3 and 5 the succession to which is regulated by primogeniture or the special rules of succession laid down in S. 22, the ordinary rules of the tribe and religion of the taluqdar or grantee would obviously be inapplicable, because, the heir to such an estate would only be one individual, and the ordinary law may point to many. If the estate was one entered in lists 4 and 6 the ordinary law of the tribe and religion of the testator would govern the succession to such an estate, and the person entitled to succeed to the same may be one or more but they must be persons of equal degree. In other words S. 19 provides an exception in favour of a person who would have succeeded to the estate if the taluqdar or grantee had died intestate under the special provisions relating to succession embodied in the Act, if the estate was one to which those special provisions relating to succession were applicable or under the ordinary law of the tribe and religion of the taluqdar or grantee, if the special provisions relating to succession so laid down, were not applicable. The person in whose favour the exception has been made would in any case be the person who would have been the immediate heir or the heir at law of the taluqdar or grantee, had the latter died intestate according to the law applicable to his estate. A similar exception is made in favour of the younger son of the taluqdar or grantee, if the estate was one entered in the 3rd or the 5th of the lists mentioned in S. 8, because by rule of primogeniture or impartibility applicable to such estate, such a younger son would be out of the pale of immediate succession and a gift or devise in his favour would not divert the estate out of the line (Kanharya Lal, J C, and Dalal, A J C.) CHAUDHRAN ZARIF UN-NISA v CHAUDHRI SHAFIQ-UZ-ZAMAN. 26 O C 133

A suit for partition of common property, not joint property, is not liable to dismissal on the ground that all the joint property in respect of which it might have been brought has not been included. The objection as to partial partition is not available in such a case. The co-sharers in a mahal have a right to effect a partition by private arrangement amongst themselves and it may be the most convenient method of effecting such a partition to assign the entire holding of a particular tenant to a particular group of co-sharers. The only difference effected by a private arrangement and one properly carried out under the orders of the Court is that the incidents of the private partition are difficult to prove, and that confusion and litigation may arise afterwards owing to the preparation of village records which are at variance with actual facts. It was found as a fact that prior to the mortgage the owner had sold certain plots of land but this was not known to A or B. On a question arising at a partition between A and B it was held that the plots so sold should be allotted to B's share of the property (Daniels, A J C) QAZI WALIUL HAQ v MT BIGGAN

Minor—When bound—Bona fide allotment—Full knowledge of facts—Guardian's act when binding

Though a partition can be entered into during the minority of some of the members of a joint Hindu family it is open to the minor members to show that the partition was unfair or prejudicial to their interest and their not binding on them. In the case of a co-owner who is only interested along with a minor in one or more items of property, when division is effected, such division must be a fair one and not prejudicial to the interests of the minor. Wherever an adult person deals with a minor through the minor's guardian it is his duty to see that the transaction is a fair one and that the minor is not prejudiced in any way by an act or omission on his part. The duty is all the greater when the minor's guardian is a young widow having no independent advice and the adult co-owner knows everything about the property. ## PARTITION

The general rule is that all property held in cotenancy and nothing but property held in cotenancy should be included in a partition suit. A co-tenant, whose title to an undivided share of joint property is admitted as clear is entitled to partition as a matter of right. A difficulty in making a division of the subject-matter or a resulting prejudice to some of the co-tenants, is not a sufficient ground for refusing a partition, and it has sometimes been maintained that partition may be claimed, even though it be impossible to divide the property without materially impairing its value or even totally destroying it. Since partition can be claimed as a matter of right, a co-tenant is not required to make demand or to agree upon terms prior to institution of suit. But although, as a general rule, all joint property of the co-tenants must be included in a partition suit it is within the power of co-tenants, by mutual agreement, to make partition of a part only of the joint property, retaining the rest in common. The principle that a partition suit should include all the property of the co-tenancy is widely recognised, and it has been pointed out that if the rule were not enforced, a co-tenant might institute as many suits to partition the property as his caprice dictated. Consequently, a partial partition cannot, as a general rule, be compelled against co-tenants who do not consent thereto. But if some of the co-tenants desire to continue holding their moieties together and undivided the Court may permit them to do so, and instead of making a separate allotment to each, set apart to all who so desire an allotment to be held by them jointly. If it appears, however, that all the defendants have already received all that is equitably due to them, the remainder may be awarded to the plaintiff, this is not partial but complete partition. Exceptions to the rule that a suit cannot lie for partition of a portion of the family property have been recognised when different portions of the family property are situated in different jurisdictions, and separate suits for separate portions have sometimes been allowed, where different rules of substantive or adjective law prevail in the different Courts. Again, a suit for partial partition has been allowed when the portion excluded is not in the possession of co-partners and may consequently be deemed not to be really available for partition. A suit for partial partition has also been allowed when the portion excepted is impartible property. In another class of cases, the rule has been relaxed, namely, where the portion excluded is held jointly with strangers who have no interest in the family partition. But although partial partition by suit is allowed where different portions of the property lie in different jurisdictions, or some portion of the property is at the time incapable of partition or is from its nature impartible or is held jointly with stranger who cannot be joined as parties to a general suit for partition, these exceptions must not be taken to have frittered away the fundamental rule that a partition suit should embrace all the joint property (Mookerjee and Cumming, JJ) RAJENDRA KUMAR BOSE v BROJENDRA KUMAR BOSE.

Such a state of things is of course an impossibility and the officer who made the partition ordered the Amin to correct the entry, it was accordingly corrected into an entry showing the land as the plaintiffs' khudkast and the jamabandi containing this entry was accepted and signed as correct by the parties,

Held, The general statement of the Revenue Officer that the actual possession of sir and khudkast had not been disturbed by no means excludes the possibility of exceptions having been made and barely indicates a slight probability that an exception that appears on the face of the record was really due to a slip of the pen (Hallifax, A J C) NARSING v KHEMU

PARTITION ACT, s 2.

—Ss 2 and 3—Application for sale—When to be made.

The provisions of the partition Act apply to the stage at which the suit is in the Court of 1st Instance. The various provisions of the Act manifestly indicate that, if any action can be taken under the Act, it can only be taken in the Court of first instance before a decree for partition has been actually made. After a decree for partition has been made, after one of the co-shares in the property has remained quiescent in both the Courts below, he could not be allowed to ask the final Court of Appeal to do for him what the Court might have done if he had moved the Court when the case was under trial (Banerji, J) ABDUL HAQ v MOTILAL,

In a suit for dissolution of partnership on the Original side of the Madras High Court the Judge referred the whole suit to the official Referee to determine shares, take accounts and submit report. Held the order was not appealable as it was neither a decree under S 2 (2), C P C, nor a judgment within Cl 15 of the Letters Patent.

The court has no jurisdiction to refer questions as to terms of partnership shares etc., to the Referee and the order is bad. But in the course of the suit itself the order and report cannot be treated as a nullity, the remedy of the aggrieved party being by way of appeal or review.

PARTNERSHIP.

—Minor—Admission to benefit of the partnership—Effect—Whole transaction to be looked into

In considering whether admission to a partnership is for the benefit of the minor, what we have to consider is, not the benefit to the minor of an isolated clause of the partnership agreement but the total benefit which would result to him. There cannot be the least doubt that the rescue of a family business from its perilous financial situation was a benefit to the minor which far outweighed any restriction which might be placed upon his activities. It is straining to call the restriction upon competitive business as personal liability to and obligation of the firm (Pipon, J C) MIR AHMAD SHAH v MUSHARRIF SHAH 72 I C 996 —Patent rights—Minor—Guardian's act if beneficial binds minor.

The Court, which is bound to determine and to determine finally and to dispose of questions arising in the partnership suits, cannot shirk its duty in deciding how the partners intended the patent rights to be dealt with, merely because special powers have been given to litigants to apply to another Court. The special Court under the Patent Act would be bound in deciding any matter in relation to a patent in accordance with the sections of the Patent Act, to decide the controversy with reference to what had been established by the findings of the Court in the dissolution of the partnership which would be binding upon the parties in any controversy under the Patent Act. Where the contracting party is a minor represented by a guardian, and the contract was clearly for the benefit of the minor and was made at the request of the guardian for the convenience and benefit of the minor's interest, it binds the minor (Walsh, J) JWALA PRASAD v RAGHUBIR PRASAD

PATNI REGULATION (VIII of 1819)—Creation of patni over the head of another—Assignment of right by patnidar to Zemindar—Rights of assignee—Sale of assignee's interest—Right to object—Creation of fresh patni—Effect of

The idea of a patni being created over another patni is absolutely foreign to the scheme of the Patni Regulation and the position resulting therefrom would be anomalous. In the Patni Regulation a patnidar has been given certain rights as against the Zemindars. The patnidar is described as talukdar of the first degree and a tenure cannot be created over a talukdar of the first degree. There can be no objection to the assignment of the right to the Zemindar to receive rent from the patnidar which he is entitled to get under the patni settlement. In such cases the assignee of the Zemindar's interest would be entitled to recover rent from the patnidar by virtue of the assignment. The whole scheme of the Patni Regulation is that the patnidar is the only person whose interest could be sold under the Regulation and not the interest of the so called sub-patnidar. Where a sale under the Regulation is held without jurisdiction even a person not affected by it could question it (Walmsley and Ghose, JJ.) RAJENDRA NARAIN CHAUDHURI v. —S 11—Applicability of—Interest of occupancy raiyat—When protected

The terms of S 11 Cl 1 are not satisfied unless at the least the right of transfer is expressly stated in the lease or other engagement to be a right to make transfers which shall not be mere encumbrances. That seems to be the natural meaning of the first paragraph of the first clause and that construction is borne out by the emphatic language of the 2nd paragraph. No transfer is to bar the indefeasible right of the Zemindar unless it is made with the condition that it shall not amount merely to an incumbrance and such condition can only be annexed where express authority for that purpose has been received from the Zemindar or superior landlord (Richardson and Suhrawardy, JJ.) GOPAL CHANDRA PODDAR v. PATNI SALE—Setting aside—Creditors of defaulting patnidar drawing out sale proceeds—Liability to refund

The plaintiff who was the Zemindar, sued for the rent of a patni and, under Regulation VIII of 1819, the patni was sold for arrears of rent. It was purchased by one Peary Mohan Roy for Rs 15,000 on the 18th May 1900. The surplus sale proceeds were Rs 13,614-11 annas. Out of this amount the defendant Nos 1 to 9 withdrew from Court a sum of Rs 4,469-9 annas. These defendants were the creditors of the defaulting patnidars. Meanwhile the defaulting patnidars brought a suit for the setting aside of sale and the sale was set aside on the 14th August 1900. The Zemindar was then obliged to refund to the purchaser Rs 15,000, and he sued to recover the amount which the defendant Nos 1 to 9 took out of Court.

Held, that the plaintiff had a cause of action against the defendants Nos 1 to 9. They took out a portion of the surplus sale proceeds at a time when there was a suit pending, in which the question of the validity of the sale was involved. They therefore took out the money, subject to the result of that suit; and the sale was set aside, there was an implied obligation on their part to return the money to the Court. They did not do so and consequently the Zemindar had to re pay to the auction-purchaser Rs 15,000 the whole of which he would not have been obliged to pay, if the defendants Nos 1 to 9 had fulfilled the implied obligation which was upon them to return the surplus sale proceeds to the Court (Rampin and Woodroffe, JJ.) BEHARI LAL SEAL v. S 4 of the Indian Penal Code gives certain extra-territorial jurisdiction in respect of acts committed outside British India by certain classes of persons including the Indian subjects of His Majesty, but it does not affect the nature of the act. The act alleged must amount to an offence punishable under the Code before a British Indian Court can take cognizance of the case. There is no provision in the Indian Penal Code which constitutes it an offence to lodge a false complaint in a foreign court or to give false evidence before such court where the oath is not administered under the provision of law in force in British India, but under the law of that state in relation to proceedings before that court (Shah and Kaji, JJ.) RAMBHARTHI HIRABHARTHI In re

—S. 34—Intention—Several persons joining together—Common intention

Where a criminal act or series of acts is done by several persons in combination it is essential to consider first, the common intention and secondly the individual intention of each of the accused as disclosed by the circumstances.

Where S. 34 has to be applied it must be shown that the criminal act for which the accused are to be made responsible was committed in furtherance of their common intention. The words "when a criminal act is done in furtherance of the common intention of all" mean that all the persons charged must have consented to and contemplated the commission of the particular crime committed. The existence of a common intention is the sole test of joint responsibility and what the common intention is, must be proved. It is of course but rarely that there could be direct evidence of a common intention which must be judged and decided by a consideration of all the facts proved, and the circumstances surrounding the case. It is not sufficient to say that such and such an act was likely to occur, but it must be found on a consideration of all the circumstances available what the common intention was (Robinson, C. —Ss 34, 149 and 300—Murder—one of several persons committing the act—Criminal act—Direction to jury—Elements of offence

Where two persons go to a place with the common intention to rob a third person and it necessary, to kill him and one of them fires a fatal shot in furtherance of that common intention, then both of them are equally guilty of murder S 34 of the Penal Code does not create a distinct offence, it only lays down a principle of liability Under this section when a criminal act is done by several persons, each is liable as if he did it alone, provided the act is done in furtherance of the common intention of all.

Per Richardson, J—S. 107 of the Penal Code does not contemplate the abettor being present when the abetted criminal act or offence is committed The aid given at the time of commission referred to in Explanation, 2 means aid given at the time but at such a distance from the scene that the abettor cannot be said to be present

Where an accused is liable under S 34 of the Penal Code as an accessory at the fact and therefore as a principal, a charge simply of the offence of murder under S 302, without express reference to S. 34 is sufficient.

In cases where there is no direct evidence of the actual participation of the accused in a specific act of violence if persons proved at particular points of time to be members of a mob but not shown to have taken part in the specific act are to be found guilty of that act by force of S 34, it must be clearly found that the act was in furtherance of the common intention of the mob while the accused were in it, or if S 149 is used, it must be clearly found that that act was also in prosecution of the common object or such as the accused knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of their common object

In such a case the court ought to consider first what was the original intention of the mob and which of the offences naturally were inherent or likely to have occurred in the prosecution of that intention, secondly at what stage of the riot the accused were present, and what was the

Where the assault has once assumed a dangerous form, every allowance should be made for one, who, with the instinct of self preservation strong upon him, pursues his defence a little further than to a perfectly cool bystander would seem absolutely necessary. A number of national volunteers went to a small village bazaar for the purpose of picketing the sale of country liquor, etc. The shop-keepers and the agents of the Zamindar told them that no interference with the bazaar would be tolerated. The volunteers finding themselves too few in numbers retired but their leaders distinctly told the bazaarmen that they would return on the following market day. After this a large meeting of the volunteers convened by the leaders at which it was resolved to stop the sale of intoxicants, etc., at the bazar. Held that the agreement was an agreement to commit the offence of criminal intimidation and amounted to a criminal conspiracy, what ever might be said in defence of peaceful picketing when undertaken in the market of a large town by individuals or by small groups of earnest and enthusiastic men or women it had no application to the present case where it was proposed to flood a small village bazaar by a body of men whose mere presence there would put a stop to all business (Mars, C J and Piggott, J) ABDULLAH v EMPEROR L R 4 A, 145 (Cr)

— — — Ss. 109, 176 and 189—Conviction under S 189—Alteration into a conviction under Ss 109 and 176

The petitioners were charged with and convicted of an offence under S. 189 I P C the allegation being that they held out threats to the Chaukidar for the purpose of inducing him to refrain from reporting the death of a boy to the police. On appeal the District Magistrate held there was no offence under S. 189 I P C as a village Chaukidar was not an officer of Government and was therefore not a public servant within the meaning of S. 21 I P C. He found that the petitioners and the lambardars who had been convicted in a separate trial for an offence under S. 176 I P C had entered into a conspiracy in pursuance of which the latter had omitted to report the boy's death and he accordingly altered the conviction of the petitioners into convictions under Ss 176 and 109 I P C. Held that the offence which the petitioners were alleged to have committed under Ss 109 and 176 I P C by entering into a conspiracy with the lambardars not to report the boy's death was one of a different nature from the offence under S. 189 with which they had been charged and was a constituted by an entirely different set of facts and as the petitioners were not called upon in the trial Court to answer a charge of an offence under Ss. 109 and 176, the District Magistrate was not justified in appeal in altering the convictions under those sections. A further reason for not altering the findings was that a prosecution for an offence under Ss. 109 and 176 I P C required sanction under S. 195, Cr. P. C. which was not

The accused were charged with a conspiracy to cheat Government of large sums of money in the matter of the supply of some goods during the war. The charges were made under Ss 120 B and 420 I P C. Held though the charge was not clearly framed yet the accused were put upon sufficient notice of a charge of a conspiracy to commit an offence or offences under S. 420, I, P C. The transactions alleged were mentioned as instances of overt acts from which the conspiracy might be inferred. The mere fact that the transactions alleged were independent and occurred on different dates, is not inconsistent with a general conspiracy. A charge under S. 420 I P C should contain an allegation of the person or persons deceived and induced to issue the cheque in payment of the alleged fraudulent bills. The omission is not a fatal defect, in the charge when it did not mislead the accused and there was no failure of justice by reason of it. Though five bills were presented at different dates, they did not constitute different offences for an offence under S. 420, I P C would not be complete until the cheque was issued and as only one cheque was issued through the inducement of the five fraudulent bills, there was only one offence of cheating. Held, on the facts that an attempt to cheat had been established though not the completed offence of cheating. The offence of attempt to cheat was complete as soon as each of the bills was presented and an accused person could be convicted of

Per Macleod, C J—To bribe or attempt to bribe a public servant is only punishable under the I P. C as an abetment of the substantive offence of a public servant accepting or attempting to obtain an illegal gratification

Illustration (a) to S 116 is only an example of abetment of an offence under S 161. There are many other ways of instigating a public servant to commit an offence under S. 161, besides by means of a direct offer of a bribe.

The words used in conversation, did not legally amount to an offer—But they did indicate a state of mind in the cousin which could result in bribery. The distinction between an offer and an invitation for offers to be made is well recognised in the law of contracts; and there is no reason why the same distinction should not apply in criminal law

—S 174—Summons case — Barrister— Summoned as a witness—Liability to appear— Representation by another counsel

A conviction under S 174 I P C cannot be sustained unless it be shown that there was an intentional omission to appear in answer to the summons. The accused, a barrister was not served till 5 p.m. on the day previous to that fixed for the trial and he was due to appear as counsel in a case before the High Court the next morning, and there was no time to make other arrangements. He therefore instructed an advocate to appear on his behalf before the Magistrate and to apply for an adjournment of the trial. His advocate did appear and described the situation in which his client was placed and the trial was put off for a week. Held, that the accused was not guilty of an offence under S 174 I P C. It does not appear to be generally understood that an advocate is, in a sense, an officer of the Court and it is his duty no less to the Bench than to his client to be ready when the case in which he has been briefed is called. It may happen that he is required at two different places at the same time in which case it is his duty to make suitable arrangements so that he may be represented. In the case before the court it was clear that the petitioner did not intend to disobey the summonses but placed as he was he found himself unable to abandon his client's interest and therefore instructed another Barrister to represent the circumstances to the Magistrate. ## PENAL CODE, 298

In a case under S. 297, the Magistrate went to the alleged burial ground, accompanied by pleaders representing both parties and proceeded to have the ground removed at various spots which were pointed out to him.

He unearthed, two small bones which he thought were human collar bones, and also found some matting and some pieces of bamboo. On this inspection he came to the conclusion that the place was a burial ground and convicted the accused.

Held that this proceeding was entirely irregular. If he had desired to have very sure evidence adduced as to whether this land was a grave-yard it is possible that an investigation of the character which he himself conducted personally as to the results of which he himself in effect gave evidence, might have with due reverence been carried out by properly qualified official persons and their evidence in Court afterwards might have been of great assistance and value to him. Judicial officers cannot and are not legally permitted to find out for themselves the facts of a case they have to decide. (Bucknill, J.) JAILAL JHA v EMPEROR 1 Pat L R 256 (Cr) 1923 P 537

—Ss 297, 441 and 504—Offences under—Trespass—Mosque—Entry for worship—Unlawful conduct—Finding and conviction under S 297 altered into one under S 504 I P C

The petitioner was convicted by the Court below on a charge under S 297, I P C in that he "with the intention of wounding the feelings of the moulvi and the congregation committed trespass in a place of worship". The evidence established that he had gone to the mosque for midday prayer as usual, when the service was over, he was asked by some others why he had, on former occasions, abused the moulvi and the congregation, on his attempting a denial, witnesses were sent for, and an altercation followed, the petitioner then began to abuse all and sundry, employing obscene epithets and uttering threats. Held on these facts that the accused was guilty of a cognate offence under S 504, I P C and that the conviction should be altered accordingly.

The word "trespass" in S 297, I P C does not have the same meaning as is attached to "criminal trespass" in S 441 I P C. The term appears to mean any violent or injurious act committed in such place and with such knowledge as is specified in S 297 40 C 548, R Ref. Where death ensues as the result of a reckless administration of dhatura, the offence is one of murder and not anything smaller (Walsh and Ryves, JJ.) EMPEROR v NANHU. 45 All 557 1923 A 608

—Ss 300 and 299—Culpable homicide when murder

Culpable homicide is not murder unless the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention stated, in one or more of the four clauses to be interpreted in the light of the four illustrations appended to it one for each clause. If the question is whether the injuries caused in a case are sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, the court has to take it into consideration the nature of the weapon used and the injuries caused. If it was so light that even if used with sufficient violence no lethal blow could be inflicted with it, it would follow that it was used to give a thrashing and not to inflict fatal or dangerous injuries. If the number of blows given were not less than fifty, but now blow was inflicted on any vital part with sufficient violence to cause serious damage such as fracture of the skull it cannot be said that the injuries which the appellant intended to inflict were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. All that can be inferred from his act of prolonged beating is that he knew that the injuries that he was inflicting might cause death (Scott Smith, and Zafar Ali, JJ.) DARAZ v, EMPEROR 75 I. He tried to persuade his wife to accompany him back home but she refused and gave him foul abuse whereupon the accused struck her with the chopper and caused her death. Held, having regard to the unfortunate habit of the woman of running away from home, the foul abuse given by her to her husband who tried to take her back home, and having regard to the circumstances of an Indian household where the wife is expected to obey and respect her husband, there was grave and sudden provocation. The conviction of the accused was altered into one under S 304 I P C and the accused was sentenced to eight years rigorous imprisonment (Dalai, A. J. C.) MAHADEO v EMPEROR 90 L. J 597 90 & A. L. ## —S 302—Murder—Beating a sickly and invalid wife—Throwing body into a well—Offence

The accused had a young wife of 14 years. She was an epileptic. She was physically weak, mentally deficient and excitable, certain to meet a premature death, and in a condition of mind and body which rendered her unable to sustain a severe shock.

For some cause which was not clearly stated, except that it appeared to have been due to her defective health, she irritated him into a savage beating which inflicted upon her frail body injuries which in the ordinary course of events would not cause death to a healthy person, but had caused her death. The accused instead of going to his friends or her friends or anybody in authority to explain this accident which he had brought about, if it was an accident—though in the opinion of the court he must be taken within the meaning of the Code to have known quite well that what he was doing was likely to cause her death—he surreptitiously by night carried what he thought was her dead body and threw it down a well leaving it there presumably in the hope of covering up the traces of enquiry. Held, that one common intention of inflicting such injuries upon her as he must have known to likely cause her death was present throughout the case from the beginning to the end (Walsh and Ryves, JJ) EMPEROR v KHUBI L R 4 A 131 (Cr) 1923 A 545.

S 362—Abduction, what amounts to

When the appellant met the girl, she had ceased to be a kidnapped woman in the strict sense. She was then a free agent but she would not have gone with the appellant but for his false representations to her as to his being a police constable and the inducement held out by him that he would take her to the police station. Held, his action therefore amounted to abduction as defined in S 362, I P C (Broadway J)

S 363—Intention—Giving refuge—If amounts to offence

To constitute the offence of kidnapping the intention to prevent the kidnapped person from returning to his guardian is not necessary.

Where a minor runs away from lawful guardianship the person with whom he takes refuge is not "taking him" within the meaning of the law. But inducing a minor to run away or giving him encouragement would constitute the offence, and any question of intention would be relevant only as regards the sentence (Pipon, J C)

S 376—Attempt to commit rape

The fact that the vernacular record showed that the accused put his finger in the private part of the complainant coupled with the absence of semen on the pyjama of the girl and the absence of marks on the male organ of the accused were held to be sufficient circumstances for conviction for an offence of attempt to commit rape and not for rape (Abdul Qadir, J) SADHU SINGH v THE CROWN 73 I C 513

PENAL CODE, S 376

—S 376—Presumption

The fact that the charge of rape was brought against the accused immediately after the occurrence, coupled with the medical evidence and the fact that he was assaulted by Lambardar and arraigned before the Panchayat then and there lead strongly to the conclusion that the rape story was notification, though the friends of the girl being ignorant rustics were not wise enough to look for blood or to preserve it as evidence in support of the charge 38 All 49 Foll (Zafar Ali, J) HUSSAIN KHAN v EMPEROR

If there is a taking under a colour of right, or in other words, under a bona fide claim, the taking cannot be dishonest or felonious, that is to say, it is not theft under the Indian Penal Code. It is immaterial whether the claim is good or bad, though, in deciding as a question of fact whether the claim was a bona fide claim, it may be material to consider whether or not there was any right at all.

The first accused bought some land from P W. 2 and bona fide claimed the right to the share of the grass grown in a tank in the same village alleging that the said right went with the land purchased by him P W 2, on the other hand, contended that the right in question was severable from the said land and that he continued to be entitled to the said right, notwithstanding the sale by him. After the reaping of the grass in question had gone on for some time, the accused went himself or sent the 2nd accused with instructions to remove a quantity of the grass that had already been cut and stacked. The Magistrate convicted both of them of theft, being of opinion that no question of bona fides could arise because the matter affected third parties. Held that the conviction was illegal (Schwabe, C J.) SRINIVASALU REDDIAR v GOVINDA GOUDAN

PENAL CODE, § 395

—§ 395—Identification evidence—Value of

Identification evidence by itself is a very insufficient basis for identification but when it is found that the identification witnesses have been familiar with the face of the person identified there can be no certainty that the witnesses really saw the accused (Dalal, J C) DIN DAYAL v KING EMPEROR 90 & A L R 558 100 L J 347

—§§ 395, and 397—Mode of judgment

—§ 396—Scope

The fact that murder was committed in the compound of the house raised at a time when the dacoits were making good their escape is not sufficient to take the case out of S 396 (Scott-Smith and Moti Sagar, JJ) KARIM BAKHSH v EMPEROR 1923 Lah 329 (1)

—§ 397—Interpretation of—Such offender—Meaning of

The words 'such offender' in S 397 I P C clearly refer to the offender who uses a deadly weapon or causes grievous hurt, to any person and not to those who jointly commit robbery or dacoity with him (Scott-Smith J.) ILAHIA v EMPEROR, 72 I C 517 24 Cr L J 405

—§§ 397 and 395—Scope of

S. 397, Indian Penal Code does not constitute a separate offence. When five or more persons conjointly commit robbery they are said to have committed dacoity, an offence which is punishable under S 395 Indian Penal Code. Where a confession was made and articles were found which were identified as taken in dacoity held their was sufficient corroboration of approver's story. (Broadway, J) WADHAWA SINGH v EMPEROR 1923 Lah 389 (2)

—§ 398—Scope of

S. 398 I P C. does not create a substantive offence. It merely provides that if any member of a gang of dacoits is armed with lethal weapon during the commission of a dacoity such member is to suffer a minimum punishment of 7 years (Broadway, J.) BAKHTAWAR SINGH v EMPEROR 1923 Lah. 66

—§ 399—Essentials of offence under—Preparation—Dacoity—Robbery

To establish an offence under S 399 I, P C it is not necessary that the persons shown to be making the preparation should be five or more in number. But it is necessary to prove that the raid for which they were making preparation was to be committed by five or more persons. Otherwise it would not be dacoity but merely robbery and mere preparation for committing robbery unless it ends in an actual attempt is not punishable by law (Poon, J C) KHWAJA HASSAN v EMPEROR 71 I. ## PENAL CODE, § 403

—§ 401—Essentials

It is not necessary to prove that each individual member of the gang has habitually committed theft or any particular act of theft. Once it is proved that a gang was formed for the purpose of habitually committing theft, all persons who hereafter join the gang in committing one or more thefts come within the purview of S 401 of the Penal Code (Lumsden, J) EMPEROR v DARYA SINGH 1923 Lah 666

—§ 401—Essential and evidence

The sustain a conviction in a charge under S 431 Indian Penal Code it is necessary to prove —

- (2) that those persons were associated for the purpose of committing theft or robbery,

- (4) that the accused was a member of such gang. In the absence of direct evidence the associating and the purpose of the association may be established by proof of acts from which these may be reasonably inferred (Moti Sagar, J) PIR BAKSH v EMPEROR. 73 I C 815 24 Cr L J 703 1923 Lah 327

It is of the essence of an offence under S 411, I P. C. to show that the person who was in possession of the stolen property knew or had reason to believe that it was stolen property. Where the stolen property was traced to the accused's possession two months after the theft there is no presumption against him under S 144 of the Evidence Act

Where two persons were originally charged together but were later on tried separately, a statement made by one of them incriminating the other when they were both co-accused, ought not to be used against the other accused at his trial (Krishnan, J) RAMUDU AIYER In re

— S 414—Essentials for conviction

To convict the accused under S 414, I P C, it is necessary that the property which is the subject of the charge should be stolen property and further that the accused should have known or had reason to believe that it was stolen property, which they were trying to conceal or make away with. Hence a finding that it is stolen property is essential. It is not actually necessary to prove in what theft the property was stolen or in what manner it was stolen. If an accused person thinking a certain property in his possession is stolen property tries to conceal it when as a matter of fact it is not, no offence under S 414 is committed (Krishnan, J) Ime SAMACHARI

— S 415—Cheating—Paying cheques knowing that there was no balance of drawer with his banker—Horse racing—Bets

The petitioner was a licensed book-maker of the Royal Calcutta Turf Club and had a permanent book for the season 1922—1923 within the first enclosure of the Calcutta Race Course. On the assurance of the opposite party, who was a Deputy Director of Commercial Intelligence, employed under the Government of India, that he would pay up his losses, if any, punctually on the settling day, the petitioner allowed the Opposite Party to take bets on credit on the 9th of December 1922. The debts due to the petitioner by and from the Opposite Party in respect of debts on credit amounted to a sum of Rs. 1,591. The Opposite Party failed to pay the said sum of Rs 1,591 on the following settling day and accordingly the Petitioner decided not to allow to the Opposite Party any more credit until the said sum was paid off in full. Thereupon the Opposite Party sent to the Petitioner, on the 15th December 1922, a crossed cheque for Rs 1,591 on the Indian Industrial Bank. The said cheque was sent in the evening after banking hours. The Opposite Party assured the Petitioner that the said cheque would be paid on presentation and on such assurance the Petitioner allowed the Opposite Party to take bets with him on credit on the 16th December 1922, and in respect of such bets taken on credit on the 16th December 1922, the Opposite Party became indebted to the Petitioner to the extent of Rs 3 450. The Cheque referred to above was presented for payment on the 18th December 1922, when it was dishonoured. The Opposite party was thereupon communicated to and he gave a fresh cheque for Rs 5,041 to cover his losses on the 9th and 16th of December and assured the Petitioner that there would be no difficulty whatsoever in getting the said cheque cashed. The Petitioner relied on the assurance of the Opposite Party and allowed him to take further bets on credit on the 23rd and 26th of December 1922. The opposite Party became indebted to the Petitioner in a further sum of Rs 752. Meanwhile the said cheque for Rs 5,041 was presented for payment on the 28th December 1922 when it was dishonoured. The petitioner thereafter made various efforts to obtain payment of the two sums of Rs. 5,041 and 752, but without success. On a complaint of cheating against the opposite party Held, that although it was quite clear that the Petitioner was deceived and thereby induced to take bets on credit from the Opposite Party, it was not possible to say that the act which the Petitioner was induced to do by reason of such deception caused or was likely to cause damage or harm to him in body, mind, reputation or property. —Ss 30 and 32—Resistance—Execution of law or any legal process—Offence created by statute—By Law—Force of—Notification under the Police Act prohibiting meetings in general

Per Mullick and Coutts, JJ (Das, J., dissenting) The words of S 30 of the Police Act are sufficiently general to enable the superintendent of Police to issue a general notification containing a prohibition against convening or collecting assemblies or directing or promoting processions without license. If the person or persons against whom the notice is directed convene or collect an assembly or promote or direct a procession without license he or they will be punishable under S 32 of the Act.

There is nothing in the Act which renders a person liable to punishment for joining an assembly or procession which has already been convened or collected if he has no notice that the convenor or promoter has omitted to take out a licence but if after becoming aware that the person whose duty it was to take out a license has failed to do so, he persists in remaining with the assembly or procession then it may be said that he shares the common subject of such persons to resist the execution of the Superintendent's order. His conduct may then amount to an offence under S 141, I P C.

When a notification is issued by an executive authority in exercise of a power conferred by statute, that notification is as much a part of the law as it had been incorporated within the body of the statute at the time of its enactment. The command is in every respect, a command by the appropriate legislative authority (Mullick Coutts and Das, JJ.) EMPEROR ABDUL HAMID,

In all cases where there is an appeal on questions of fact, it is a good working rule that the appellate tribunal will not lightly interfere with the findings of fact of the Court below. This rule applies most strongly where there has been a conflict of oral testimony and the judge had the advantage of seeing the witnesses and of observing their demeanour. But it is a rule which should not be pressed too far for there are many cases where there has been a conflict of evidence in the Court below in which the Court of appeal is bound to give effect to its own view if it differs from that of the judge, e.g., probabilities may be strongly against the view of the judge or there may be documents consistent with the evidence of appellant and inconsistent with that of respondent etc. The demeanour of witnesses is not invariably a safe guide to the truth of their evidence (Schwabe, C J and Krishnan, J.) ADAM HAJI PEERA MOHOMED ISHACK v SACAVATH HUSSAIN AKBARI

According to the plaint the only ground on which the plaintiffs came into Court was that there was a gift in favour of one R on condition that the land would revert to the donor if R's line died out. No other ground of claim was put forward, and the only issue upon which the parties went to trial was whether there was or was not a gift in favour of R of the type set up by the plaintiffs in their plaint. The trial Court found the gift established and decreed the plaintiff's claim. On appeal the lower appellate court found the gift not established and further found that the subject of the gift reverted to the donor on the failure of the direct descendants of the donee. Held this issue having been found against the plaintiffs the suit ought to have been dismissed and the defendant is fully justified in complaining that the lower appellate court has decided the case upon a point which had never been put in issue, and upon which the parties had never been given an opportunity of producing their evidence (Moti Sagar J) KIRPA v MT CHINTI 1923 Lah 530, —Pleading and Proof—Variance between—Rule against—Scope of

As a general rule parties should be kept to their pleadings, but this is not of universal application and every variance between pleading and proof is not fatal. The rule that the pleading and proof must correspond is intended to serve a double purpose, first to appraise the defendant distinctly and specifically of the case he is called upon to answer, and secondly, to preserve an accurate record of the cause of action as a protection against second proceeding upon the same allegations. The test is whether the defendant will be taken by surprise if relief is granted on facts established by the evidence. A variance between a pleading and what is proved is immaterial unless it hampers a defence or unless it relates to an integral part of the cause of action. decree—Plaintiff becoming entitled to whole of suit property by survivorship—Procedure on—Application to bring deceased's daughter on record as legal representative—Application for amendment of plaint to include share of deceased also—Maintainability

In a suit by plaintiff against her sister for partition and possession of a moiety of the stridhanam property of their mother the defendant died after the passing of a preliminary decree, recognising plaintiff's right to half the property, but before the passing of a final decree after ascertainment, by metes and bounds, of such share. On applications by the plaintiff, one for having the deceased's daughter impleaded as her legal representative, and another for an amendment of the plaint to enable plaintiff to obtain a decree for the other moiety to which she claimed to be entitled by survivorship on the death of her sister, held that the first application ought to be granted, but that the 2nd must be dismissed.

The first that by the death of her sister the plaintiff has lost the character of a joint tenant and has acquired in its stead a right to the whole estate is not sufficient to deprive her of her original cause of action, when the proceedings have been instituted and have resulted in recognition of her right in a preliminary decree. The ascertainment of plaintiff's half share and the making of a final decree can be done against any person who like the person sought to be impleaded as legal representative has come into possession in succession to the deceased.

Application for amendment of the plaint—

The case is no exception to the ordinary rule that an amendment should not be made to introduce a new cause of action. The cause of action assumed in the amendment is the death of the plaintiff's sister, and that was not available when the original plaint was presented. Plaintiff must be left to sue separately for the other moiety. (Oldfield and Devadoss, JJ)

When a case has been fully argued before the Court it ought not to be necessary for the pleader to submit notes of their argument. It is the duty of the Court to take such notes of the arguments as it thinks fit when they are being submitted. If Judge feels that he has not fully appreciated any part of the arguments which have been submitted to him, it is open to him to call the parties before him so that any further arguments may be presented in open court in the presence of the other side. If it becomes necessary, as in some exceptional case it may become necessary, for the Court either to require or to receive notes of the pleader's arguments, such notes ought not to be submitted to the Court by the pleader on one side without first submitting the notes to the pleader on the other side. If in any case a pleader desires to submit to the Court the notes of his argument, or of any further argument, which he thinks in the interest of his client ought to be put before the Court, he should submit them to the pleader on the other side so that the latter may have an opportunity of making any remarks or any criticism in respect thereof. ———Agriculturist—Sheikhs—Notification by local Government

A sheikh who bore the title of "sheikh" not by reason of conversion but by reason of his membership of some tribe of sheikhs domiciled in other part of India, could not claim to be a member of the agricultural tribe of sheikhs as notified by the local Government in the Peshawar and Kohat Districts. When a person claiming the privileges of an agriculturist of the Kohat Districts is not even a member of any tribe of sheikhs but has merely received the application "sheikhs" by reason of conversion, it is inconceivable that he can thereby assume membership of the notified agricultural tribe. His title of sheikh however universally, conceded, is nothing more than an honourific appellation. It can no more alter the legal status of the recipient than any other appellation which is conferred upon him by popular opinion. He does not become a member of un-agricultural tribe and cannot without fulfilling the condition laid down in the proviso to S 11 of Act II of 1905 sue for pre-emption in respect of agricultural land (Pipon, J C) MUAZAM SHER v. ——— Custom—Entries in Wajib-ul-arz

The plaintiff in a suit for pre-emption relied on a wajib ul-arz which laid down the existence of a right to pre-empt in the village in question and provided for how disputes were to be settled. There were also some provisions relating to matters of contract Held, it was also a record of custom on which the party could rely (Lindsay and Kanhaiya Lal, JJ) SHER MAHOMED KHAN v PARBHU LAL 21 A L J 801

——— Custom—Evidence of—Entry in Wajib-ul-arz—Value of

A clause in a wajib-ul-arz relating to the transfer of property by a cosharer was to the effect that in case of a transfer by a cosharer of his share by sale or mortgage he must give preference to his cosharers over a stranger. It further went on to say that in case a mortgage given by a cosharer had matured and the mortgagor was unable or want of funds to redeem the mortgage any of his cosharers could pay off the mortgage and retain the share so redeemed until the original mortgagor is in a position to pay his co-sharer Held that the terms of the wajib ul-arz did not show that they were a record of custom (Rafiq and Lindsay, JJ) SHEO BADAN TEWARI v SAHEBZADI KOER 21 A L J 378 L R 4 A 221 45 A 459 1923 A 523 (1)

——— Custom—Proof—Entry in Wajib-ul-arz—Interpretation

Prima facie entry in the Wajib ul-arz is to be treated as an entry of a custom. That has been laid down time and again and has the authority of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. It has, however, always been held that the presumption is liable to be overthrown either by external or internal evidence. In a wajibu-l-arz, the pre-emption clause relied upon was to the following effect: In cases where a mortgage has been made by a co-sharer and where that co-sharer is unwilling to redeem the mortgage created by him at the time when a redemption may be sought, other co-sharers in certain order may come forward and demand and get redemption of the mortgage and may take over the property and keep it for themselves Held, that the clause provided clearly that persons who are strangers to a mortgage have a right of redemption and have a right to recover the property

———Custom—Wajib ul-arz—Birtdars—Contract

An entry in the wajib ul arz that among birtdars the other birtdars must be given the first refusal in cases of transfer was later on changed by introducing the preferential right of nearer co sharers. Held, the whole record embodied only a contract which ended with the period of the settlement and a right of pre-emption based on custom could not be supported. A paragraph in a wajib-ul-arz provided that in the case of a transfer by a co sharer to a stranger some relations in the first instance and failing them co sharers were to take the property in preference to the stranger. Held, this did not prove a custom of pre-emption in the village. ———Custom—Wajib ul-arz—Evidence of custom

An entry as to the right of pre-emption recorded in a Wajib-ul-arz is certainly good prima facie evidence of the existence of the custom unless there is internal evidence in the wajib-ul-arz itself or some other evidence or circumstance to rebut it. If a wajib-ul-arz is of an unusual nature and in the very same clause in which reference is made to pre-emption, reference, is also made to number of other matters which could not possibly have been matters of custom, the presumption would be rebutted. An entry which lays down that a right exists which cannot be based on a custom having the force of law, is valueless as evidence to prove such custom. ———Decree—Equitable relief—Power of court to award

The court need not attach any sanctity to the pre-emptor's right to be given possession nor is the Court in granting a pre-emption decree precluded from moulding the relief according to the justice of the case.

The general principle is that a plaintiff suing for possession will not obtain an unconditional decree in cases, where the party in possession has satisfied an encumbrance subsisting upon the estate at the time he came into possession, which otherwise the plaintiff himself will have to meet. There may be cases in which a Court would hold that the vendee had paid off encumbrances in bad faith or improvidently and would refuse to add this payment to the money payable under the pre-emption decree. Only the interests of the third parties may be involved. But the general rule does apply to pre-emption decrees like other decrees for possession of property. — Right to Relationship—Aziz qarib and Aziz baed

Death or divorce dissolves the tie and relationship between a woman and her husband under the Mahomedan Law, especially if the woman after the death of her first husband marries into another family. — Right to—Remedy of pre-emptor—Procedure

A pre-emptor is not confined to a suit in the Civil Court to enforce his right. He must do one of two things within limitation: he must institute a suit for pre-emption or he must obtain a conveyance from the vendee. If he has done neither of these things, the mere fact that he has stated that he possesses the right, that he has approached the vendee or that they have referred their matter to arbitration, will not prevent the bar of limitation. A pre-emptor who refers the claim to arbitration and then makes an application under Sch. II para 20 is proceeding by suit and the case is governed by the limitation applicable thereto (Simpson and Wasir Hasan, A J C) SHEO DUTT BAHADUR SINGH v BISHUNATH SINGH 74 I, C 206 1923 Oudh 91

— Right to—Sale by Mahomedan to Hindu—Law applicable—Intention of parties

One of two Mahomedan co-sharers in the Bombay Presidency agreed to sell his share in a village to a Hindu, the agreement being made subject to a right in the co-sharer to pre-empt, and as a complete and immediate sale although part of the purchase price was to be paid later and a sale deed executed. The vendor informed his co-sharer that he had sold, and invited him to pre-empt the share sold. The co-sharer thereupon performed the ceremonies of pre-emption and claimed as pre-emptor to recover the share from the purchaser.

Held, that the co-sharer had a right of pre-emption in accordance with the intention of the parties, which had to be looked at, to determine what system of law was to apply and what was to be taken as the date of the sale with reference to which the ceremonies were performed (Viscount Haldane,) SITARAM BHARUA DESH MUKH v SYED JAUL HASAN SIRAJUL KHAN 1923 P C 41

— Right to—When arises—Right when lost

The right to enforce pre-emption arises immediately a sale takes place. It is undoubtedly qualified by the restriction that the pre-emptor himself must maintain his quality as a pre-emptor up to the institution of his suit, but he cannot be prejudiced by the vendee's action subsequent to the sale. There is, of course, one exemption to this rule, namely, in certain cases where a vendee prior to the institution of the suit retransfers the property, to a person who has equal rights with the plaintiff. But it is clearly understood that this exception rests upon one principle only, and that is that the Law recognises claims for pre-emption brought privately and out of Court and that a vendee is entitled to satisfy such a private claim just as much as he is bound to satisfy a claim brought against him in a court of law. In such a case it is the plaintiff who has been prejudiced in respect of his pre-emptive right by the vendee improving his own position but it is a person who is equally entitled with the plaintiff who has enforced his right out of Court, and unless a re-transfer by the vendee is proved to be in satisfaction of such claims a pre-emptor's suit is not affected by any transfer. For purposes of pre-emption the Court must ordinarily take the respective position of the plaintiff and the vendee as they stood at the time of the sale, and not as they stood at the institution of the suit (Pipon, J C) AYA RAM v PARSHOTAM LAL 71 I C 145

PRE EMPTION

— Subject of Serai—Shop—Building—Liability to pre-emption

Where in order to defeat pre-emption the property conveyed is expressed to be a serai, the Court must look outside the terms of the deed to ascertain its real character. It is never an easy question to determine the character of a building for the purpose of pre-emption in as much as the word serai has not been defined by the legislature. The essentials of a serai seem to be that there is general access to the inferior by the public and that it is used for the temporary accommodation of travellers. A building containing rooms let out to different persons or extended periods is not prima facie a serai. The mere fact that an infinitely small portion of the building is used for a shop does not affect the question. A single building should not ordinarily be divided into pre-emptible and non-preemptible portions. It must follow the main characteristics of the whole. That is to say, if the principal use of the building is residential the whole building will be pre-emptible notwithstanding that a small portion may also be used as a shop. Conversely, if the main characteristics of the building are the use of a portion of it for a shop then the whole building will be non pre-emptible. As regards the passing of title to the property it does not pass if there is an intention common to both the parties that ownership should not pass until payment of consideration (Pipon, J C.) AYA RAM v PARSHOTAM LAL 71 I C, 145

The judgment in a suit in the Presidency Small Causes Court at Madras was pronounced on the 10th May 1921. That court was closed for the summer vacation from the 16th May to 16th July inclusive. An application for retrial under S 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, which allows eight days within which to make an application for a new trial, was made on the date of the re-opening after the summer recess. Held that the application was out of time as it could have been presented during the summer recess on day on which the vacation Judge sat. ———Ss 38 and 69—Reference to High Court—Application under S 69—Reference by two of the Judges—Legality of—Form of reference to the High Court

The Small Cause Court is competent to make a reference under Sec 69 on an application under S 38 of the Pres. Towns Ins Act

S 69 authorises a reference when two or more Judges of the Small Cause Court sit together in any suit and differ in their opinion as to any question of law or usage having the force of law or the construction of a document, which construction may affect the merits. The term "suit" is not defined either in the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act or in the Code of Civil Procedure, and its meaning cannot be determined apart from the context. Although S 38 provides for a more extended jurisdiction than what would be technically called a new trial, a jurisdiction analogous to an appeal, yet there is no appeal on facts. But though the power of interference is thus restricted, the application under S 38 is nevertheless an application in the suit and attracts the operation of S 69, providing for a reference to the High Court.

S 69 contemplates a statement of the facts of the case drawn up by the Court, that is, by two or more Judges where the case is heard by more than one Judge. This cannot create any difficulty because when an application under S 38 is heard, the Judges cannot disagree on the facts. There is no appeal on the facts and the facts as found by the trial Judge must be accepted. Consequently, the first step, when a reference is to be made under S 69 is to draw up a statement of the facts of the case to be signed by the Judges. They must then formulate the point on which there is a difference of opinion which is to be accompanied by the statements of the reasons assigned by each Judge in support of his view (Mookerjee and Rankin JJ) M L CHAKRABARTY v OLOF BORIN 50 Cal 919 27 C W N 883 38 C L J 275

It is a novel proposition, that a person who has made himself liable as a guarantor for the payment of a composition in insolvency, should be subject to the insolvency jurisdiction so as to be liable to be dealt with for contempt of Court, if he does not carry out any order made under such jurisdiction. Once a person is re-adjudged an insolvent there is an end of the composition and the liability of the guarantor also ends. A scheme of composition was made so long ago as the 10th of December 1910. By its terms the composition was to be paid within a month from the date, of the order annulling the adjudication order. The adjudication was annulled on the 14th September 1911, and it was not until 29th July 1922 that the Respondents applied for the covenant to be enforced against the appellant. Held that under these circumstances, the peculiar jurisdiction under S 30 (2) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act should not be exercised against the appellant, in his capacity as guarantor, even assuming that the Court has jurisdiction to deal with such a matter under that section. —Ss 38 and 90—Examination of witnesses—Witnesses residing more than 200 miles—Power to summon and examine—C P Code, O 16, R 19

S. 36 (1) of the Insolvency Act provides that the Court may, on the application of the Official Assignee or of any creditor who has proved his debt, at any time after an order for adjudication has been made, summon before it the insolvent or any person known or suspected to have in his possession any property belonging to the insolvent or supposed to be indebted to the insolvent or any person whom the Court may deem capable of giving information respecting the insolvent, his dealings or property.

The person to be summoned does not, at any rate in all cases, fall within the category of an ordinary witness to whom the provisions of O 16 relate. It deals rather with the discovery and recovery of property than with the ordinary testimony which a witness can give, and the proviso to S 90 (1) of the Insolvency Act makes it clear that it was not intended to fetter the Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction under S. 36 by any limitation imposed by the Code of Civil Procedure. established that an assignment by the insolvent to a creditor was fraudulent and void as against the Official Assignee the onus lies upon the transferee if he desires to bring himself within S 56 (2) of the Act to show that not only did he give consideration for the assignment but also that he acted in good faith.

Where an Official Assignee applies to set aside an assignment on the ground that it was fraudulent and void within S 56 of the Pres T Ins Act and he intends to rely upon depositions which have been given by the parties before the Registrar in Insolvency, he should give notice of his intention to do so and such notice should specify the depositions on which he intends to rely. —S 36—Any creditor who has proved his debt—meaning of

The words "any creditor who has proved his debt" in S 36 mean not merely a creditor who has lodged proof of his debt but a creditor whose proof has been admitted by the Official Assignee under the provisions contained in S 25 of the 2nd schedule to the insolvency Act. The mere fact that a person's name was included in the schedule filed by the insolvent and that so far his claim has not been challenged does not assist him if his debt has not been admitted by the Official Assignee. —S 52 (2) (c) — Property hypothecated—Possession with insolvent with permission of creditor—If passes to official Assignee—Withdrawal of consent—Effect

Hypothecated property remaining in the possession of the insolvent with the permission of the creditor will pass to the official Assignee on insolvency. But if the consent is withdrawn even in an informal manner he cannot be said to be in possession "with the owner's consent" and no title will pass to the official Assignee. (*Robinson, C. —S 52 (2) (c) — True owner—If includes owner of equitable charge—Consent of garnishee—Withdrawal

The words "true owner" in S 52 (2) (c) include the owner of an equitable interest in the property. Where the insolvent was in possession of a motor car with the consent of the garnishee but before the insolvency, the garnishee determined such consent by means of a letter demanding the car, the official Assignee cannot be entitled to the car, as the insolvent was not at that time in possession with the consent of the owner.

To find out whether a particular payment amounted to fraudulent preference one must look to the mind of the bankrupt at the time and see if the dominant view was to give preference to a particular creditor. —Agent—Death of agent—Liability of representatives to account—Extent of

It is well established that the representatives of a deceased agent are not liable to render an account in the sense in which the agent, had he lived, might have been called upon to do so. The liability to render accounts is a personal one attaching to the agent and cannot be enforced against his heirs. This does not mean, however, that the heirs must necessarily escape liability altogether for the default or breach of duty of the agent if the principal can prove that he had suffered loss thereby. The burden of proof that the representative have got assets of the deceased agent in their hands and that they are therefore liable is on the plaintiff. The question when under a contract of commission agency the commission is earned depends on the intention of the parties as deduced from the contract and the surrounding circumstances. —Direction by principal to agent to pay funds in his hands for the discharge of the principal's obligation—Communication of the direction to the creditor of the principal—Creation of an equitable assignment in favour of the creditor—Principal, company going into liquidation—Rights of parties in law and equity

The plff placed orders for 2½ tons of a certain yellow metal with the first defendant who was the agent of the 2nd deft., an English Company. The yellow metal arrived and was with the National Bank, Madras and the plff was directed to accept a draft for £462-10-2 when presented by the Bank. It was subsequently agreed by the parties that the plff would remit to 2nd deft a sum of Rs 400 for the yellow metal which he did. But the 2nd deft, had to pay a sum of Rs 359 to the National Bank before they could get delivery of the goods and the 2nd deft wrote to the plff on the 13th January 1921 a letter acknowledging receipt of Rs 400 "As this (amount) has still to be paid to the National Bank to release the documents, we are making the necessary arrangements." The 2nd deft cabled to the 1st deft and also wrote to the 1st deft on the 20th January 1921 "we got this cash and wired to know if you had sufficient cash of ours to hand some Rs 350 or so to the Bank to get the goods. This should save us paying either the Bank or you which is unnecessary while you have funds of ours as we understand at present"

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT

Then the 2nd deft company went into liquidation and neither the money nor the yellow metal was handed over to the plff. In a suit by the plff against the defts 1 and 2 in the alternative held, that the 2nd deft was liable in the sum of Rs 400 to the plff and that the plff was entitled to a charge for the same on the funds of the 2nd deft in the hands of the 1st defendant.

Where there are funds in the hands of an agent belonging to the principal and when the principal gives a mandate to the agent to deliver them in extinguishment of an obligation of the principal to a third party and when the mandate is communicated to the creditor, then there arises on the part of the agent an obligation on which he can be sued both in law and equity in law as on a contract and inequity as upon implied assignment of such funds as there may be in his hands to satisfy pro tanto with those funds the claims of the creditor.

The 1st deft was entitled to pay out of the funds the amount due to the plff in spite of any pressure by the liquidator, as the plff's equitable claim is entitled to preference over the legal rights of the Bank or of the liquidator (Coutts Trotter, J) ANANTHACHARI v MRS. —Joint principals—Liability of agent—Discharge of agent by one of the principals—Effect of

The liability of an agent to account is not a liability that arises by virtue of a contract between the parties but is a liability that is annexed by law to the office of the agent.

So far as the liability of an agent to account to joint principals is concerned the authorities are unanimous that an agent cannot get a discharge by accounting to only one of two co-principals.

Co-principals may jointly appoint an agent to act for them and in such case become jointly liable to him, and may jointly sue him. The agent is not bound to account separately to one of several co principals and if he has done so he is not thereby discharged from liability to the other or others unless the co-principals are also partners.

Where the moneys are received on behalf of joint principals the agent is liable to account to them jointly, and not discharged by payment to one or more of them only, unless by authority of all (Das and Kulwant Sahay, JJ) JAGDIP PARSAD SAHI v, MT RAJO KUER —Payment by a debtor to agent authorised to receive—Receipt by agent as such—Subsequent misappropriation by agent—Whether debtor can recover the amount from the agent.

Plaintiffs owed first defendant a sum of money paid it to the 2nd defendant 1st defendant's agent, as such The second defendant misappropriated it subsequently and did not account for it to the first defendant 1st defendant then obtained a decree against the plaintiffs for the amount as the latter did not appear or plead the discharge
Held, in a subsequent suit by the plaintiffs to recover the amount from the 2nd defendant that they were not entitled to recover the amount

In the above case the 2nd defendant received the amount as his principal's money and plaintiffs who could have pleaded against the 1st defendant in the former suit that he did so receive, cannot, by their failure so to plead enable themselves to recover the amount from the 2nd defendant

In the absence of any mistake on the part of the person paying the amount to the agent, or duress or misconduct on the part of the agent, at the time of the payment of the money, the person who pays the money is not entitled to recover it from the agent, although the agent might not have accounted for the same to his principal

No agent can without the consent of his principal or without a term in his contract authorising him so to do, turn himself into a principal and use his own principal's money and the advantages which he has obtained from his position as agent make a profit for himself. An agent in the true sense of the word is a medium of communication between the two contracting parties and it is imperative that he should not divest himself of his character as agent and become a principal to the transaction. As a protection to the executor the law ordains that every legatee, whether general or specified and whether of chattels real or personal must obtain the executor's assent to the legacy before his title as legatee can be complete and perfect, before such assent however, the legatee has an inchoate right to the legacy such as is transmissible to his own personal representatives in case of his death before it be paid or delivered. Though on the assent of the executor, the full title passes to the legatee, the assent creates no new title it merely perfects the title acquired under the will and if the legacy is void the assent avails nothing. It cannot be said that till the executor has signified his assent express or implied, legatee has no interest whatever in the subject-matter of legacy. The assent of the executor has relation back to the time of the testator's death and confirms an intermediate alienation by the legatee of his legacy (Mookerjee and Cumming, JJ) KHAGENDRA NATH MOOKERJEE v KSHETRA NATH PAL. 50 Cal 171 71 I C 314 1923 Cal 21 order of adjudication was passed. The Court below considered that S 36 of Act III of 1907 was governed by S 16 (6) of the same Act and that, consequently the transactions could be annulled since they took place within two years of the date of the presentation of the petition. Held that the decision was erroneous and ought to be set aside.

S 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907) provides that a transfer of property may be annulled if the transferor is adjudged insolvent within two years after the date of transfer. Under S 16 (6) an order of adjudication shall relate back to and take effect from the presentation of the petition on which it is made, but this cannot mean that for all purposes the date of adjudication is to be taken as identical with the date of presentation of the petition. If there were any doubts on the subject it would be removed by the difference in the phraseology employed in Ss 36 and 37 of the Act. S 37 allows the annulment, in certain cases of transfers, in favour of creditors 'where the transferor is adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date of the transfer'. If the framers of the Act intended that the period provided by each section should terminate on the date of the presentation of the petition for insolvency it is obvious that the words "once a petition presented" which occur in S 37 either should have been inserted also in S 36 or on the supposition that S 16 (6) would apply, should have been omitted altogether. Where the Insolvency Court admits the proof of a creditor whose debt is alleged to be not provable in insolvency, it is open to the insolvent to appeal against the order. The insolvent is a 'person aggrieved' by the order within the meaning of S 46 (1) of the Act III of 1907.

There is nothing in S 24 (3) of Act III of 1907 making it obligatory on a creditor to tender proof of his debt before the discharge of the insolvent. The law of insolvency allows proof of debts at any time during the administration so long as there are assets to be distributed.

An order of discharge of an insolvent on condition that he should, subject to his right to an allowance of Rs 25 per month, for the maintenance of himself and his family, place at the disposal of the Court all property he might afterwards acquire does not amount to such a discharge as is referred to in S 24 (3) of Act III of 1907.

Where a person had a decree which was executable against the insolvent on the date of adjudication, the mere fact that during the pendency of the insolvency proceedings the period of twelve years prescribed by S 48, C P C had expired, does not prevent the decree-holder from proving his debt in insolvency. Ss 36 and 37 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907) are only rules of evidence or special rules of substantive law applicable to particular kinds of transfer by the insolvent and apart from the provisions of these sections the Court has power to enquire into the real existence of an alleged secured debt in favour of a particular scheduled creditor of the insolvent. In cases not falling within Ss 36 and 37 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the mere fact that a transfer by way of a mortgage is found to be voluntary, does not entitle the Insolvency Court to set it aside.

On 28-6-1919 a creditor presented a petition for adjudicating his debtor an insolvent under S 6 (4) of Act III of 1907. The petition having been presented to a wrong Court was returned and represented to the District Court (which was the proper Court) on 1910—1919. The act of insolvency on which the petition was founded was an alleged fraudulent transfer by the debtor of his property on 31-3-1919 and the insolvency petition was presented to the District Court more than three months after that date. On 21-2-1921 the District Court purporting to act under S 78 of Act V of 1920 excused the delay in the presentation of the petition and ordered an enquiry on the merits. Held on appeal that the petition had become barred while Act III of 1907 was in force and that the District Court had no power under S 78 of Act V of 1920 to excuse the delay so as to revive a barred right.

Per Spencer, J S 6 (4) of Act III of 1907 makes the occurrence of an act of insolvency within three months of the date of the presentation of a creditor's petition, a condition precedent to a lawful presentation and this provision is quite independent of the statute of limitations (Spencer and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ) AIYAPARAJU v VENKATA KRISHNAYYA

—Art 35—Suit by landlord for recovery of trees cut away by tenant—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court—Interference in revision

A Zemindar sued his tenant for a certain sum of money alleging that the latter had wrongfully cut and carried a tree belonging to him and the tenant pleaded the tree was his own. The Small Cause Court decreed the suit and the defendant applied for revision. Held that the case did not fall within Art. 35 Cl. (2) of the Prov. Small Cause Courts Act and that the High Court was not obliged to interfere even if the plea of the defendant was a good one (Lindsay, J.) KUNWAR PAL v. BAKSHI MADAN MOHAN 21 A. L. —Art. 35 (II)—Misappropriation of rent paid.

The plaintiff held certain land in an estate though he was not formally recorded as tenant.

The amount paid by him had not been credited by the defendant Zileadar of the state against the rent due from the plaintiff and must therefore have been misappropriated. Held a suit to recover back money paid to the defendant and misappropriated by him is a suit for compensation within the meaning of article 35 (ii) of sch. —Art 43 A—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court—Suit for value of coal wrongfully appropriated—Interest at 24 per cent—power to grant

The plaintiff instituted a suit for the recovery of a sum of money due on a chit executed by defendant under the following circumstances. The defendant in collusion with some Railway servants took some coal belonging to the plff, and misappropriated it. Plaintiff and defendant had some discussion over it as a result of which the defendant executed a chit promising to pay a particular sum made up in a particular way. The plaintiff in summing on the chit alleged fraud misappropriation on the part of the defendant and of his executing a chit. The plaintiff claimed interest at 24 per cent which was awarded by the court below. Held in revision, that the suit was one upon the chit executed by defendant and was not one for damages either for theft of coal or for the conversion of the coal in any sense. Consequently the suit was maintainable in the Small Cause Court. Though 24 per cent was a high rate of interest it could not be said that the court had no jurisdiction to execute it (Rankin, J.) RAKHAL CHANDRA CHATTERJEE v ROHINE KUMAR CHATTERJEE. 27 C W N 549 37 C L J 389. 74 I. S. 111 does not deal with questions of the title or with the questions relating to the right of a joint land-owner to obtain or compel partition which in fact is governed by sections 116 and 177 of the Act.

S 111 merely concedes to a widow a locus standi before a Revenue Officer for claiming, that is, for applying, for partition which she may or may not be entitled to obtain in virtue of her life estate, the proper Course for the Revenue Officer in such a case would be to proceed under S. 117 and to either stay the proceedings for the determination of the question of the widow's right to obtain partition by a competent Court or to determine the question himself as if he were a Civil Court.

The mere fact that the partition has taken place is no sufficient reason for holding that a civil suit subsequently instituted to decide the question of title which has not been disposed of during the partition proceedings, is barred (Martineau and Moti Sagar, JJ) SANT SINGH v MT BASANTKAUR

The accused erected certain projections over hanging a public street without the permission of the Municipal Committee. The committee issued a notice under Ss. 172 and 195 for their removal. ## PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT (II OF 1905), S. 3 (2) and (3)—Town—Municipal limits—Inclusion of rural area

An administrative act including an area within the limits of a Municipality does not necessarily operate to destroy the pre-existing character of the area and such an administrative action is not in itself sufficient to make the area so included a sub division of a town for the purposes of pre-emption. At the same time the inclusion of an area in Municipal limits is strong evidence of the urban character of that area.

It is not the law that any portion of an agricultural village may lose its character as such and become, by the force of circumstances, a suburb of a town, and a suburb of this nature is to be regarded as a sub division of a town, (Pipon J C) SHEER ALI v. KALANDAR KHAN.

S 3 (5) (a)—Sale by Guardian appointed by court with sanction of court—Presumption

S. 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act prohibits the sale by a guardian of the property of a ward without permission of the Court. The Court under this section makes no order for sale, but merely authorises a transaction which would otherwise not be binding upon the minor. The sale is in fact of a transaction inter partes approved of by the Court. The Court having approved of the contemplated sale has no further stay in the matter. Consequently such a sale is not exempt from the law of pre-emption and S 3 (5) (a) of the Pre-emption Act has no application to the case, (Shadi Lal C. J. and Fforde, J.) SALIG RAM v. BARKAT ALI

In answer to a suit for possession brought by the plaintiffs the defendant appellant set up a sale to him under the provision of S 53 of the Tenancy Act

It was not the intention of the legislature to render the action of a tenant irrevocable once he had made an application under clause (2) of S 53 and that a tenant has as much right to refuse to carry on the proceedings as the landlord has to refuse to accept the valuation of the right of occupancy by the Revenue Officer. It will be seen that under sub S (5) of S 53 the Revenue Officer after having decided on the value has to fix a date by which the landlord has to pay the ascertained price, but that the landlord is not compelled to pay that price and may resile from the position taken up by him under sub-clause (3). In a suit for damages for goods consigned to a Railway under Risk note from B the onus is initially on the plaintiff consignor to show wilful neglect or theft apart from mere loss of goods. Wilful neglect is mostly to be inferred from the circumstances Where the sealed waggon containing the goods is kept at a jungle side railway yard for 2 days with no protection against thieves and the seals are found broken the court can infer the loss is due to wilful default (Sulasman, J) EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY v SRI RAM MAHADEO 21 A L J 886 L R 4 A 612

Where a plaintiff who consigned his goods for carriage by the defendant railway Co under a risk-note in Form B brought a suit for compensation for non-delivery of the goods, the defendant company cannot escape liability by having recourse to the Risk-note unless they have pleaded loss or destruction in their written statement In such a case the plaintiff may rest his claim on the presumption that the goods were still in the possession of the Railway Company, a presumption which may be raised under S, 114 Illn (d) of the Evidence Act. The reason why it is so necessary to lay stress on the pleadings in such a case is this—that the plaintiff has already a very heavy burden indeed and that it would not be just to increase the burden by excusing the defendant from the necessity of pleading loss or 'destruction' It may be loss in the ordinary sense of the word or it may be destruction by fire or water or vermin but the plaintiff should at least have some knowledge that the

The plaintiff sued the defendant Railway Company for damages in respect of short delivery of goods The plaintiffs had signed the risk note B, and in order to recover the plaintiff had to prove that the loss was due to theft by or to the wilful neglect of the company's servants, transport agent, or carriers employed by them before during and after transit over the said railway or other railway lines working in connection therewith, etc, provided that the term "wilful neglect" could not be held to include fire robbery from a running train or other unforeseen accident Held that although in equity the railway company ought to give such information to their customers as is in their possession with regard to the loss of goods delivered to them under the law it was not incumbent upon them to do so and they were not obliged to go out of their way to assist the plaintiff in proving wilful neglect In this country it may be adopted as a safe rule that the railway should produce before the Court for examination those of their servants who were in a position to be acquainted with the facts relating to the disappearance of their customer's goods Smith, Ltd v G W, Ry Co (1922) 1 A C 178 Ref (*Macleod, C. The plaintiff made over to the defendant railway several parcels of mangoes for transit from Sabaranpor to Lahore. At the time of sending the goods the plaintiff executed a Risk-note in Form B. The goods were delayed in transit and did not reach Lahore till a fortnight after and by that time the fruits had become rotten. Delivery was offered to the consignee but was refused by him and the goods were then destroyed by the railway. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover the value of consignment, the Railway Company claimed the protection of the Risk-note Form B, pleading that as there was no loss of the goods by them, the plaintiff could not recover. The Court below found that the delay in the transit of the goods and the resulting deterioration of the fruit was due to gross negligence on the part of the railway servants. Held that though the deterioration was due to the neglect of the Railway servant, the contract of indemnity contained in the Risk note excluded the defendant's liability. The word "loss" in the risk-note meant loss by the Railway administration and could not mean loss to owner in the sense of injury to him arising out of his being deprived of his goods. 1897 P R 23 referred to. The right of a Railway Company to limit its liability in consideration of a reduction of the freight by special agreement has been recognised. The burden of proving wilful neglect on the part of the Railway Administration or its servants lies on the plaintiff. Wilful neglect may be inferred from the fact that the steps taken to secure the goods against loss by theft were inadequate. The plaintiff sued the defendant Railway Co for damages for failure to deliver a bale of cotton which he had consigned at Nagpur for delivery to himself at Ahmedabad. The plaintiff had executed Risk Note in Form B Held that to lay a foundation for the company's liability the plaintiff would have to prove non-delivery, loss destruction, or deterioration of the goods bailed but the responsibility under S 72 (1) might be limited by special contract as provided in S 72 (2) Risk Note Form B is one form of such contract. Where the Railway Company admit non-delivery but set up in defence the Risk note, it is for them to plead and prove the circumstances in which the Risk Note is intended to operate and exempt them from liability or in other words, the goods have been lost or destroyed. Neither a mere allegation or loss by the Company nor an admission of non-delivery by the plaintiff is proof of such loss. If the Railway Company prove the loss, which they may do, they are exempted from liability by the risk note unless the plaintiff prove that his cases come within the exception mentioned therein, it may be that the loss alleged by the Railway Company is admitted by the plaintiff. It cannot be said in every instance that the amount that a tenant is able to obtain from his sub-tenants is always to be taken as the rateable value, but that amount may be taken into consideration with all the other facts governing the question. It is no doubt necessary that the landlord should show that he is acting bona fide that it is his real intention to pull down and eject and that he has means to carry out his intention for no landlord could be permitted to eject his tenant on such a plea if he had no real intention of carrying out his purpose. Where after the final decree on a simple mortgage is passed in a mortgage suit and before the sale, a receiver is appointed of the properties of the mortgagor in a partition suit between then and the Receiver applies to be made a party to the execution proceedings, he ought to be made a party. The mere fact that there is a mortgage on the property in the hands of the Receiver would not take the case out of the general rule that no process can be permitted in respect of the properties in the hands of a receiver without the sanction of the court which appointed him.

Property in the possession of a receiver is in the custody of the law and cannot be seized under a writ of attachment or execution. It is in the discretion of the court to refuse to permit a sale of the property its possession under a judgment though the levy was made before the Receiver was appointed 26 C 127 doubted.

The Receiver in such a case is not a new party under O 1, R 10 C. P Code and that rule does not stand in the way of the Receiver being made a party.

Ss 2 (7) and 17 (2)—Agreement to lease What constitutes—Necessity for registration

The distinction between agreements to lease which are covered by S 2 (7) of the Registration Act and those which are not, lies in the fact of the lease itself being intended to begin at once or at some time in the future. Every promise to grant a lease must in its nature create or assign some interest in the property to be leased, but unless the promise is to grant an immediate lease which is to come into existence even before any other document has been executed, it is an agreement to lease outside the class of such agreement of which alone S 2 (11) of the Registration Act speaks. A document styled a receipt and stamped as such was executed by the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs. The gist of the document was as follows: "We have this day given you a lease for 12 years of a half share in the lac parasadi of our malguzari jungle for Rs 7,000. We have received Rs. 6,000 of this to-day and you will pay us the remaining Rs 1,000 at the time of execution and registration of the lease deed. As no 8 anna stamp is available at this time we have passed this receipt." Within two months we will execute the deed of agreement and the deed of lease and get them registered. If we fail to do this we will pay you twice six thousand, that is, twelve thousand. From this day you may look after the jungle and propagate lac in it or you may sell the right in it to another person. You are to take all the crops for twelve years, that is twenty-three crops, twelve hari and eleven unhari. The plaintiff took possession of the property mentioned in the document and filed a suit for compelling the defendants to execute a lease. Held that the document in question was an agreement to lease and as such inadmissible in evidence without registration (Hallifax, A J C) SONOO v BHADARIA 19 N L E 186 6 N L J 151 71 I C 466 1923 Nag 171

Where title deeds are handed over with nothing except that they are to be security the law supposes that the scope of the security is the scope of the title. Where however title deeds are handed over accompanied by a bargain, the bargain must rule. Lastly, when the bargains is a written bargain it alone must determine what is the scope and extent of security. Although it is a well established rule of equity that deposit of a document of title without more, without writing, or without word of mouth, will create in equity a charge upon the property referred, to that general rule will not apply when there is a deposit accompanied by an actual written charge. In that case the terms of the written document must be referred to and any implication that must be raised supposing that there was no document is put out of the case and reduced to silence by the documents by which alone the case has to be governed (Lord Carson). *SUBRAMANIAN v. Where it was found that a portion of the property included in a mortgage deed did not belong to the mortgagors, was not really intended to be mortgaged, and was included in the deed merely to give jurisdiction to the registrar who registered the mortgage deed, held that there was a fraud on the registration law, and that the registration of the deed obtained by means thereof was invalid.

The mortgage in the case contained a personal covenant to repay and a question arose as to the period of limitation applicable to a claim to enforce that covenant, that is whether the covenant was a registered covenant within the meaning of Article 116 of the Limitation Act.

Held, that, as, under S 29 of the Registration Act, a deed containing only such a covenant could be registered at any place, the registration of the deed in regard to the covenant, was valid, the covenant was a registered covenant and a claim to enforce the same was governed by the 6 years, period provided for by Art. 116 (Phillips and Devadoss, JJ); DRONAMARAJU RAMA RAO v K VEDAYYA, 44 M L J 373

A suit for specific performance lies when the lease essential for the completion of the contract has not been executed, and if there is a valid enforceable contract, either party is entitled to call upon the other to complete the transaction by the execution and registration of the document of title. This is so even if the correspondence between the parties is inadmissible in evidence without registration. 42 C 801, 39 M 509, 19 C L J 213 referred to 22 C I. —S 17 (d)—Lease—Registration

In considering whether a lease is compulsorily registrable or not, the test to be applied is whether there was a present demise for a year only or for a period of more than one year. Where a lease was for one year but gave the lessee option to continue in possession, the existence of the option does not create a lease for a term exceeding one year, and as such the document is not compulsorily registrable (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ) FAJUDDIN v. —Ss 72, 76 and 77—Refusal to register—Refusal to admit to registration or accept for registration—Distinction—Remedy by suit

There are three different expressions used in the Act, refusal to register, refusal to admit for registration and refusal to accept for registration S 72, where it says, that 'An appeal shall lie against an order of the Sub-Registrar refusing to admit a document for registration,' refers to or case when registration has been refused rather than to cases where a Sub-Registrar has declined to accept a document at all at the first stage of his proceedings, in other words, refusal to admit to registration and refusal to register are the same thing. The Act, however, evidently intended some distinction between refusal to accept for registration and refusal to register S 19 of the Act lays down that the registering officer shall refuse to register a document which is in a language which he does not understand S 20, lays down that a registering officer may in his discretion refuse to accept for registration a deed in which an interlineation, erasure, etc., occurs. S 21 again uses the expression 'accept for registration' in prescribing the conditions necessary for the proper description of property to which a document relates. Where a sub Registrar refused to register a document mainly on the ground that the document was vague, that it was not executed in counter-part, and that execution was denied, there is a clear and unmistakeable refusal to register and one which was made not at the preliminary hearing but after a regular proceeding to which both the parties had been summoned (*Pipon, J. The mere absence of verification as required by S 73 (2) did not make the application one not in conformity to the provisions of that section, as the defect is merely one of form and not of substance (Abdul Raoof and Moti Sagar, JJ.) *UTTAM SINGH v. ## —Dedication—What constitutes—Founder who is—Erecting temple on Land granted by another—Devolution of the trusteeship—Shebait—Pujari—Position of

When the worship of an idol has been founded the shebaitship is vested in the founder and his heirs unless he has disposed of it otherwise or there has been some usage or course of dealing which points to a different mode of devolution 17 C 3, 32 C 129, 35 A 283, 11 C L J 2, 40 C 251, 29 A 663, 22 C L J 404, 36 A 161 Rel In the application of this rule it may not always be easy to determine who are the founders One person may provide the site of the temple another may build the temple and establish the idol, while a third may dedicate property for the performance of the daily services of the idol Where the owner of the site relinquishes his right in the land, he may not be a founder unless he indicates at the time expressly or impliedly, that he will associate himself with others in carrying out the objects of the foundation Prima facie all the persons who establish the worship are entitled to take part in the management If a number of persons provide the original endowment, they together constitute the founder But persons who subsequent to the foundation furnish additional contributions do not thereby become joint founders; their benefaction is regarded as nothing beyond an accretion to an existing foundation 24 M 219, 7 M 499, 17 C 3 Ref

The shebaitship is vested in the founder and his heirs unless he has disposed of it otherwise equally in the case of private and public endowments No distinction between the two classes of cases has been drawn in this respect in the judicial decisions 18 A 227, 11 C L J 2, 40 C 251, 5 C, 228, 40 M 612 Rel.

Consequently whether a foundation is public or private the three fold principle is applicable namely, (1) the devolution of the trust on the death or default of each trustee, depends upon the terms on which it was created, of the usage of the particular institution where no express trust deed exists, (ii) the worship of the idol is vested in the

RELIGIOUS OFFICE—Surrender—Rights of the other members of the family—Right to transfer office

Hereditary offices, whether religious or secular are treated by the texts as indivisible. But modern custom has sanctioned such partition as can be had of such property by means of the performance of the duties of the office and the enjoyment of the emoluments by the different co-parceners in rotation. The office remains in the family and the transfer by one member of his share to another member of the family could not be considered in any way objectionable. It would only reduce the number of members who are entitled to the office and a share in the emoluments. If all the members of the family agree to give up the duties of performance of worship and receiving emoluments, there could be no objection to their doing so. But there is a great difference between the whole group of members surrendering their rights to the grantor and one member purporting to give up his right to the grantor which would cause an interference with the rights of the other members of the family. The duties of the office and the emoluments appertaining thereto remain with the family of the original grantee and those members of the family, who wish to retain the office and share the emoluments, are entitled to do so, and if one of the members of the family, wishes to get rid of his duties as well as his rights he could only do so in favour of the remaining members of the family, and he cannot evade the ordinary rule as to alienations by purporting to surrender his share to the original grantor or put in other words, the alienation of a share by one member of the family is invalid whether it is made in favour of an outsider altogether or whether it is made in favour of the original grantor of the office (Macleod, C J and Crump, J) RAGHUNATH VITHAL BHAT v PURNANAND 47 Bom 529 25 Bom L R. 207 72 I C 314 1923 Bom 358

Though the purchaser joined in the fraud after the default had been made he cannot by reason of his entering into the agreement before the sale which was the machinery by which the fraud to be carried out and with knowledge thereof, be permitted to enjoy to the detriment of others the benefits which result to a purchaser at a sale for arrears of rent or revenue 10 M I A 540, 12 C L J 336, 18 W R 240 Ref (Chatterjee and Pantun, JJ) LEJENDRA CHANDRA DHAR v DURGADAS DUTT, 1923 Cal 324

SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT, S. 9

In the absence of anything to show an abandonment of a sleeping over of rights to the detriment of third parties, delay short of the period of limitation does not matter in suits for specific performance To operate as a bar to relief, delay must be of such a character as either to prejudice the defendant or lead him to the belief that plaintiff has waived his rights (*Kennedy J C and Raymond, A. —§ 9—Suit for possession—Occupancy right.

In a suit on possessory title the court decrees the suit only when it finds the plff in peaceful possession before dispossession, the plff's previous possession being in law sufficient proof of title. In a suit under S 9 of the Sp Rl Act, the court is empowered to go only into the question of dispossession within 6 months before and not into the deft's title. 20 C 834, 26 M 314 foll (Pratt, J) MA SAW v. —§s 12 and 19—Agreement to give land

Where a defendant agreed to give land to plaintiff who was to help him in recovering it, held, the agreement should be specifically enforced because the breach of it could not be adequately compensated for, by money (Prideaux, A J C) SHRIRAM v BABAJI 71 I C 40 1923 Nag 47

—§ 14—Agreement to sell immovable property—Property charged before sale—Rights of purchaser

In a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell even if the plff knows that there was a claim against the defendant for maintenance, there would be nothing in that fact to put the plff, on notice that there was an incumbrance on the suit property, and even if the defendant sold the property he would still be liable to provide maintenance out of the sale proceeds which would in spite of the sale retain the character of the ancestral property. The case comes within S 14 of the Specific Relief Act and the plaintiff is entitled to compensation for the burden which is imposed upon the property he contracted to buy owing to the decree passed for maintenance (Macleod, C J. and Crump, J) CHHOTABHAI HIRACHAND v MAGANABHAI NAGINBHAI 1923 Bom 271

—§s 14, 17 and 21—Minor—Contract to sell property by defacto guardian—Specific performance—Transferee for value—Right of pre-emption if a defence to suit for specific performance

Where a de facto guardian has entered into a contract with a third party for the sale of a minor's property, to direct the contract to be carried into effect as against the minors without the sanction of the Court is to sanction a plain breach of trust on the part of the de facto guardian, and this the Court will not do.

No distinction can be drawn between a contract for purchase and a contract for sale. The decision of the Judicial Committee in 39 C 232 (P. C.) rests on the broader ground that it is quite impossible for the Court to decree specific performance against a minor.

The operation of S 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act is confined to cases where the contracts are in the first instance enforceable as against the parties to the contract. The liability of a person claiming under a party to the contract rests upon the antecedent liability of a party to the contract, and arises by reason of the fact that as such transferee he takes the subject to the transferor's pre existing contractual obligation, and where there is no pre-existing contractual obligation, it seems that the case entirely fails as against the transferee. It is quite clear that you cannot enforce a contract as against a transferee unless the transferee has notice of the original contract. Notice of the original contract must mean notice of an existing obligation under the contract, and where the contract is itself unenforceable it seems that it is impossible to maintain the view that the contract can be enforced as against a subsequent transferee. As a rule the Court will not compel specific performance of a contract unless it can execute the whole contract. Where, however, the contract is in substance divisible, there is nothing to prevent the court from carrying into effect that part of it which is capable of being carried into effect. Where the subsequent purchaser of property is one who has a right of pre-emption the Court will not decree specific performance against him (Das and Foster, JJ) SHEIKH ABDUL HUQ v MD YEHA KHAN, 4 Pat L. T 553

—§ 16—Contract if divisible—Specific performance as to part

Where after an agreement to sell two plots of lands, it was discovered that one of them belonged to the vendor's wife, the vendee can under S 16 Specific Relief Act claim performance of so much of the contract as related to the vendee's own plot with a proportionate abatement in the price settled upon.

The question whether a contract is divisible or not is one of construction depending on the facts of each case (Ghose and Pantan, JJ) KRISHNA CHANDRA DEY v GRAHAM 50 Cal 700 27 C W N 693 75 I. C 421 1923 Cal, 694 —§ 20—Agreement to pay damages—Breach of contract—Specific performance if claimable.

In a contract to sell, parties agreed that in case of breach of contract, the earnest money was to be returned and damages paid. Held, this does not preclude a suit for specific performance being instituted by the vendee (Martineau and Moti, Sagar, JJ) SADIQ HUSAIN v ANUP SINGH, 4 Lah 327

—§ 22—Delay in completing sale—Right to make time essence of contract—Earnest money—Return of

In a contract to purchase land, the defendant on receipt of earnest money agreed to complete the sale in two months. This was not done and after a waiting of 6 months, plaintiff called upon defendant to complete the sale within 3 months, failing which he brought his suit for return of earnest money etc. Held, he was entitled to make time the essence of the contract at that stage and was not bound to wait till deft could place himself in a legal position to do his part of the contract. Also, the defendant could not after the suit was filed demand specific performance, but was liable to return the earnest money with interest (Shah A C J and Crump, J) KARSANDAS PURSHOTTAMDAS v GOPALDAS 25 Bom L. ## —S 22—Discretion of court—Abandonment of claim for specific performance—If allowed—Time if essential

On failure to comply with the terms of an agreement to sell, plaintiff filed a suit for specific performance and in the alternative for return of deposit money and damages. During the course of the suit he gave up the first claim. On account of depreciation of value, the vendor who had throughout refused to convey and thus committed a breach of contract, expressed his willingness to execute the conveyance. Held under the circumstances, the contract not being performed within the reasonable time fixed there was a breach, and though the suit was filed on the basis of a subsisting agreement, plaintiff could withdraw his claim to specific performance and confine its claim to damages, etc and that such withdrawal was not a repudiation entitling the defendant to refuse the return of the deposit money (Fawcett and Coyajee, JJ.) KARSANDAS KALIDAS v CHHOTALAI MOTICHAND

From the time a contract for the sale of land is entered into the vendor, as to the land, becomes a trustee for the vendee, and the vendee, as to the purchase money, a trustee for the vendor, who has a lien upon the land therefor. And every one coming in by subsequent representative title and every subsequent purchaser from him either with notice, becomes subject to the same equities as the party would be to whom he succeeds or from whom he purchased. The onus of proving a bona fide purchase for value without notice of the prior contract for sale is on the person setting up. Proof of payment of full consideration for the sale in ignorance of the original contract of sale raises a presumption of good faith (Abdul Raoof and Harrison, JJ) KANSHI RAM v ISHWAR DAS 5 L L J 150. 1923 Lah 108

— S 27 (b) — Contract to sell—Subsequent conveyance in favour of a third person—Notice of prior contract—Occupation of superstructure

In the case of contracts for purchase of immoveable property the general principle of constructive notice is that notice of occupation (of the property purchased) by a person other than the vendor, which indicates that the vendor is not entitled to present possession at once puts the purchaser on enquiry as to the interest that the occupier holds in the property. The usual case is where the property is physically occupied by tenants, and then the purchaser, is by that occupation itself which puts him on enquiry in law affected with notice of the interest which these tenants have in the property. He is by their occupation not affected with notice of more than the term on which they held including any agreement collateral to their leases but is not bound to enquire, nor are they bound to answer to him they pay rent, so that the purchaser is not in such a case affected with notice of the tenant's or lessor's title or rights. This is the general principle laid down in the English cases and has been embodied in India in S 27 of the Specific Relief Act. So that where nothing more is known to the purchaser or would be known to him on reasonable enquiry than the fact that certain tenants are in occupation under a tenant right he is not affected with notice of more than the fact as to those tenants' rights. But when beyond this the purchaser is directly informed and therefore knows of the occupation of the property by another whether by himself or by his sub tenants he is equally put upon notice of entire into the interests of that other. This is not extension of the principle above mentioned, but a mere application of it. It makes no difference whether the occupation by another is brought to his notice by physical occupation or by information. Where the purchaser is definitely informed that another is in occupation of the property whether by himself directly or through sub tenants, he is at once put on enquiry as to the nature of the interest of that other in the property. The absence of such enquiry will fasten the purchaser with all the equities which the occupier holds against the purchaser's vendor (Schwabe C J and Wallace J) BABA SAH v HAJEE MAHOMED AKBAR SAHIB. 43 M L J 157 : 17 L W 541 : (1923) 11 W N 230 : 32 M L T (H C) 301 : 73 I C 287 : 1923 Mad 563.

There are two kinds of relief after judgment for specific performance of which either party to the contract may in a proper case avail himself. He may obtain (on motion in the action) an order appointing a definite time and place for the completion of the contract by payment of the unpaid purchase money and delivery over of the executed conveyance and title deeds, or a period within which the judgment is to be obeyed, and if the other party fails to obey the order, may thereupon at once issue a writ of sequestration against the defaulting party's estate and effects. He may apply to the Court (by motion in the action) for an order rescinding the contract. On an application of this kind, if it appears that the party moved against has positively refused to complete the contract its immediate rescission may be ordered, otherwise, the order will be for rescission in default of completion within a limited time. It is not necessary in such cases to drive the parties to a fresh suit or rescission of the contract. The words "in the same case" in the last para of S 35 of the Specific Relief Act refer to clause (C) and the Court has power to make an order in the suit in which the decree was made (Macleod, C J, and Crum, J) KURPAL HEMRAJ v SHAM RAO 47 Bom 589 25 Bom L R 234 72 I C, 321 1923 Bom 211

—§ 39—Declaration that a deed is void and inoperative—Literacy of plaintiff.

Where a person is induced to execute a document other than that he had undertaken to execute, the document is void and need not be cancelled. If an illiterate man has a deed falsely read over to him and he then seals and delivers the parchment, that parchment is nevertheless not his deed. This doctrine was not confined to the condition of an illiterate grantor and it made no difference whether the grantors were lettered or unlettered. The essential position is that if a grantor or a covenantor be deceived or misled as to the actual contents of the deed, the deed does not bind him. Nor this principle is limited in its application to deeds but the doctrine is equally applicable to other written contracts (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ) UMARANNESSA BIBI v JAMIRANNESSA BIBI 37 C L J 499 1923 Cal. 362

A suit for a declaratory decree should not be dismissed on the ground that it is barred by the proviso to S. 42 Specific Relief Act unless it is quite clear that the plaintiff should seek further relief which he has failed to claim, although such relief flows directly and necessarily from the declaration sought for. ## S. 42—Suit for declaration—Attachment of property—Ancestral property—Suit by sons for declaration—Maintainability

There can be no doubt that an attachment infringes the right of the judgment-debtor and has the effect of placing the property in custodia legis, but it does not by itself amount to an infringement of the rights of the reversioners to the property. It is possible, nay it is probable, that the attachment will lead to an alienation, and if the alienation is not confined to the period of judgment-debtor's life time, the plaintiffs (reversioners) will then be entitled to impeach the alienation. It is, however, clear that where no alienation has so far been made, the mere attachment does not give the plaintiffs (reversioners) a cause of action for a declaration that their rights will not be affected (*Shadi Lal, C. ## STAMP ACT, S 2.

The tendency of modern decisions is that even if the court has jurisdiction to restrain Criminal proceedings for the recovery of a penalty imposed by a statute for breach of its enactments, it will not interfere as a general rule. The principle is that though the extreme position cannot be maintained that there is absolutely no jurisdiction in the court to restrain proceedings before a magistrate, the court will not interfere unless in very special circumstances by way of injunction on declaration of right where the Legislature has pointed out a mode of procedure before a magistrate. It has been maintained, however, that a court of equity may in a proper case interfere by injunction to restrain an act or proceeding, Criminal or Quasi Criminal in form which tends to the impairment of property rights and proceedings for the enforcement of Municipal ordinances. It is also a well-settled rule that it is not the practice of the court to interfere with corporate bodies, unless they are manifestly abusing the powers (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v BEJOY KUMAR ADDI

—Ss 100, 101, 102—Applicability to Parsis

The rules in Ss 100, 101, 102 constitute the law of British India applicable to succession to the property of everyone except Hindus, Mohammedans or Buddhists. They are, therefore, applicable to those subjects to a variety of systems of jurisprudence, and must therefore be constructed according to the generally current meaning of the words used and apart from such technical considerations as are only appropriate in the law of England. Where the will was that of a Parsi Held, though the principle of joint family may not apply to a Parsi with the rigidity with which it applies, for example, in the case of a Hindu, still the conception of joint family right which is common in oriental countries ought not to be left wholly out of sight in interpreting the words of a Parsi. When the executors were enjoined to permit occupation to the daughter until death or marriage and to all the sons and also all their respective families during as well as after the respective lifetimes of the sons, including the widows of the testator's lineal male descendants the testator ought to be contemplated as having before his mind the family arrangements which would be natural in the case of his own sons. In the cases of the sons the title conferred on them to occupy extended to occupation along with their wives and families. The question is one purely of intention as shown by the particular words used in this will.

Where there is a direction implying a postponement of the division of the residue for ten years, or until the death of the last surviving son, the direction is inoperative, the interest to which it attaches being absolute (Viscount Haldane) PUTLIBAI v SORABJI NAORAOJI.

—Ss 204 227 228 and 246—Letters of administration—Joint letters when granted coheirs of equal degree—Rights of Special circumstances should be made out before granting joint letters of administration and even where the claimants are equal in degree of kindred to the deceased, only one should be appointed according to the established practice. The Court should prefer a sole to a joint administration and even where several persons stand in the same degree of kinship to the deceased it is the rule to select one only, the selection being made according to certain recognised principles. The interest of the estate which has to be administered and the interests of the parties entitled thereto must be primarily looked to and other things being equal a person with business capacity and experience will be preferred to one who has none. Where two persons are equally entitled by consanguinity, preference will frequently be given to the one chosen by the majority of those entitled to the distribution of the assets although other considerations may be sufficient to overrule the wishes of the majority of those interested. A son as a rule will be preferred to a daughter and where none of the usual tests can be applied the Court frequently appoints the applicant who is first in the field. The Court never forces a joint administration upon unwilling parties. Where the applicants are quarrelling between themselves and are antagonistic to each other the administration of the estate is likely to suffer. As they must act jointly one of them if obstinate, could defeat the proper administration of the estate. 5 C L R 38 Ket

S 204 of the Succession Act does no more than state that those who are in equal degree of kindred to the deceased are all, from that point of view alone equally entitled to be appointed administrator but the section does not say that they are all entitled to be appointed jointly. Under S 225 of the Act the Court is given very wide powers where it considers necessary or convenient to appoint some person to administer the estate other than the person who in ordinary circumstances would be entitled to the grant. There is nothing in the Act which makes it obligatory upon the Court to grant letters of administration to all persons who may be entitled thereto merely by reason of their equal nearness of kin to the deceased. Separate letters of administration can be granted under Ss 227 and 228 of the Succession Act where the deceased leaves a will in respect of a person of his properties and the rest has to be administered by a person other than the executor of the will (Miller, C J and Foster J) STONEY v STONEY 2 Pat 251 4 Pat L T 151 (1923) Pat 130 72 I C 811 1923 F 348 (2)

Ss 5 and 6—Jurisdiction to grant certificate—District Court—Residence

The jurisdiction to confer a succession certificate is given by S 5 of the Succession Certificate Act and that jurisdiction is not enlarged by S 6 (1) of the Act which relates merely to procedure. Prima facie a District Court has no jurisdiction to grant a succession certificate where the deceased has not ordinarily resided within the local limits of its jurisdiction. Where however the deceased at the time of his death had no fixed place of residence at all the certificate may be granted by the Court within whose jurisdiction any part of the deceased's property may be found (Robinson, C J and Macgregor, J) CHAN PYU v CHAN CHOR KHINE 2 Bur L J 42 75 I C 225 1923 Rang 238

S 9—Security when to be demanded—Interest of reversioners

In the ordinary way a Hindu widow ought not to be called upon to give security at all. There may be reversioners who are interested but it is not the business of the Court to go out of its way to look after the reversioners who have no vested interest and to assume everything against the widow. The fact that the widow is engaged in handing over the estate either to her brother or to religious institutions is not a reason for creating an obstacle to her recovering debts before they become time barred.

The petitioner obtained a certificate of succession under Act VII of 1889 to collect certain debts of a deceased person. That application was refused by the Munsif who was empowered to deal with applications under this Act. No issue was framed on the point, and in the appeal preferred to the District Judge no mention was made of under valuation. On Second Appeal to the High Court, the Taxing Officer on the report of the Stamp Reporter held the correct valuation to be Rs. 5,300, which was accepted by both the parties. The appellant thereupon contended that the decree passed by the District Judge was without jurisdiction and null and void, Held, that having regard to Sec 11 of the Suits Valuation Act the decree of the District Judge could not be challenged as a nullity, there being no objection under clause (a) nor any prejudice under clause (b), (Kulwant Sahas and Foster, JJ) MAHARAJA BAHADUR KESHO PD SINGH v LAKHU RAI

TENDER

TENDER—Debtor and creditor—Tender of a portion of the debt—Conditions attached to tender

When a debtor tenders to a creditor really part of his debt, not the entire debt, and asks him to take that in full satisfaction of the debt, it is clear law that the creditor is entitled to refuse to accept the tender, because otherwise he would virtually preclude himself from saying that he had not been paid the full amount due

If you go and attach your offer to pay a debt the condition that the creditor must accept it as full satisfaction, although really it is not the whole amount due, you attach a condition to your offer and the creditor is entitled to reject it (Fawcett, J)

Plaintiff had made bets on horse races with the defendant on October 9, 1920. She went to the house of the latter at about 7-30 P M on October 11, to recover moneys she had won. She went up the steps of the house, crossed the verandah, looked into a window of the sitting room and was making for the door of the dining room with the object of entering it, when she was attacked by a dog which was chained to the door inside the room. The dog bit her on the left thigh and right knee. When she peeped into the window, the defendant noticed her and shouted out to prevent her from going towards the dining room door but the shout was not heard by the plaintiff in time. The dog was ordinarily not ferocious, but was accustomed to bite when chained and on guard and in January 1920 it had attacked and bitten a customs peon. The plaintiff had, on a previous occasion been taken by the defendant's wife into the dining room, and the sitting room was used as sort of club for playing cards and billiards. In a suit for damages by the plff against the defendant Held that putting a dangerous dog behind the door in a room is just as much a trap to an innocent passer by as if there were a hole or man trap which might cause him injury and that the plaintiff who came on an implied invitation was entitled to damages.

The liability of the occupier is only commensurate with the extent of the invitation. Where, therefore, the occupier of the premises has placed a notice warning persons of the existence of danger, and a person disregards the notice, or the circumstances show that the limits of the invitation have been otherwise exceeded, the liability is limited in a corresponding degree and if the invitee wanders about in such a way as to be unable to see if there is danger or not, or if he knows the danger and undertakes the risk, the occupier of the premises is not liable (Harbeck, J). TRADE NAME—Injunction—Colourable Imitation—Test of

The principle underlying the use of trade names is that a person shall not trade under a name so closely resembling that of the plaintiff as to be mistaken for it by the public. In other words a person shall not carry on his business in such a way as to represent that his business is another person's. The question to be determined in case of this description is whether there is such a similarity between the two names as that the one is in the ordinary course of human affairs likely to be confounded with the other. It is not necessary to prove that the defts in taking the name complained of by the plaintiffs had any fraudulent intent. It is enough if the plaintiffs prove that the act of the defendants in assuming the name complained of does an injury to the plaintiffs' rights. There is no question in such cases of property or monopoly in the name. There is no property in the word but at the same time it is fraud on a person who has established a trade and carries it on under a given name that some other person assumes the same name with a slight alteration in such a way as to induce persons to deal with him in the belief that they are dealing with the person who has given a reputation to the name. (Mulla, J)

The only effect of the provision in section 4 of the Transfer of Property Act that section 107 shall be read as supplemental to the Registration Act (i-e) to section 17 of the Registration Act is that the provision (that leases of immovable property from year to year or for any term exceeding one year or reserving a yearly rent shall be registered) contained in section 17 of the Registration Act shall be read as amplified by the proviso to section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act. It has not the effect of requiring the Court to construe the word "lease" in section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act in the wider sense in which it is defined in the Registration Act.

The principles of the Transfer of Property Act are binding upon the Courts of the Punjab but the Act itself with its technicalities has no force as such in the province.

In the Punjab and North-West Frontier Province a transferor of reversionary right is bound by his act when succession opens to him even if S 6 of the Transfer of Property Act makes the transfer itself inoperative when made and even if S 6 of the Transfer of property Act is to be regarded as making such a transfer illegal and therefore, a nullity from which no equity can arise, the Act itself is not in force in the Punjab and North West Frontier Province and, therefore, constitutes no statutory bar to a contract which would otherwise be enforceable in equity (Pir-poon, J C) KABAL SHAH v MAHOMED BAGA, 73 I C, 120

—S 6 (d)—Right to future maintenance—If alienable

The right under a contract to a fixed amount of maintenance is property within S 6 T P. Act. Whether it is an interest in property restricted in its enjoyment personally must depend on the facts of each case the question being whether the intention of the parties was that the right should be personal and inalienable. —Ss, 10 and 12—Lease—Covenant running with the land—Liability of transferee

The tenancy in suit was created on the 23rd March 1908, when a kabuliyat was executed by the second defendant in favour of the plaintiff. The tenancy was described as an itmam. Consequently on the authority of the decision in 47 C 979 it may be assumed that the tenancy was a permanent, heritable and transferable tenure. The lease contained a covenant to the effect that the tenant would, if he transferred the property, pay to the landlord, out of the purchase money in his hands, one fourth as nazar, and would obtain registration of the name of the transferee. The covenant further provided that if this step was not taken, the transfer would be invalid and the tenant would continue to be liable for the rent. Held that the provisions of sections 10 and 12 of the Transfer of Property Act made it abundantly clear that restrictive covenant of this description was valid when inserted in a lease between a landlord and his tenant and that the covenant was one running with the land and binding on the transferee from the tenant, (Mookerjee and Cholsner, JJ) SARADAKRIPA LALA v BEPIN CHANDRA PAL

Where a party admits that he has made a fictitious transfer of his property to another with a view to effect a fraud but asks to have his act undone, the court would refuse relief and would leave the parties to the consequences of their misconduct, dismissing the claim when the suit was brought by the real owner to get back possession of his property and refusing to listen to the defence when he set it up in opposition to the person whom he had invested with the legal title. Upon this rule has been engrafted the distinction that although where the intended fraud has been carried into effect, the court will not assist the true owner, yet if he has not defrauded any one, and the purpose for which the assignment was made has not been carried into execution, the mere intention to effect an illegal object does not deprive the assignor of his right to recover the property from the assignee who has given no consideration for it 35 C. 551, 33 C 967, 18 C L J 616, 22 C L J 197 Rel. may defeat or delay. The transferor may intend that it should, the transferee may know that it will, the consideration may be inadequate, and yet unless the transferee himself has been wanting in good faith the presumption in S 53 Para (4) of the T P Act does not arise. The question really is one of fact and it is the intention of the parties. But the intention which the Court must consider is not so much the intention to defeat the decree-holder but the intention to create a valid transfer at all. The second clause of the T P Act relates to a question of evidence. A certain presumption arises when the effect of the transfer is to defeat the creditor and where the transfer is gratuitous or without adequate consideration. But it is a presumption which can be rebutted. The question at issue really is whether the transfer ever actually occurred. The failure or absence of consideration and the omission to transfer possession are evidence of fraud. It is open to a defeated creditor to bring a suit under O 21, R 63, C P Code on his own behalf without impleading all the other creditors of the transferor. 42 M 143 relied upon (Pisbon, J C) LOBNATH v THAKARDAS

—S. 54—Sale of equity of redemption—Unregistered document—Actings of the parties—Doctrine of part performance

In 1906 plaintiffs conveyed certain property to the defendants under a registered sale for Rs. 1,200 subject to the condition that if the plaintiffs repaid a sum of Rs. 125 per annum for 10 years the defendants were to reconvey the property to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs were to lose all right to the property in case of default in payment. Subsequently in 1908 the parties arrived at an arrangement under which the defendants agreed to take possession of a portion of the property absolutely free from liability to redemption and the plaintiffs were to take possession of the remainder free from the mortgage debt. The arrangement was embodied in a document which was not registered. Defts. took possession of the property allotted to them under the arrangement and the plaintiffs continued in possession of the remainder as before. In 1919 the plaintiff sued to redeem the property in the possession of the defendants who set up the unregistered agreement as their defence. Held that the transaction of 1908 though embodied in an unregistered agreement had still been acted upon by the parties and under the equitable doctrine of part performance the plaintiffs were estopped from

What S 54, T P Act enacts is that a conveyance or a document of title to land can only acquire validity and be provable if it is registered. So far from forbidding unregistered contracts for sale, it expressly recognises their existence, denying to them only the creation of an interest in or charge on the land. The section prohibits only unregistered conveyances and not contracts.

Where in pursuance of a contract of sale, possession has been given but no registered sale deed executed and thereafter a suit is brought for the recovery of the lands on the ground that there was no registered document, Held, a plea in defence that the defendants had a valid contract capable of specific performance is quite good. The test to find out whether a zuripeshgi is a mortgage or lease is to find out whether there is a secured debt and a right of redemption. In a zuripeshgi lease properly so called there is an advance to the lessor in consideration of which the lessee is given possession of the land for a term during which he recoups himself for the sum advanced and interest out of the profits of the land of which he is put in possession. There is no question of redemption upon paying off an advance. The lease terminates at the expiration of the term and the lessor may thereupon reenter. The transaction is really one in which rent is paid in a lump sum in advance instead of by instalments during the term. Where however the interest created in the lease after the expiration of the term until the advance which is essentially loan not an advance of rent, is repaid, the transaction has the essential characteristics of a mortgage (Miller, C J and Mullick, J) MAHARAJAH KESHO PRASAD SINGH v CHANDRIKA PRASAD SINGH,

—Ss 60 and 72 (c)—Mortgage-money Costs of litigation incurred by mortgagee—Right to add to the mortgage-money

The mortgagee is entitled to tack on the costs of litigation relating to the security as part of the terms on which redemption is allowed.

A mortgagee is allowed proper costs charges and expenses incurred by him in relation to the mortgage debt or mortgage security including the costs of litigation properly undertaken by him. But all these items are allowed only as a condition of redeeming. There is no implied contract by the mortgagor to pay them, and they are not, in the absence of express agreement, recoverable against him personally.

The words "mortgage money" in S 60 must be taken as including all money which on taking account between the parties may be properly allowed to the mortgagee.

S 72 cannot be taken to imply that a mortgagee not in possession has no similar right to charge the mortgaged property for payments properly made by him in relation to the security and that the mortgagee is not entitled to have amounts so paid added to the amount of the original lien.

The expression "mortgage-money" as used in S 60, includes costs properly incurred by the mortgagee such as costs of litigation which are allowed under the law of mortgage in England. (Fawcett J) NADERSHAW v SHINBAI

—S 60—Mortgage—Redemption—Clog on—Onerous terms—Long term for redemption.

It is an essential ingredient of every mortgage, that it should be redeemable, until the right of redemption is extinguished or lost in the manner provided by Law, and any fetters intended to render redemption practically difficult or impossible cannot be recognised, unless there are circumstances indicating that they were intended to compensate for the advantages allowed to the mortgagor and were not unreasonable or repressive. A mortgagee cannot be allowed to fetter redemption by terms which are unreasonable or oppressive. An agreement made at the time of the mortgage between a mortgagor and the mortgagee cannot operate to make that mortgage irredeemable. Incidental to every mortgage is the right of the mortgagor to redeem it, which is called his equity of redemption. The right to redeem is so inseparable an incident of a mortgage that it cannot be taken away by an express agreement of the parties that the mortgage shall not be redeemable or that the right shall not be exercised except in a particular manner or under certain onerous conditions. If the conditions are one sided and designed to thwart or defeat redemption, equity will interpose in favour of the mortgagor and relieve him of the oppressive conditions which unreasonably hinder redemption without interfering with what might really be due to the mortgagee on account of the principal and interest secured by the mortgage. There could have been no object in fixing such a long term for redemption and requiring the mortgagors to pay three times the principal sum secured by the mortgage in addition to any deficiency in the interest, which was to be paid out of the profits unless the intention was to hinder redemption by rendering the same extremely onerous to the mortgagors. A long term may not by itself operate as a clog on the equity of redemption, but where such a long term is accompanied by other conditions, such as exist in this case, rendering redemption extremely difficult and onerous without any corresponding benefit to the mortgagors, the mortgagee cannot be allowed to take advantage of those conditions to defeat the right of redemption. A mortgagor cannot compel the mortgagee to accept payment of the mortgage money before the date fixed for redemption where there is a covenant in the mortgage deed that redemption shall not take place before that date but where the effect of a covenant is to postpone redemption for an unduly long period without any corresponding advantage to the mortgagor or there are circumstances indicating that the covenant postponing redemption is unreasonable and oppressive and intended to fetter the right to redeem, a Court may allow redemption irrespective of that term as it may deem fit. ## S 60—Mortgage—Splitting up—Right of redemption—Partial redemption

T F ACT, S 60.

Ordinarily a mortgagee is entitled to claim that his security should not be split up, but if he becomes by his own act the purchaser of a portion of the mortgage security, he has no longer any right to claim that the security should not be split up and mortgagors or assignees from mortgagors become liable for only so much of the mortgage debt as is proportionate to the portion of the mortgage security that they have purchased. ## S. 60—Redemption—Clog on—Restrictions on right of mortgagor

Whatever authorities there are for the view that the terms of the mortgage however, onerous,

Where in execution of a money decree a compromise was arrived at as a result of which the decree-holder took possession of certain properties of the judgment debtor as usufructuary mortgagee but the document was not stamped or registered, held that the transaction having been entered into before the Transfer of Property Act did not require registration and that, even otherwise, the long course of conduct on the part of the mortgagor prevented him from disputing the validity of the mortgage. —Ss 83 and 84—Deposit of mortgage money—Mortgagee, a minor—Procedure

Section 84 of the T P, Act provides that, in the case of a deposit made under section 83 interest shall cease from the day on which the mortgagor has done all that has to be done by him to enable the mortgagee to take the amount out of Court. Where the mortgagee is a person who is unable to draw the money out of Court it is necessary that a guardian ad litem should be appointed and therefore unless such a guardian was appointed, it cannot be said that the mortgagor had done all that was necessary for him to enable the mortgagee to draw the money. Where the mortgagee happens to be a person incapable of entering into a contract, section 103 lays down the mode in which the mortgagor has to act in order to enable the mortgagee to take away the deposit made in court. According to the provisions of that section, in the case of such a mortgagee, the mortgagor has to apply to the court to have a guardian appointed in the manner provided for in chapter XXXI of the Code of Civil Procedure, which now corresponds to order XXXII of the present Code of Civil Procedure. Under that order the court may appoint a guardian upon application made by the plaintiff or by the guardian. It is the duty of the present plaintiffs, who stood in the shoes of the mortgagors, to apply to the court to have a guardian appointed, inasmuch as no one could withdraw the deposit on behalf of the minors unless there was a guardian appointed by the court. The mere fact of making an application would not enable any one to withdraw the money on behalf of the minors unless a person was appointed guardian ad litem by the court. It was, therefore incumbent on the mortgagor, or his representative, to see that a proper guardian was appointed by the court. It seems to us that section 103 was intended to provide for preliminary proceedings to be adopted by a mortgagor before making a tender or a deposit and it could not have been the intention of the section that the mere making of an application would be sufficient but that there should be a person appointed by the court to whom a tender could be made, or by whom a deposit could be taken out of the court.

When a guardian has been appointed by the court, it should be open to the person making a deposit of the mortgage money, to pay the difference of interest between the date of the original deposit and the date of the appointment of the guardian, and in a case where such a deposit has been made, and the full amount has been deposited on the date of the appointment of the guardian, further interest on the principal amount of the mortgage should, under the provisions of section 84, cease. An assignee of a three-fourth's share of the mortgagor's interest in one of the items mortgaged is entitled to make a deposit under S 83 of the Transfer of Property Act of the whole mortgage-debt notwithstanding that the mortgagees have become owners of part of the mortgaged property. The effect of such a deposit is to determine the mortgagee's right to possession as mortgagees and to transfer the same to the assignee who makes the deposit.

Mortgagees remaining in possession after a lawful deposit are entitled to credit for amounts which they paid after the tender to meet the revenue demands on the mortgaged property, and for necessary repairs and collection charges. The words "notwithstanding the provisions in the other clauses of this section" in S. 76, Cl. (i) of the Transfer of Property Act are not sufficient, especially having regard to the omission of any reference to S 72, to put the mortgagees in accounting for the gross receipts of property in a worse position than a trespasser.

Though after a lawful deposit by the assignee in such a case the mortgagees have no right to retain possession and should be made accountable on that basis, still, having regard to practical convenience and the scheme of Transfer of Property Act, the proper course in such a case would, be to determine the amount of the mortgage debt for which the properties purchased by the mortgagees are liable and to finally settle the

" Gross receipts from the mortgaged property, in S 76 cl (1) of the Transfer of Property Act do not include interest upon the amounts collected. Held, therefore that the assignee making the deposit was not entitled to interest on the profits from the date of collection

For arrears of Government revenue due on properties of the mortgagor other than those comprised in a mortgage the equity of redemption in certain of the mortgaged properties was sold and purchased by the mortgagee themselves. There was nothing to show that the mortgagees availed themselves of their position as such in getting the properties sold or in buying them. Held that the revenue sale was valid and binding on the mortgagor and the equity of redemption thereby became vested in the mortgagees.

Per The Chief Justice—Even in cases in which the mortgagees have become the owners of part of the mortgaged property, the mortgagor making a deposit under S 83 of the Transfer of Property Act is bound to deposit the whole of the mortgage amount where the amount of the proportionate reduction of the mortgage debt has not been ascertained either by agreement or by the Court

Per Krishnan, J—Where, in a case in which the mortgagor deposited under S 83 of the Transfer of Property Act the whole of the mortgage debt, the mortgagees applied to draw out the amount without prejudice to certain contentions they were raising and asked for an order of Court to that effect, but the mortgagor objected to any such order being made, and the mortgagee's application was thereupon dismissed, held that the mortgagor was justified in so objecting and that his action did not affect the validity of his tender in any way

Execution of a decree does not estop the decree holder from appealing from it so far as it is against him

After a valid deposit by the mortgagor under S 83 of the Transfer of Property Act the mortgagee becomes liable not only for the total amount of rents and profits actually collected by him but also for the amount it left uncollected by him on account of his failure to make his best endeavours to collect them,

On a valid deposit under S 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Court directed the whole of item 1 of the mortgaged properties to be put in possession of the mortgagor. The mortgagor got possession of the item with the exception of 19 and odd acres, which were in the possession of a third party. The mortgagor's failure to obtain possession of the 19 and odd acres was not due to any default on the part of the mortgagee. The mortgagor did not complain to the Court that there was a short delivery, neither did he intimate to the mortgagee that there was any difficulty on account of short delivery. On the 13th June 1922 the mortgagor deposited a sum of Rs 2,825 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge by way of tender in satisfaction or discharge of two mortgage debts due to the opposite party mortgagees. On the 29th June the mortgagees filed a petition objecting to the tender on various grounds and the Subordinate Judge instead of disposing of the petition summarily allowed the parties time to compromise the case. Finally there was no compromise and on the 29th July 1922 the Subordinate Judge, made the following order—Hazri on behalf of both parties filed Ordered that the case be disposed of.

On the face of it the order did not seem to be very clear, but having regard to the papers on the record what the Subordinate Judge decided was that as the tender was not accepted, the case was disposed of and the mortgagor was entitled to withdraw his money. On the 29th November 1922 the mortgagees apprehending that the mortgagor was about to carry out the order of the Court held an application that a criminal case of theft in connection with the mortgage deeds was pending against the mortgagor and praying that the money might not be paid over to the mortgagor till the disposal of that case.

On the 4th December 1922 the mortgagor applied for the return of the money but the subordinate Judge directed that the payment should be withheld till the disposal of the criminal case. On the 11th April 1923, the case was heard in the presence of both sides, the criminal case by that time having been disposed of and having ended in the acquittal of the mortgagor. On that day the mortgagees finding that the money was about to be returned to the mortgagor suddenly changed their willingness to accept the tender in full discharge of their dues. The Subordinate Judge allowed the prayer and directed that the money should be paid to the mortgagees upon their executing a security bond to refund the money. Held, it was not competent to the Subordinate Judge to direct the money to be paid to the mortgagees when the tender was no longer open,

T P ACT, § 83

After the disposal of the case on the 29th July 1922 there was no other tender, and the money was the mortgagor's money and the mortgagor was entitled to withdraw it at her own pleasure. Being therefore of opinion that there was no tender outstanding the order directing the money to be paid to the mortgagees seems to have been made without jurisdiction.

It is also not clear how a security bond was taken, for § 83 of the Transfer of Property Act does not authorize the Court to take any security bond from any party, (Mullick and Bucknill, JJ) MT RATNA KOER v MT NANHARI

It is not the practice of the Court to require a party to make a formal tender where from the facts stated in the plaint or from the evidence it appears that the tender would have been a mere form and that the party to whom it was made would have refused to accept the money. At the same time there must be a clear release to the mortgagor of his obligation to tender the money to justify the latter in not having presented the money to the mortgagee. In considering the question of tender it is not necessary for the Court to speculate as to whether the mortgagor had the money or the control of the money that would have enabled him to meet the large amount that was due on the mortgage. —§ 91—Mortgage—Prior mortgagee claiming to redeem—Puisne mortgagee in possession

After a mortgage of 1898, the mortgagor again mortgaged the property in 1904. The puisne mortgagee defendant brought his mortgage suit in 1906 and it was compromised in 1907. The mortgagor failed to pay the instalments and the property as provided by the decree passed in execution to the puisne mortgagee defendant in 1911, his foreclosure suit having been dismissed. In 1909 the prior mortgagee brought a suit on his mortgage, obtained a decree for sale in 1910 and assigned it in 1915 to plaintiff who in 1918 purchased the property. Plaintiff then sued defendant claiming to redeem him and contended that there never was passed a final decree in defendant's suit.

Held, Assuming that a prior mortgagee is a person who has a right to redeem under § 91 (a) of the T P Act, his rights as a mortgagee having become merged in his decree he cannot any longer claim to redeem the mortgage in that capacity. So long as the defendant's right to redeem the plaintiff as prior mortgagee subsists the plaintiff cannot exercise his right, if any, to redeem the defendant's mortgage, for the result of allowing him to do so would be to compel the defendants to redeem the plaintiff at a time chosen by the plaintiff or be redeemed themselves. As an auction purchaser the plaintiff's rights came into existence after the defendants had got their decree and possession thereunder and he cannot claim to be in any better position than the mortgagor whose interests he claims to represent. T P Act was not in force in Berar at the date of the defendant's decree and there was no compulsion on the Court to pass a final decree nor did the decree actually passed contemplate a final decree (*Kotwal, A. In cases where the ownership of the property itself has come into the hands of the mortgagee and the mortgagee wishes to hold up his mortgage as a shield against some person, who is entitled to a decree for possession of the property the question is whether the mortgagee kept the mortgage alive at the time he came into possession of the equity of redemption or whether he allowed it to become extinguished. In England where the rules of the conveyancing are very strict, it is the invariable practice to have the mortgage assigned to trustees for the express purpose of keeping it alive. This is never done in India and the Courts have usually looked to see whether it was to the interest of the mortgagee to keep his mortgage alive, and if they found it to be this interest, they have assumed that he did intend to keep it alive (*Dalal and Simpson, A. —Powers of Indian Legislature

The Indian Legislature has powers expressly limited by the Acts of the Imperial Parliament which created it, and it can do nothing beyond the limits which circumscribe those powers. But when acting within those limits it is not in any sense an agent or delegate of the Imperial Parliament but has and was intended to have plenary powers of legislation as large, and of the same nature as those of Parliament itself. The established Courts of Justice, when a question arises whether the prescribed limits have been exceeded, must of necessity determine that question, and the only way in which they can properly do so, is by looking to the terms of that instrument by which, affirmatively, the legislative powers were created, and by which negatively, they are restricted. If what has been done is legislation within the scope of the affirmative words which give the power, and if it violates no express condition or restriction by which that power is limited, it is not for any Court of Justice to enquire further, or to enlarge constructively those conditions and restrictions. The British Parliament intended to give the widest powers to the Indian Legislature, and that though relying on the latter's good sense not to abuse those powers, it yet retained practical checks in case of necessity (Macleod, C J Marten and Crump) ALFRED WILKINSON v WILKINSON 47 Bom 843 25 Bom L R 945 1923 Bom 321

The word "cess" is used secondarily to denote demand for contributions in cash or kind to be devoted to the benefit of the village as a whole and when used in that sense the word almost means a rate. Another sense in which the word is used is a demand by the zemindar for provision of certain articles or the doing of certain services for his own personal benefit. When the word is used in this sense it is better to refer to the demand as a demand for dues and in these cases the dues demanded are customary dues. A cess levied in accordance with village custom can only be recoverable if recorded by the Settlement Officer and generally or specially sanctioned by the local Government. Mere payment of these dues for 20 or 30 years is insufficient to establish a custom to pay the cesses (Stuart, J) MAHOMED ASGHAR ALI KHAN v RAMMON

—S 111—Partition proceedings—Civil and Revenue Court

A party to a partition suit may not while the partition suit is pending, bring a suit against another party in the civil court to clear his title otherwise than under the direction of the court hearing the partition suit. The basis of this proposition is that the partition suit is given jurisdiction in respect of title and this impliedly makes the question of title an essential part of the partition proceeding so that a civil court is debarred from entertaining questions of title except in a suit instituted by direction of the partition court. It does not follow from this that a party not directed to bring a title suit cannot join a party directed to do so in bringing of one. A direction by a Revenue court in the process of a partition suit under section 111 (b) to one party to bring a title suit in a Civil Court implies the right of joinder in the suit of any person as plaintiff in whom a joint right of relief exists. The direction to bring a suit to any person must mean that he is to bring it according to, and is permitted by, the law of procedure. O 1, R 1, Code of Civil Procedure allows such joinder. The principle which governs the finality of partitions is that the partition record defines the rights of parties to the partition as against each other finally and exhaustively. No party to a partition is entitled to deny the accuracy of the partition record when to do so would be injurious to any other party

The provisions of Ss 126 and 127 of the Land Revenue Act give an ex propriatory right in the circumstances described in them. But this is a right which may be waived, and if it is not claimed, at the time of the partition, it is lost and cannot be claimed afterwards. The right is also lost as provided in S 126, if it is not maintained by cultivation after the partition takes effect. —S. 16 (3) (c)—"Place of profit"—Meaning of—Election —Municipal contractor.

U. P. MUNICIPALITIES ACT, (II OF 1916), S. 20.

The words "place of profit" have a definite historical association and when coupled with the word "office" are familiar. A contractor who receives remuneration for supply of articles to a municipality cannot in accordance with the ordinary meaning of the word "place" be said to hold a place of profit.

The proper meaning which should be ascribed to the words "place of profit" in S. 16 (3) (c) is one which denotes position and employment in the sense of having a title attached to such employment and a definite standing and partaking of the nature and character of that of master and servant. That is, a position in relation to the Board in which the Board can require a person to obey its command and to do certain work or to render personal services in return for remuneration. Instances of this kind readily occur to one, e.g., a consulting Engineer who for a retaining fee holds himself at readiness to give expert opinions and furnishes reports; a whole or part time medical officer with defined duties towards the Municipal Board, and each and every Municipal servant of any grade. This rule is necessary because members of a Board should not be in the false position of being masters and servants at one and the same time (Mears, C. J. and Figgott, J.) MAHOMED BAKSH v. — Ss. 20 and 22—Petition if should be presented personally to collector—Practice.

Ss. 20 and 22 of the U. P. Municipalities Act need not be construed so strictly as to invalidate petitions not presented personally to the Collector. If it was the practice of the particular District that petitions to the collector are in his absence received by some other officer who would hand them over then presentation to that officer is sufficient. It must reach the collector well within the period of limitation. (Mears, C. J. and Figgott, J.) SURAJ NARAIN v. JANG BAHADUR. 45 A. 687 : 74 I. C. 2

The returning officer thereupon closed the poll and declared the remaining member duly elected. Held that his action was legal. Rule 36 (1) of the Municipal Rules and Bye Laws of the particular Municipality, provided that a poll should be taken on the day for the election when the number of duly nominated candidates who were entered in the schedule and who had not withdrawn their candidature before the time fixed for the poll exceeded that of the vacancies. When you have got duly nominated candidates in the excess of vacancies you have got to have an election. Rule 36 (2) provided "If the number of such candidates is equal to the number of vacancies, all such candidates shall be deemed to be elected" Therefore if there are three candidates and three vacancies, all such candidates shall be deemed to be elected; similarly two, similarly one. Though in terms rule 36 (2) does not contemplate nor is there anywhere any provision which contemplates the withdrawal of a candidate during the few hours during which the polling is in progress, by analogy to the duties of the Returning Officer before the opening of the poll, it is the proper course for the Returning Officer to act in conformity with R. 36 (2) and if he finds only one candidate left for the one vacancy, to declare that man duly elected. Marketable title—What is—Repudiation of Contract—Rights of purchaser.

The title which the vendor in a contract for the sale of land must show must be a title in himself or in those whom he has a legal or equitable right to require to join in the conveyance, he has no right to say, that some other person is willing to enter into a contract and to force the title of that other person on the purchaser. When a person sells property which he is neither able to convey himself nor has the power to compel a conveyance of it from any other person, the purchaser as soon as he finds that to be the case, may repudiate the contract. This right of repudiation must be distinguished from the common law right of rescission, and arises out of that want of mutuality, which, unless waived, is generally fatal to relief by way of specific performance. But the right must be exercised, if at all, as soon as the defect is ascertained. If, after ascertaining the defect, the purchaser still treats the contract as subsisting, he does not retain the right to repudiate at any subsequent moment he may choose. (1923) All. 269.

WAJIB-UL-ARZ

A Wajib-ul-arz- prima facie, is to be construed as embodying a record of custom, but it is quite clear that this presumption must give way if the language of the documents itself indicates that the record is not one of custom, but of contract. While it may be the case that the word "iqrar" which is often interpreted "agreement" is an ambiguous word the words "so long as this Settlement lasts the following conditions shall be binding on us" clearly indicate that whatever usages were recorded in this document were recorded as usages of contract and not of custom (Rafique and Piggott, JJ) HARI SINGH v. HARBANS LAL 72 I. C. 491 : (1923) A. 488 (1).

—Entry in—Construction.

The Wajib-ul-arz provided "The rule of inheritance and division (thereof) in this village is that on the death of a co-sharer his sons become owners of his share in equal shares and the daughter does not get any share by inheritance. If a co sharer has several wives, of whom one has one son and the other several, then on the death of the co-sharer his share will be divided equally among his sons", Held, the only construction which can be put on the entry is that on the death of an owner of the village no daughter of his is under any circumstances entitled to a share in the property by right of inheritance whether he had left sons or not. If a daughter had no right to inherit her issue could not inherit. The provision that on the death of a co-sharer his sons become owners of his share in equal shares was probably inserted to exclude any claim under a custom of primogeniture which is not an uncommon custom in Oudh. An entry in a Wajib-ul-arz is prima facie evidence of the existence of a custom unless there is anything in the Wajib-ul-arz itself which negatives the idea of such an existence or there is other evidence to the contrary or such custom is unreasonable or unenforceable, the presumption would be that such a custom exists, (Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ) GAYAN SINGH v. ## WATERS—Riparian owners—Rights of—Easement natural right.

The right to water flowing through artificial courses is right of easement, and must rest on some grant or some arrangement, either proved or presumed from, or with the owners of the land from which the water is artificially brought, or in some legal origin. It is quite distinct from the natural right, which, is a natural incident to the ownership of land, and entitles prima facie each successive riparian proprietor to the unimpeded flow of water of a natural channel in its natural course, and to its reasonable enjoyment as it passes through his land. In the case of artificial water course where no easement or customary right enjoyed by the plaintiff has been proved only diminution of supply (and not complete stoppage) will not entitle plaintiff to an injunction. Until plaintiff proves that he has used the whole water of the watercourse as of right, S. 26 of the Limitation Act does not avail him. (Campbell, J.) BELA SINGH v. BALI RAM.

WILL.

Keshri Singh, then he shall be the heir in the future. Should perchance no son be born to Chiranjiv Keshar Singh and should it be necessary to bring (a son) from (some) other place, then during the life time of my wife (a son) from our Gotra shall be brought (adopted) with the consent of my wife. Held the words of the will, "Should perchance a son be not born to me, then in that case my heir is Chiranjiv Keshar Singh," and the subsequent words, "I appoint Chiranjiv Keshar Singh (be) my heir" are sufficient words to pass the property from the date of the death of the testator, and although the subsequent terms of the will as to the adoption of a son with the consent of the testator's wife in the event of no son being born to the respondent, and other expressions used, may appear to give an unusual authority to the wife, there is nothing in them to cut down the express terms of the will appointing defendant to be the testator's heir. An intention to leave the wife in the same position as if he had died intestate cannot be implied in a case where the testator has made a will in which he has deliberately made no express provision with reference to the plaintiff. ## —Construction.

Where the testator bestowed absolute estate upon his brother and daughter and a portion of the estate upon his widows and to propitiate his brother for this bestowal of absolute estate upon the widow bestowed upon him a greater portion of his estate upon which the brother consented to the will held the estate upon the widow was absolute. ## —Construction — Administration — Panchas.

Where the will directed six persons to be Panchas of whom one was to supervise the work of administration and Panchas were given power to appoint other panchas. Held that power could only be exercised by the whole body of Panchas. Evidently the testator had never intended that Panchas should have the power to appoint other Panchas by will because it was intended by the testator that they should exercise that power as a body. That would exclude any power to appoint by will. At the most one pancha would be a person who might apply for letters of administration de bonis non. ## —Construction—Chinese testator—Gift to wife—Devolution in case of re-marriage—Effect of death.

A Chinese testator drew up a will in English and provided for the property being divided equally among his sons and wife and in case the wife re-married, her share was to go over to her sons.

The wife died before the testator, an event which was unprovided for. Held, a gift over to the sons could not be implied and it must be dealt with as on intestacy. Held also, in construing such a will couched in English terms of legal art, Chinese usages should not be adverted to. ## —Construction—Gift—Transfer of property in present—Revocation.

In dealing with the internal evidence of a document upon its own character, neither the reservation of property to the testator nor the alleged delivery of possession to the legatees are in themselves sufficient to destroy the character of the document which purports to be a will. Nor is there any authority for the proposition that actual delivery of possession to beneficiaries is fatal to a testamentary bequest. It is no doubt evidence against the disposition being testamentary but it is not a fact that per se annuls its testamentary character. As evidence, it can be rebutted by other evidence. It is a natural and intelligible position that a testator may wish to put his legatees in immediate possession to test the success of the disposition, to avoid disputes as to the interpretation of the Will and to familiarise the beneficiaries with their eventual properties. Courts must necessarily recognise such temporary possession as not incompatible with a will, provided that the disposition to which possession was given effect to is unmistakably revocable and that possession is not intended to confer a permanent interest during the testator's lifetime. The essential of a gift is that the donor should intend immediately to divest himself of the property. In the present case the exculant specifically reserved to himself in the deed the right of modification and did not so divest himself. Held the document was a will and the contention that it was not acted upon as such because possession was given under it cannot be —Construction—Powers of executor—Power of sale—Mortgage—Suit to enforce mortgage.

An executor under a will with express power to sell has power to mortgage except in cases where a prohibition against mortgage can be inferred from the terms of the will. In a suit upon a mortgage made by an executor under a will with express power of sale the onus is not on the mortgagee to prove as part of his case that the executor was acting properly in effecting the mortgage. —Construction—Property bequeathed for performance of ceremonies—Stranger—Rights of

The testator by his will directed that deities 1 and 2 who had lived with him as his own children should get the residence of his estate, namely, bigga and 5 Kath as or land and that they should sell the property and perform his shraddas with the proceeds. The children were minors and the shradda ceremonies were validly performed by a volunteer. Held that deities 1 and 2 nevertheless took the property freed from the burden and there was no intestacy as regards that property (Ross, J.) MOTI LAL v. RAM KHELAWAN DAS. 72 I. C. 400.

—Construction—Rules.

In construing wills the test is what did the testator mean having regard to the words used. One of the cardinal rules in construing a will is to avoid an intestacy whether wholly or partially. (Raymond and Madgavkar, A. J. C.) NARAIN DAS v. TEK CHAND. 1923 S. 42.

—Construction—Testator having limited interest in property—Bequest—What passes.

Where a testator has a limited interest in property and purports to dispose of the property itself the presumption is that he intends to dispose only of his limited interest, and if it is sought to carry the disposition further, it must be shown that he intended to dispose of more than his interest. Regard may be had to the context of the will and the aptitude of the testamentary limitations if applied to the testator's actual interest (Ashworth, A. J. C.) MAHESA v. RAMESHWAR. 28 O. C. 329.

—Proof of—Testamentary capacity—Execution—Burden of proof.

The burden of proving that a document in dispute is the last will of a free and capable testator lies on the propounder. He has therefore to allege and prove a sound disposing mind on the part of the testator. It is not sufficient in all cases to prove execution and rely upon the presumption of capacity. This may be so in a non-contentious case. (Kotwal, A. J. C.) MUKTABAI v. WAMAN. 69 I. C. 572 : 1923 Nag. 63.

—Restrictions on bequest.

A testator can give property whether by way of remainder or by way of executory bequest (to borrow terms from the law of England) upon an event which is to happen, if at all, immediately on the close of a life in being.

A Hindu, who has a power to transfer his property, though not self-acquired can make a will with a gift over. (Abdul Raof and Sumensder, J.J.) PREM SINGH v. HARDIT SINGH. 1923 Lah. 649.

An intention on the part of a testator to rescind a portion of the will and confirm the rest at some future time, without an expression of an actual present intention to alter or cancel the will cannot operate as a revocation in law. It may be a question how far, when the terms of a will have been reduced to writing evidence of oral statements in derogation of those terms can be admitted as between persons claiming to be the representatives in interest of the testator under the will or otherwise. The mere fact that in Mysore there is no statutory enactment corresponding to the Hindu wills Act would not necessarily preclude the Court from adopting a position which represents the current view of the Courts in British India as to the general principle of Hindu Testamentary Law in the matter under consideration, and which, while in itself reasonable and salutary in every way is not opposed to local precedents. Even if an oral revocation of a written will were to be accepted in evidence, the Court ought to insist in every case on very clear, cogent and consistent proof of an oral revocation and on the evidence being precise as to time and place (*Chandrasekhara Aiyar, C. ———Testamentary capacity — Proof of — Sound and disposing state of mind — Directions given by testator — Will prepared in accordance with — Signature — Registration.

Testamentary capacity is a relative thing, it is to be considered with reference to the particular will the question being not whether the testator had capacity for will making, but whether he had capacity to make the disputed will. He may have had capacity to make that will in the circumstances and yet not have had the capacity to make a more complex will or he may not have had the capacity to make the will in suit and yet have had capacity to make a less complex or different one, whether he understood the particular thing he was doing is the vital question.

Where a testator has given instructions for the will while in health and executes the document prepared in accordance therewith while in illness slight proof of knowledge and approval will suffice, and the will may be held valid, though at the time of execution the testator merely recollects that he has given those instructions but believes that the will which he is executing is in accordance with them. In the case of a business undertaking, in which a minor is a partner, where transactions are carried on in the usual course of business, it is not necessary for the creditor to give specific evidence of benefit in each individual transaction. The fact that the transactions were carried on in the usual course of business is sufficient to raise a presumption that they were for the benefit of the business. (*Daniels, A. J. ## II—SELECT ENGLISH CASES.

ALIEN.

ALIEN—German national—Who is, within the meaning of the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919—Whether a person who is both a British subject and a German national is one.

Both in the Treaty of Peace and in the order the expression "German National" means a person who is by German law a subject of Germany.

It makes no difference that the person whose property is charged under the Order Cl. 1 (xvi), is also a British subject. The word "enemy" in Art. 297 refers to enmity between country and country between country and individual.

Reference may be made to the treaty to ascertain the true construction of the order which is based thereon. KRAMER v. ATTORNEY GENERAL.

———Married Woman—Life—Estate of—With restraint on anticipation—Whether her "property, rights and interests" in England—Treaty of Peace Order, 1919—Statutory charge.

Notwithstanding that a German national who is a married woman has no power to anticipate, her life-interest in a fund in England is subject to the charge created by the Treaty of Peace Order, Cl. 1 (xvi).

A restraint on anticipation, though not a mere personal disability, and though it may render the property inalienable by any act of the woman, does not exclude the possibility of the creation of a charge adversely to her.

The Peace Order can operate upon the separate estate of a married woman restrained from anticipation because it is property of hers and is by statute affected by action adversely to her and not by act done by her. PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. WOLF.

ALIMONY—Calculation of—If can be attached in Execution

Alimony is an allowance which, having regard to the means of the husband and wife, the Court thinks right to be paid for her maintenance from time to time. By its very nature it is incapable of being assigned, nor can it be attached in execution nor a receiver appointed to collect the same. J. WALLIS LTD. v. LEGGE.

Whenever there has been an action, an application for an order to tax the solicitors' bill for services rendered in the conduct of that action is a matter of practice and procedure and an appeal from the order lies to the court of Appeal, though it may be a final order within the meaning of S. 1 (4) of the Judicature Act, 1894. In re WINGFIELDS.

BANKER AND CUSTOMER.

ARBITRATION—Agreement to refer—Suit on original cause of action—Not maintainable without going to arbitration. See HALLEN v. SPAETH. (1923) A. C. 684 (P. C.).

———Award when can be set aside—Error of law—Terms of contract not incorporated—If can be referred to.

When matters in dispute are referred to an arbitrator, he is constituted the sole and final judge of all questions both of law and fact. The only exceptions to this rule are when the award is the result of corruption or fraud and when an error of law is palpable on the face of the award or upon some paper accompanying and forming part of the award, as for instance a note appended by the arbitrator stating the reasons for his judgment. When the terms of the contract giving rise to the arbitration are not incorporated, they cannot be looked to, for the purpose of detecting an error of law. CHAMPSEY BHARA AND CO. v. JIVRAJ BALLOO SPINNING AND WEAVING CO. LTD.

(1923) A. C. 480.

When the construction of a document is referred to an arbitrator, unless it appears on the face of the award that the arbitrator has proceeded on principles which are wrong in law, his conclusions are final. Even the fact that the court itself would have come to a different conclusion does not matter. If he has proceeded illegally, for instance decided on evidence which is inadmissible or on principles of construction which the law does not countenance, then there is error of law which may be ground for setting aside the award. Case law reviewed.

The fact that the arbitrator in construing the deed looked into the surrounding circumstances not only to make the terms intelligible but to be inferred therefrom that the parties intended to agree to terms which, though not clearly expressed, are in his opinion implied in it, does not vitiate the award, as he is quite competent to infer such a matter. GOVERNMENT OF KELANTAN v. DUFF DEVELOPMENT CO. LTD.

———Reference out of court—Power to order affidavit of document or answer interrogatories.

BANKER AND CUSTOMER—Crediting cheque in customer's account—Proceeds if available before clearance.

BANKRUPTCY.

The question whether a banker receives a customer's payment by means of a crossed cheque as agent for collection or as holder for value is one of fact. The mere fact that the cheque is immediately credited in the ledger does not make the banker a holder for value, though prima facie such inference may be drawn. But such inference may be negatived by other evidence showing that the customer could not draw before clearance. Where a banker receives a cheque as agent for collection and stops payment before the cheque is cleared at the clearing house, the banker can only receive the proceeds as collecting agent for the customer and the relationship between the parties is not the ordinary bank relationship of debtor and creditor. *FARROW'S BANK LTD. BANKRUPTCY—Fraudulent conveyance—Devise to defeat or delay creditors—13 Eliz. Ch. 5.

A person in embarrassed circumstances agreed to sell to a company to be formed all his property on condition they allotted him a number of shares, appointed him their managing director and paid his business debts. Held, the object of the transaction was to remove his assets out of the reach of the creditors and hence it tended to defeat and delay creditors within the meaning of 13 Eliz. Ch. 5.

The principle to be applied in such cases is as laid down in 4 Ch. 622. "If the deed is bona fide i. e., if it is not a mere cloak for retaining a benefit to the grantor, it is a good deed under the Statute of Elizabeth." In re FASEY EX PARTE TRUSTEES.

S. 186 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 provided that, on the voluntary winding up of a company, the property of the Company shall be applied in satisfaction of its liabilities pari passu. S. 209 gives priority to certain debts, including specified Crown debts, over all other debts. Held that the generality of the words of S. 186 must be supplemented and corrected by the particularity of the exceptions enumerated in S. 209. S. 186 must be read as if the words "save as hereafter provided" were written into it. Held therefore that a debt owing to the Food Controller not being one of the Crown debts specified in S. 209, the prerogative priority attaching to it as a Crown debt was taken away by S. 186 read with S. 209 (by necessary implication).

CONSPIRACY—Interference with freedom of trade—Combination—If actionable.

Any interference in combination with a man's right to carry on his business as he wills and to deal with such people as he thinks fit is a violation of legal right, which, if procured by threats and resulting in damage to him, is actionable if there be no sufficient justification for the interference.

Where the defendants combined to interfere with the plaintiff's right to trade as he willed by means of threats, unless sufficient justification exists, it is actionable if it results or would result in damage.

To justify an otherwise unlawful act on the ground of protection or promotion of trade interest, it must be shown it was his direct trade interest to do the act in question. SORRELL v. SMITH. (1923) 2 Ch. 32.

A Steamship agent and broker stipulated for a commission of 3½ p. c. on the purchase price of a steamship if he procured a purchaser at or above a fixed price. The terms of the brokerage were reduced to writing. The ship was sold at a lower price and the broker claimed his brokerage or in the alternative, a quantum meruit for alleged services in effecting the sale. Held that the sale having been effected at a lower price than that upon which alone the brokerage of 3½ p. c. was to be payable, the claim for commission on foot of the contract failed. The parties having reduced all the terms of their bargain to the shape of a commission note, there was no scope for the operation of the principle of quantum meruit. *HOWARD HOULDER AND PARTNERS, LTD., v. CRIMINAL TRIAL—Evidence—Power of Court to recall witnesses for prosecution after evidence and speech for defence are closed.

The power of the trial judge to recall witnesses stands on much the same footing as the power of allowing rebutting evidence to be called, that is to say, the Judge has a discretionary power with which a court of appeal cannot interfere unless it should appear that real injustice has resulted. A Judge in a criminal trial has power to recall prosecution witnesses for the purpose of rebutting the case set up by the prisoner in his evidence and of meeting a suggestion made by the counsel for the prisoner in his speech to the jury. *REX v. While rights of the Crown could not be taken away except by express statutory provision of the operation of clear and necessary implication, the implication may arise from the use of general — Negligence — Dangerous premises — Defective staircase—Injury to lodger of tenant—Liability of land-lord.

Defendants were the owners of a block of flats which they let to various tenants, the common staircase giving access to the flats remaining in the possession and under the control of the defendants. The stairs were made of cement reinforced by iron bars embedded in the cement and running along the length of the stair. Owing to the gradual wearing away of the cement, in some cases a bar became exposed and an irregular hollow or depression was scooped out behind it by the breaking away of little bits of cement. The plaintiff who was lodging with her sister in a flat of which her sister's husband was the tenant, while descending the stairs sustained injuries by catching her heel in a depression so formed. In a suit by plaintiff for damages against the defendant. Held (by the majority) that the only duty owed by the defendant to the plaintiff was not to expose her to a concealed danger or trap, that on the evidence, it was clear that the danger if any was obvious and could have been noticed by the plaintiff and that the action failed. *FAIRMAN v. — Marriage of Englishman with German wife in Germany—Decree of nullity in German law—Validity of, in England,

A domiciled Englishman married in Germany a woman with German domicile. Some time later she obtained a decree of nullity in the German Courts on the ground of mistake as to personal attributes. Later on, she re-married, and then the husband applied in England for divorce. Held the validity of a marriage solemnised in Germany according to that law is a matter properly cognisable by German tribunals and as the husband had appeared in the nullity proceedings, he was bound by the same. Such a decree is open to examination by an English Court to the extent it does not conform to the principles of natural justice, but subject to that, it is conclusive and binding. The validity of the marriage does not depend on the law of the husband's domiciles but on the lex loci contractus. Hence the fact that English law does not recognize mistakes as to personal attributes as a ground for nullity while German law does, does not enable an English tribunal to question the legality of the nullity order. MITFORD v. MITFORD AND VON KUHLMANN. (1923) P. 130.

EASEMENT—Light — Threatened obstruction—Power of court to award damages in lieu of injunction—Various kinds of dicta.

Held by Lord Sterndale M. R. and Warrington L. J. (Younger L. J. holding contra) In a motion for injunction by the plaintiff regarding a threatened obstruction to his ancient lights, even where the court finds that the interference would be small and could be compensated in damages, it has no jurisdiction to grant damages in lieu of injunction, as no legal injury had yet been committed S. 2 of Lord Cairn's Act, 1858, construed. Dicta in 43 Ch. D. 416 folld.

Per Lord Sterndale M. R.:—Dicta are of different kinds and of varying degrees of weight. Sometimes they may be called almost casual expressions of opinion upon a point which has been raised in the case and is not really present to the judge's mind. Such dicta, though entitled to the respect due to the speaker may fairly be disregarded by judges before whom the point has been raised and argued in a way to bring it under much fuller consideration. Such dicta are of a different kind; they are although not necessary for the decision of the case, deliberate expressions of opinion given after consideration upon a point clearly brought and argued before the court. It is open no doubt to other judges to give decisions contrary to such dicta, but much greater weight attaches to them than to the former class. SLACK v. LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. ESTOPPEL—Bill of Sale—Ownership of goods—Effect of declaration.

The doctrine of estoppel applies only to contracts inter partes and it is not competent to parties to estop themselves against an Act of Parliament.

In order to create an estoppel there must be a duty owing by the person estopped towards another person to speak or to act, which he has failed to perform and damage must thereby have resulted to that other person. No one can rely upon the estoppel except the person to whom the duty was owing and who has suffered the damage.

Where under an execution the sheriff seizes goods which were let out on hire purchase system, there is no duty on the owner to tell the Sheriff anything and if the goods are mistakenly sold, the owner is not in any way estopped. JONES BROTHERS (HOLLOWAY) LTD v. WOODHOUSE.

If a prisoner endeavours to establish a good character either by calling witnesses himself, or by cross examining the witnesses for the prosecution, the prosecution is at liberty, in most cases, to give proof of the prisoner's previous convictions. A prisoner cannot be said to be endeavouring to establish a good character merely because a witness, whom he called, voluntarily and probably against the prisoner's own desire, made a statement as to his good character and that does not entitle the prosecution to question the prisoner as to his previous convictions. *REX v. The port of London Authority was created by Statute in 1908. It took over the assets of three London Companies, and issued its own stock to the debenture holders' and share-holders of the said companies according to the value in the market of their former holdings. The port stock bore interest, was redeemable after a certain period, and so on. Held that the authority acquired its assets otherwise than by cash; that the stock issued was neither "unpaid purchase money" nor borrowed money nor (per Viscount Cave, L. —Supertax—Calculation of Deductions.

On a construction of the sections of the English Income Tax Act, 1918 and Finance Act 1920, held by the Court of Appeal that in assessing super-tax, a person is not entitled to claim a deduction in respect of those allowances which are specifically granted for income tax purposes. Hence neither the income tax payable by an assessee on his pension nor the whole of the tax paid under the Income tax Act, 1918 could be deducted for the purpose of calculating the super-tax. *DAVIS v. ———Forfeiture—Covenants not to assign or underlet without permission of lessor—Under lease subject to same conditions—Breach—Duty of lessee—Waiver.

The suit premises were let to the defendant for a term of years for carrying on a particular business, and defendant also covenanted not to assign or sub-let without the consent of the lessor. There was the usual clause for re-entry. Some time later the lessee with the consent of the lessor sub let the premises to a third party to be used for a different purpose. The lessor then sold his interest in the reversion to the plaintiff, but meanwhile the sub-lessee without the knowledge or permission of either the lessor or the defendant leased out a portion of the premises to another to be used for an entirely new business. The defendant refused to take steps to remedy the breach, whereupon plaintiff commenced the action for possession. Held, (1) defendant had permitted or suffered a breach of a continuous nature after he came to know of it and there was nothing to prevent him from having recourse to legal proceedings; (2) there was no waiver of the covenants either by the receipt of any rent (as the breach was continuous) or by purchasing the reversion subject to the lease in the absence of any proof that plaintiff was actually aware at the time of his purchase of the last breach by the sub-lessee; (3) that plaintiff was therefore entitled to enforce the right of re-entry. *ATKIN v. sub-lease was granted with an additional covenant that the sub-lessee should not sub-let without the consent of both the original lessor and lessee and that the latter should not object if the former did not. The sub lessee then obtained the permission of the original lessor for sub-lease and applied to the lessee for permission without disclosing to him the full details of the proposed transaction. He withheld permission, but in spite of it the arrangements were carried through. In a suit based on breach of covenant, held the lessee was entitled to exercise his right of forfeiture and to re-enter.

If in such a case, the sub lessee pleads waiver such as by receipt of rent he must establish that his lessor did so with knowledge of all the relevant facts. FULLER'S THEATRE AND VAUDEVILLE COMPANY, LTD. v. ROFE.

———Lease—Agreement that lessor purchase by valuation the buildings erected by the lessee, etc such valuation to be fixed by arbitration if parties fail to agree—Covenant by lessee not to transfer the premises without lessor's consent in writing—Breach of the covenant—Failure to proceed to arbitration—Lessee's right to sue.

The lease was for 10 years and in case there was no renewal the lessor bound himself to the purchase "by valuing the buildings erected by the said lessee and also the growing crops, stock and implements". If the parties could not agree on the valuation, the matter was to be referred to arbitration. The lessee bound himself not to transfer the premises demised without the consent in writing of the lessor. Without such consent, however, the lessee sublet the estate to two persons, for his whole terms of 10 years, the leases to them containing precisely the same covenants as his lease, with a difference only in the rent payable.

that a sub-lease for the entire term of the sub-lessor (the original lessee) amounted to an assignment or transfer (Beardman v. Wilson, L. R. 4 C. P. 57); that the contract did not require the lessee personally to put up the buildings, and, as the lessee was liable to pay for them to the sub-lessees he had sufficient interest to maintain the suit against the lessor, although he had parted with the entire interest in the term, but that the lessee had no right to sue for the value of the buildings, until the valuation had been fixed by arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the lease.

While by the common law parties could not contract validly to oust the Courts of their jurisdiction, they could contract that no right of action

—Lease—Covenant not to assign or underlet or to part with possession of the tenement without the lessor's consent—Subletting of portion with consent—Subsequent letting of the remainder without lessor's consent—Breach of covenant—Forfeiture.

Where the tenant has covenanted not to part with the possession of the premises without the lessor's consent, it is a breach of the covenant to part with the possession of the whole without such consent, though previously possession had been parted with of a portion with consent.

The case might have been different if the tenant had retained possession of some part of the premises, on the principle that if there be a covenant not to assign or underlet the premises, it is not a breach to assign or sublet part of the premises. Chatterton v. Terrell.

Where a lease of houses then new for a term of 95 years contained terms that the tenant do "well and sufficiently repair" etc. the buildings and deliver them up to the lessor at the end of the term in such repair, held that the terms would be satisfied if the houses were in such repair as, having regard to the age, character, and locality of the houses, would make it then reasonably fit for the occupation of tenants of the class who would be likely to take them; and damages for breach of the covenant should be assessed accordingly.

An agreement to lease contained a clause that the tenant should have an option to purchase the freehold of a lease of 97 years. There was no period fixed for the exercise of the option nor was a lease executed. Held, such an option unlimited in time exists so long as the relationship of landlord and tenant continues. The option to purchase the freehold is however inoperative and invalid because of the rule against perpetuities, but the right to call for a removal of the lease is outside the rule and may be exercised. *Rider v. —Costs—Defendant paying amount into Court—Effect.

In an action for damages for infringement of copyright and for an injunction, even where the defendant pays into court a sum of money which the Court holds to be sufficient damages, the plaintiff would be entitled to his costs, as he is entitled to have his rights pronounced upon. This was the original rule of English practice, but though it has been modified now, still where the Court thinks it proper that the plaintiff, instead of at once taking the money out of court, should have a determination of the question of liability, it has a discretion to say the plaintiff should have his costs, *PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT—Larceny by trick—What is—Sale without authority—Liability of purchaser.

Simple larceny is the felonious taking of goods belonging to another person against his will and without his consent. In the case of larceny by trick the person who has lost goods has given an apparent consent to possession being taken but the consent has been obtained fraudulently by a trick.

Where a person pretending to be an agent for the purchase of a car obtains possession of it and then sells it to another, he is guilty of larceny by a trick and the purchaser is bound to return the car or its value unless they have a valid statutory defence under the sale of goods Act or Factors Act. It is on the purchaser to prove that he purchased in good faith and without notice of the agent's want of authority. There can be no estoppel on the part of the owner unless he is more than merely negligent and has disregarded all obligations towards the buyer. HEAP v. MOTORISTS' ADVISORY AGENCY, LTD. (1923) 1 K. —Right of agent to be indemnified—Basis of right.

Prima facie if an agent carries on a business for a principal he is entitled to a full indemnity. Where for a monthly remuneration plaintiff carried on a business for the defendants who formed a limited Company and in the course of the same he had to pay Income tax and Supertax he is entitled to be indemnified, though it may be that if the business were run by the defendants themselves, the liability to pay Supertax might not have arisen. This right to reimbursement also arises because plaintiff is in effect a trustee. ADAMS v. MORGAN AND COMPANY LTD. (1923) 2 K. B. 204.

Where, in consequence of a third person inducing an agent to commit breach of the duty he owed to his principal, the principal became liable to pay damages to others, held, that the principal might recover from the third party.

Interference directed to bringing about a violation of legal right is a cause of action and it is a violation of legal right to interfere with contractual relations recognized by law if there be no sufficient justification for the interferences. It is an illustration of this principle when the interference is directed to inducing an agent to act in contravention of his duty by pleading his principal's credit. *Lumley v. SALE OF GOODS—Arbitration clause—Effect of Damages Latent defect.

Where one of the terms of a contract for the sale of goods was that all disputes arising out of it were to be referred to arbitration within a certain time, and on a dispute arising the matter was referred to an arbitration but out of time as a result of which he declined jurisdiction and then the matter was sought to be agitated in the Civil Courts. Held, the presence of an arbitration clause in the contract is not in itself a bar to an action or a condition precedent to a right of action. Where the award does not deal with the claim, but merely with the jurisdiction of the arbitrator, it is no answer to the claim.

The expression "latent defect" is only applicable to such a defect as is not discoverable by the exercise of reasonable care. Reasonable examination in the case of goods is not confined to examination by the life and does not exclude analysis or microscopic examination.

Where it was within the contemplation of the parties that goods would pass through a string of sellers and purchasers, it cannot be said that damages are too remote, if the vendee seeks to include therein what he has had to pay as damages to his vendees. *FINNOCK BROTHERS v. Contract—Variation of terms by parol agreement—Time and place of delivery—Repudiation—Right to damages

Where a contract for the sale of goods provides for delivery in instalments at a particular place a subsequent parol agreement extending the time for and altering the place of delivery does not operate as an implied rescission of the original contract, in the absence of any intention to rescind. SOLICITOR AND CLIENT—Confidential relationship—Purchase of an option by the solicitor from the client—Failure to disclose material information—Voidability.

Although the relationship of solicitor and client in a strict sense has discontinued, the same principle applies so long as the confidence, naturally arising from such a relationship, is proved or may be presumed to continue, and even if the solicitor is no longer retained or acting, his duty, in the contemplation of a court of equity may still be such as to throw upon him the onus of upholding the validity of a purchase or lease from his clients, and in considering whether this onus lies upon him the test appears to be the proper answer to the question, whether in the particular transaction he owes his former client any duty in the contemplation of a Court of equity.

The principle has long been established that, in the absence of competent independent advice a transaction between persons in the relationship of solicitor and client, or in a confidential relationship of similar character, cannot be upheld, unless the person claiming to enforce the contract can prove, affirmatively, that the person standing in such a confidential position has disclosed, without reservation, all the information in his possession, and can further show that the transaction was itself, a fair one, having regard to all the circumstances. This principle is one of wide application, and must not be regarded as a technical rule of English law.

Their lordships held that in this case the solicitor had failed to make the exact disclosure of the facts essential to enable the client to determine whether the offer made by the solicitor to her was a fair one. The question is not one of honesty, but of a full disclosure of all the relevant facts and of a fair price. Holding, further, that the client had no competent independent advice their Lordships declared the transaction unenforceable, and that it was not subsequently ratified, even if such ratification be possible.

Statute "Statute" means an Act of a Legislature having legislative authority within the Province. The grammatical and the ordinary sense of the words in statutes is to be adhered to unless they would lead to absurdity, repugnancy or inconsistency with the rest of the instrument.

The power given to Court by an Alberta Statute to relieve from penalties is applicable only to such contractual penalties, and for forfeitures as those as to which the Court of Chancery had exercised jurisdiction REX v. CANADIAN N. RY. Co. (1923) A. C. 714 P. C.

TORT—Damages—Action in one country or province—Injury sustained in another.

An action will not lie in one country or province for a wrong committed in another unless two conditions are fulfilled. First, the wrong must be of such a character that it would have been actionable if committed in the country of the forum; and, secondly, it must not have been justifiable by the law of the Country where it was done. The expression "justifiable" has reference to legal justification, and an act or neglect which is neither actionable nor punishable cannot be said to be otherwise than justifiable within the meaning of the rule. WALPORE v. CANADIAN NORTHERN RY. Co. (1923) A. C. 113.

——— Negligence—Proof of—Duty of owner to invitee or licensee

A boilermaker working on a dense foggy evening left the ship for the latrine which was situated on a piece of ground surrounded on three sides by water. A line of posts and chains existed on the three sides, but the chains used to be let down whenever access to the quay was required but replaced as early as possible. On that day the chain was down, and the boiler-maker slipped down and was drowned. In an action by his widow for damages under the Fatal Accidents Act. Held by the majority of the House of Lords the plaintiff had failed to prove negligence on the part of the Harbour Board or that it was the cause of death and that the Board did not owe any duty to keep the chains in position and hence no action lay. Case law reviewed.

Per Viscount Cave L. C. When a person is invited or licensed to pass by a particular way and the owner without warning to him does something which makes it dangerous for him to use that way liability may no doubt be incurred. But to say that a landowner who permits an element of danger to exist in a place to which he neither invites nor expects a person to go thereby sets a trap for him is not correct.

Per Lords Shaw and Buckmaster.—Leaving the fencing open is a danger of a serious kind and a negligent omission for which the Board is responsible. The workmen were entitled to consider the plot as fenced and the removal of the claims constituted a trap. MERY DOCKS AND HARBOUR BOARD v. PROCTER. (1923) e. c. 253.

Where an unincorporated body like the Board of Trade is sued; there is no rule which dispenses with personal service on the members. Where the writ is served on the Permanent Secretary it is not good in law.

Where the claim is stated to be one arising out of contract, no action will lie against a department of the Crown, the proper proceeding being a Petition of Right.

Where the action is brought to recover back money extorted colore officii, the action lies against the person who actually extorted money.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER—Deposit—Recovery of—Test—Default of purchaser in proceeding.

The agreement between the parties was that on a proper contract being prepared by the vendor's solicitors the property was to be purchased. A certain sum was paid as deposit and in part payment of the purchase money. A proper contract was prepared by the vendor's solicitors and approved by the vendee's solicitors but still the vendees refused to proceed further and claimed a return of the deposit amount. Held they were not entitled to do so.

Where a deposit is paid before there is any firm contract the payer can recover it if the payee insists on something unreasonable in carrying out the transaction. If on the other hand the payee does not insist on unreasonable terms, and the payer when offered all he can reasonably ask to refuse without just cause to proceed, he cannot recover the deposit. *CHILLINGWORTH v. WILL—Bequest Gift of residuary estate Cypres doctrine.

A gift of the residuary estate of a testatrix for the purpose of providing a stained glass window in memory of herself and certain members of her family is a good charitable bequest. The question whether a gift is or may be operative for the public benefit is one that is to be answered by the Court on the evidence before it. ## WILL.

—Construction—Bequest to "Domestic servants"—Chauffer—Coachman—Gardener—if entitled to take.

The testator, Sir John Jackson, left a will giving numerous legacies, including some to his business employees and some to his "domestic servants" in amounts varying with the wages and the length of service of each. The chauffer and the coachman of the testator, followed the testator from his town residence to country residence and back and lived in rooms over the garage, and the stables respectively, and the gardener lived in a cottage provided for him at the country residence. Held, that these three were the "domestic servants" in contradistinction to the business employees of the testator, and were accordingly entitled to the legacies.

What a testator means by the use of certain words is a question to be decided on the construction of the will in each case.

Ogle v Morgan (1852) 1 D. M. & G. 359 does not lay down as a fixed principle that an out-door servant, not living under the master's roof, is excluded from coming under the expression "domestic servant" In re SIR JOHN JACKSON : JACKSON v. HAMILTON (1923) 2 Ch. 365, C. A.

—Construction—Bequest of "money" Securities and investments.

The word "money" when used in a will means money in its strict sense unless there is a context which is sufficient to show that the testator used it in a more extended sense "Money" in the strict sense means money actually, in hand as cash, or at a bank on drawing account. But a comparatively slight context one way or the other may either restrict the term "money" within comparatively narrow limits or may assist it so as clearly to include the whole personal estate or the residue of the personal estate. When a will is not drawn by a skilled lawyer, the words used may be looked at less strictly than in a case where it is so drawn. If there be a context enlarging the meaning of the word "money" it may enlarge it to the extent of including the whole of the personal estate or the residue of the personal estate, and it may enlarge it to any point between ready cash only and the whole of the personal estate. *In re TAYLOR : TAYLOR v. She died before the testator, an event which was not provided for. Held a gift over to the sons could not be implied and it must be dealt with as on intestacy. Held also, that in construing such a will couched in English terms of legal art regard should not be had to Chinese usages apart from the terms of the instrument CHIA KHWEN ENG v. CHIA POH CHOON AND OTHERS. (1923) A. C. 424.

—Construction—Codicil—Gift to children of brothers and sisters—Remoteness.

WILL.

A testator in his will provided for the income to be given to his wife for life and after her death to the children of his brothers and sisters. By a codicil, he provided after her death his trustees should hold it in trust for the children of his brother and sisters who should be living at her death or born at any time before any one of such children attained majority. At the time of his death, the testator's parents who were about 65 years old were still alive. Held by the majority of the Court of Appeal, the gift was void for remoteness.

The gift in the codicil revoked that in the will and if the former failed for any reason, intestacy would follow. IN RE BURNYEAT : BURNYEAT v. WARD (1923) 2 Ch. 52.

—Construction—Gift for "Charitable or public institution in Wales"—Effect of.

Where a testator after providing for certain annuities, directed the trustees "to apply the same for the benefit of one or more charitable or public institutions in Wales as they deem fit, held the object of the resulting trust was so extraordinarily wide and indefinite as to amount to a delegation of testamentary capacity and hence is void for uncertainty. In re DAVIS : THOMAS v. DAVIS. (1923) 1 Ch. 225.

—Devise of Real Estate and chattels real—Subsequent disposition of Real Estate by deed—Effect.

Where by a testamentary disposition, there was a devise of Real Estate and of some chattels in such a way that the bequest of the latter was of the nature of an accessory gift to be enjoyed with the principal gift relating to the Real Estate, yet if by a subsequent voluntary act of the testator, not being testamentary, the principal gift is revoked to bequest of the chattels will still stand and not be revoked. In re WHITEBURN : WHITEBURN v. CHANTIC. (1923) 1 Ch. 332.

—Bequest of Residue—Four classes of objects—One class indefinite charitable objects—Two classes—Named charities—One class indefinite charitable and noncharitable objects at the choice of executors—Validity—Power to executors to distribute the residue among the four classes—Validity—What the Court should do.

The testator disposed of his residuary estate among 4 classes of objects, of which (a) was indefinite charitable objects, (b) and (c) were named (definite) charities, and (d) was such other charities and institutions "as my executors in their absolute discretion shall think fit." And he directed the division of the residue among the 4 classes in "such shares and proportions" as his trustees (executors) should determine.

Held—The bequest to class (a) was good although it contemplated aid to persons of some means : Trustees of the Mary Clark Home v Anderson [1904] 2 K. B. 645, 655; Attorney-General v. Wilkinson (1839) 1 Beav. 370 In re Gordon [1904] 1 Ch. 662, 668, In re Estlin, 89 L. T. 88 followed.

The bequest to class (d) was void as the executors might in their discretion select the use of legacy for "institutions" which might p charitable, and hence the legacy was to indefinite charitable and non-charitable objects

The gift to class (d) being void the power given to the executors to distribute the residue among the 4 classes was also void.

The effect of the residuary bequest was to vest the residue in the 4 classes in equal shares until the executors should exercise the power. See Lambert v. Thwaits (1866) L. R. 2 Eq. 151, 155.

In this case the power being invalid, the residue remained so vested.

As class (d) could not have its  $\frac{1}{4}$  share of the residue, such share went to the next of Kin (as on intestacy).

Workmen injured by accident arising out of and in the course of employment are entitled to compensation. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT (1906) Claims if can be settled by paying lump sum—Agreement for redemption of weekly payment,

The scheme of the Workmen's Compensation Act is that a workman who is suffering from total or partial incapacity caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of the employment shall receive a weekly sum, may be redeemed by agreement with the employer by payment of a lump sum, subject to the approval of Court.

Where in a case arising under the Act, a lump sum was purported to be fixed between the parties, free from any examination by the Court Held by the majority of the House of Lords (Lord Carson dissenting) that such an agreement was in contravention of the Act and as such void. The only redemption which the Act allows is that of a weekly payment in which case the adequacy of consideration has to be judicially accepted. Prior cases cited and overruled. RUSSELL v. RUDD.
